Ex-Employe Halts Lie Test To Confess Slaying Two

William A. Tyler, 18, Tells How He Killed Watchmen on Good Friday Morning

By Benjamin Bradlee and Peter Clapper
Post Reporters

William A. Tyler, jr., 6 feet tall and 190 pounds of savagery, last night confessed to the brutal Good Friday murder of two Lansburgh Department Store watchmen.

Tyler signed a complete confession shortly before 6 p. m., minutes after he had voluntarily subjected himself to a lie detector test, police said.

Tyler was questioned more than four hours yesterday without avail.

But the operator of the lie detector had asked Tyler less than a dozen of many prepared questions when the 18-year-old former Lansburgh and Bro. employe took off the straps and said he was ready to make a statement.

Announced by Murray

Assistant Chief of Detectives Robert V. Murray announced Tyler admitted stabbing Guards John Carpenter, 66, and Oliver R. Hess, 57, in the store early on Good Friday, April 7.

Tyler said he and an associate "cased" the store thoroughly while it was open Thursday, April 6, Murray reported, but Tyler later entered the store alone.

The confessed murderer said he climbed a pulley used for lowering garbage cans and entered through an unlocked window in the store's tea shop on the second floor. He intended to rob the cashier tills, Murray said.

Reading from Tyler's statement, Murray gave this account of the murders:

"He went from the tea room directly to the sixth floor, after he had armed himself with an 8-inch boning knife. He was unarmed when he entered.

Heard Elevator Rising

"While ransacking through drawers and stockrooms on the sixth floor, he was surprised by the sound of the approaching elevator carrying Hess.

"Tyler stabbed Hess to death before he had a chance to leave the elevator. He then dragged Hess' body from the elevator, but when he tried to operate the elevator himself he blew a fuse by pushing the starting lever in the wrong direction.

"Tyler walked down to the first floor, and there found Carpenter near the elevator. He attacked the elderly guard, tied and gagged him, and dragged him to the men's room, but did not stab him to death at that time.

"Tyler then returned to the mezzanine floor to continue his ransacking. He was interrupted by Carpenter's cries for help. Rush-

Woman Rescued From Patuxent By State Official

Solomons, Md., May 6—(AP).—A 59-year-old Maryland State official plunged into the chilly harbor last night to rescue a sailor's wife from drowning.

Dr. Reginald V. Truitt, director of the State Department of Research and Education, was walking near the harbor wall when he heard a woman's screams. He stripped off his coat and one shoe, dived in, and guided by the dim light of a nearby yacht swam out more than 20 yards to the woman. He grasped her hair and pulled her back to shore.

She was identified as Mrs. C. A. Elliott, wife of a boatswain's mate.

Jet Crashes, Burns at Andrews . . .

PILOT UNHURT—An American F-84 Thunderjet, piloted by Lieut. Forrest G. Thompson, couldn't get into the air in a take-off at Andrews Air Base yesterday, careened down the runway at 100 miles per hour and then crashed into the wooded area. Thompson was unhurt

Canadian Plane Covers 365-Mile Run For Speed Record

A new Canadian twin jet fighter plane roared into Andrews Air Base at 6:57 p. m. yesterday just 48 minutes after leaving Toronto, Canada, 365 air miles away.

The pilot, W. A. Waterton, Canadian-born veteran of the RAF, apologized to Andrews base officials for "being so late" in the run which averaged 450 miles an hour.

"It should have taken us only 35 minutes," he said, "but we got off our course."

Air Force officials said the time probably was a world's record for the Toronto-Washington flight. As far as they knew, there had never been a speed run on that course before.

Most commercial planes on non-stop flights take about three hours.

The jet plane, newest Canadian contribution to North American air power, was brought here for a demonstration before top American defense officials Tuesday.

Navigator Michael Cooper-Slipper said "we got miles off our course" because of overcast.

The plane, the Avro CF-100, built by the A. V. Roe Co., of Toronto, is the first modern fighter plane to be designed and constructed entirely in Canada.

Less than an hour before its arrival, an American F-84 Thunderjet suffered a power failure as it attempted to take the air from the Andrews Base runway.

The pilot, Lieut. Forrest G. Thompson, couldn't get it into the air. The jet careened down the runway at 100 miles an hour and hurtled into a wooded area about 500 feet off the runway's end.

Thompson leaped from the plane as it came to a halt. He had run about 100 feet when the craft burst into flame.

Thompson, who lives at 5712 N. 10th st., Arlington, is a member of the 121st Fighter Squadron of the District Air National Guard, known as the "White House" squadron. He was unhurt.

Two other F-84 Thunderjets taking off at the same time as Thompson made it successfully.

White House Will Issue Order To Limit Leave Accumulation

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The White House will issue an order to prevent large accumulations of annual leave by Uncle Sam's 1,300,000 classified and per diem employes, The Washington Post learned last night.

In a directive to agency heads, these principal points will be emphasized:

1. That each regular employe be required to take a minimum annual vacation of "about three weeks," or 15 of the 26 days he earns annually.

2. That an employe be forced to take all leave in excess of 60 days "within a reasonable time."

3. That hereafter, no employe be allowed to carry over more than 60 days of accumulated leave at the end of the year except in unusual cases.

The order is being drafted jointly by the White House, the Budget Bureau, and the Civil Service Commission. It will be aimed primarily at reducing the Government's leave liability, which is estimated at about a billion dollars.

The effective date of the order is expected to be July 1, the start of the 1951 fiscal year. A June 1 date also has been considered.

The Administration plan to "police" leave is revealed at a time when the Government's leave policies are under heavy attack from Capitol Hill. This criticism from Congress undoubtedly had some influence on the Administration, but a top official commented:

"We had the changes in mind for some time. It was merely a question of drafting an effective plan to carry them out."

Another official had this to say: "The primary purpose of the liberal annual leave system is to give

First Republican In 24 Years Wins Texas House Seat

Amarillo, Tex., May 6 (AP).—Panhandle voters today elected Texas' first Republican Congressman in 24 years—Ben H. Guill, of Pampa.

Returns from all of the 28 counties in the Eighteenth Congressional District, with 7 percent complete, gave Guill nearly 2000 votes more than his nearest opponent, a woman who left a Government job in Washington to run.

Guill had 8118 votes to 6220 votes for Mrs. Altavene Clark, of Amarillo. Mrs. Clark formerly was secretary to Representative Eugene Worley, whose resignation was the reason for the special election.

Nine other Democrats opposed Guill. J. Blake Timmons, Texas legislator from Amarillo, had 5,674 votes. Walter Rogers, Pampa lawyer, was fourth witht 4,966.

5 Million Less Than Asked

House Approves 8½ Billion In Independent Offices Funds

The House yesterday tentatively approved legislation carrying $8,534,000,000 in funds to run the independent offices of the Government in the 1951 fiscal year starting July 1.

This is approximately what the House Appropriations Committee had recommended. But it was about five million dollars less than President Truman proposed.

The Veterans' Administration gets the largest chunk of the independent offices' money—$5,800,000,000. The remainder goes to such agencies as the Atomic Energy Commission, Maritime Commission, Tennessee Valley Authority, Interstate Commerce Commission, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Civil Service Commission, Federal Communications Commission and General Services Administration.

Approval of the independent offices section of the 290 million dollars appropriation bill brought the House to the halfway point in its consideration of next year's money measure.

Previously the House had tentatively approved funds for the various executive departments. All sections are subject to final approval when the House votes on the whole bill.

Next week it will take up the 14 billion dollars for the military establishment and the 632 million dollars for the Army's flood control and rivers and harbors work.

Lightning Kills Howard Co-ed During Picnic

Temperature Reaches 93, Setting Record For Date in D. C.

A thunderbolt crashing into a gay Rock Creek picnic party yesterday killed an 18-year-old Howard University coed and injured two other girls.

The bolt, striking at about 2:20 p. m., a few minutes before the temperature reached a record 93 degrees, hurled the victim, Barbara Mills, to the ground.

The blast drove her shoes from her feet to a distance of several yards. She was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital less than an hour later.

Injured at the same time were two other girls who with Miss Mills were standing under a tree when the bolt struck. They are Barbara Fisher, 18, of Dayton, Ohio, and Dorothy Gaffin, 18, of Schenectady, N. Y.

All three were rushed to Emergency Hospital in the ambulance of Rescue Squad No. 2.

Miss Fisher and Miss Gaffin were treated for electric shock and released.

Miss Mills, a native of Hendersonville, N. C., lived at Crandall Hall, girls' dormitory at Howard University. Miss Gaffin also resided at Crandall Hall while Miss Fisher lived at Truth Hall.

The girls were part of a group of about 100 men and women who attended the picnic, sponsored by

Holy Year Pilgrims Find Shipboard Life a Bit Hectic

Dramamine seasick pills won a fight over rough Atlantic seas for most of the Holy Year pilgrims of the Washington Archdiocese crossing on the S. S. DeGrasse.

The aid of the drug in bolstering the spirit of the pilgrims, who are led by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, is described today by Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, hostess for the Washington Archdiocesan Pilgrimage to Rome.

Miss Bowers is writing weekly letters on the pilgrimage, which will be published by The Washington Post as they are received. The first one follows:

Aboard S. S. DeGrasse,
April 30.

Dear Reader:

We're on our way to Rome! The implication behind those six little words is very thrilling. After months of careful preparation, we boarded the S. S. DeGrasse on a bright sunny Saturday morning and were immediately surrounded with the wildest babble and confusion that you could ever imagine. All the ship's attendants were greeting you and directing you entirely in French. Monsignor Spence, director of the tour, was running around like a mother hen with her brood of chicks.

Many friends came to wish us bon voyage and some of them were unable to board the ship, it was so crowded. Members of the Catholic Daughters of America and the Curley Club were in the melee trying to find their pilgrim friends and wish them a safe journey.

We were escorted to our cabin, Alma Happ, Helen Fitzpatrick and I, by a little cabin boy who looked like Philip Morris' Johnny in his red uniform and brass buttons.

Our three-berth cabin was an exciting sight to behold with flowers, gifts, telegrams and cards.

In the midst of all these strange happenings, we did not forget to start taking dramamine, our seasick pills. As we each swallowed one, we breathed a prayer that it would do all that we had been told it would do. Deo Gratias—it did! No mal de mer—we're hearty old salts!

Up on deck we watched the

'Deceit' Laid To Truman By McCarthy

Calls Files Phony; Sen. Myers Says Accuser Fails to Offer Any Evidence

By The Associated Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy last night accused the Truman Administration of "deceit and dishonesty" in dealing with his charges of Communists in Government.

McCarthy was accused in turn of failing to offer "any evidence whatsoever" about wholesale disloyalty.

The Wisconsin Senator, speaking at Chicago, assailed President Truman's action in making available to the investigators State Department loyalty files on 81 cases cited by McCarthy. He said these files were inadequate and "phoney".

Myers in Rebuttal

But Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania, deputy Democratic leader in the Senate, said in a speech at Honesdale, Pa., that McCarthy had failed to come through with anything but "new charges" when investigators tried to pin down his allegations about State Department employes.

Myers, who did not mention McCarthy by name, declared that the Government's employes "have been given a clean bill of health after thorough investigation" during the Government's four-year loyalty program which works "hand in glove" with the FBI.

"We can't afford," Myers said, "to lose our faith in the integrity of the Department of State at this critical point in world affairs."

As for the loyalty files released to the investigators, the Pennsylvania Democrat said the committee is studying them since it has "no evidence from those who have brought the charges."

McCarthy Seeks More Files

McCarthy asserted that to do a real job of investigating, "all of the files must be broken open," and he mentioned the files of the FBI, Civil Service Commission, Central Intelligence Agency, Army Intelligence, Navy Intelligence and the Secret Service.

He demanded "honest action" and declared again: "There are Communists on our Federal payroll."

He bitterly attacked Secretary of State Acheson again, saying "the days of dilettante diplomacy are running out on Mr. Acheson and his fancy comrades of the Kremlin."

The loyalty files referred to by the speakers were released to the inquiry after Mr. Truman was advised they were examined by previous congressional committees which had studied the cases. The President has steadfastly refused to release FBI files demanded by McCarthy on the theory that disclosure of them would damage the agency.

Colonial Beach Gambling Ship Anchors 1000 Feet Offshore

Colonial Beach, Va., May 6 (Spl.). —A 200-foot seagoing barge anchored offshore here today, ready to cater to the resort trade with slot machines, mixed drinks and dancing.

The green-and-white three-decker, labeled the "Pleasure Island," will provide a new wrinkle in this town's summer entertainment, according to tug operators who escorted her up the Potomac from Newport News.

Slot machines on piers just offshore are a familiar, if controversial, summertime fixture. Like hard liquor by the drink, they are illegal in Virginia.

But pier owners have leased the end of jetties to residents of Charles County, Md.—where both are legal—since Maryland has jurisdiction over the Potomac up to the low-water mark on the Virginia side.

Machines are already set up on three such piers, and a fourth will be ready for operation with beer and mixed drinks by next weekend, according to its owner.

The "Pleasure Island" will remain anchored about 1000 feet off shore from the middle of the milelong beach, opposite the Ambassador Hotel.

It was brought by tug from Newport News, but still needs some repairs. One source said it will be ready in two weeks. A Charles County slot machine distributor said he expects to deliver about 15 machines to the boat this week.

Present plans call for free transportation to and from shore by launch.

Frank Tims, vice president of the corporation owning the boat, appeared before the town council here last month with a bid to lease the city pier for docking the boat.

His offer of $1600 plus maintenance costs for the pier, estimated at $1500 a year, was turned down with two others after 350 citizens signed a petition protesting the council's resolution to lease the pier.

'To Strengthen Peace'

President Sees Acheson Off For Big Three Talks in London

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson took off at 2:10 p. m. yesterday for a series of diplomatic talks which President Truman predicted would "contribute to the peace of the world."

Before leaving for Paris and London in the President's personal airplane, The Independence, Acheson issued a formal statement saying the objective of the meetings was "to strengthen peace by strengthening the common free heritage of the parties and their ability to defend it." He warned that the non-Communist world "will face increasingly crucial tests in the years immediately ahead."

"What we seek at London," he declared, "is to accelerate mobilization of the moral and material strength of the free world. The free world contains vast untapped moral and material resources. We must develop those reserves to the best of our ability. We should be doing so even if international communism did not exist. As things are we must do so with utmost vigor."

The Acheson party will land first at Paris for meetings of the 12 foreign ministers constituting the North Atlantic Treaty Council. Later conferences with British Prime Minister Ernest Bevin and French Premier Robert Schuman at Lon-

Virginian Traps German Girl in Espionage Effort

Nuernberg, Germany, May 6 (AP). Authorities today told how a pretty German girl attempted to obtain American military secrets to sell to the Russians.

The girl, Wanda Wollner, 22, was sentenced this week to 18 months in jail by an American court on an espionage charge. She was trapped by Air Force Sergt. Reid A. Prebbye of Lynchburg, Va., from whom she tried to obtain a map of the U. S. Army training ground at Grafenwoehr.

American military officials said they were convinced the girl was not employed by the Russians but hoped to "make a few hundred marks for herself."

1951 Programs Delayed by Lag In CCC Money

Crop Support Plans Held Up by $2 Billion Bill on Senate Snag

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Commodity Credit Corporation is running out of funds with which to continue the Government farm price support program.

For several months the Senate has been dragging its feet on a measure to grant CCC an additional two billion dollars to carry on the program next year. CCC has enough left from the original 4750 million dollars to continue for the remainder of this crop year, which ends June 30.

One result of the Senate's delay in voting more funds has been to hold up announcement of next year's programs, even those for the so-called "basic" commodities for which price supports are "mandatory." Price support officials are wondering what would happen to the "mandatory" supports if CCC ran out of funds.

Normally the programs for such crops as wheat, oats, rye, barley, grain sorghums, soybeans and hogs would have been announced by now. It has been a sort of unwritten law that the farmers be told before planting time what they can expect in Government supports when the crop is harvested. But CCC hasn't dared to do that this year.

There are two reasons why Congress hasn't been bombarded by irate farmers. The first is the improved prices that farm products are bringing in the Nation's markets. The second is the bitter row among farm organizations that is tearing the once

Middleground Wins the Derby; Nats Lose 3d Straight Game

KING RANCH'S MIDDLEGROUND, an 8-1 shot, outlasted a stretch bid by the Virginia-owned Hill Prince to win the Kentucky Derby yesterday.

HILL PRINCE, boxed in on the backstretch, finished second, 1½ lengths behind the son of Bold Venture, another Kentucky Derby winner. Mr. Trouble was third, with Your Host a floundering ninth.

RIDDEN BY APPRENTICE Jockey Willie Boland, Middleground returned $17.80, $5.40 and $3.80 across the board. Hill Prince paid $3.80 for second and $3.20 for third. Mr. Trouble paid $3.60.

MIDDLEGROUND COVERED the mile-and-a-quarter Derby distance in 2:01 3/5, one fifth of a second off the track record set when Whirlaway won the Derby in 1941.

IN OTHER TOP SPORTS events yesterday, the Nats suffered their third straight defeat—their longest losing streak of the new season—as Detroit routed Ray Scarborough for an 8-6 victory.

Justice Department Calls for Information On 'Big Shots'; Sam Beard Is Included

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

(Copyright, 1950, by The Washington Post)

The Justice Department has ordered the 93 United States attorneys all over the Nation to collect all available information on the country's big-shot racketeers, gamblers and other underworld figures.

A list of some 150 names, including that of Frank Costello, often called "King of the Underworld," has been sent the attorneys with orders to send the facts back to Washington by this coming Wednesday.

The only Washington area name on the list was that of Sam Beard, self-styled kingpin of District gambling and a former convict.

Signed by McInerney

The unannounced move by the Justice Department came only 10 days after Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, in testifying on an anti-gambling bill, had stated he was "not in a position to offer primary source material" because "for the past 10 years at least my department has not been regarded as having any substantial investigative function in this field."

The letter asking the United States attorneys to get the facts was signed by James M. McInerney, Assistant Attorney General, who heads the Justice Department's Criminal Division.

He said the information was being "correlated" because of the Nation-wide attention now being given to the underworld in Congress and elsewhere. The Senate last week authorized a special five-man committee to investigate crime syndicates, if such there are, and the "corrupting influences" of interstate crime on local politics.

"Plenty of Statutes"

McInerney told The Washington Post yesterday, in confirming the order to the United States attorneys, that "I haven't thought about" turning the data over to the Senate committee, due to be headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

He said the department's idea was "to collect information as to who are the outstanding people" in the gambling and rackets field.

Although there are no Federal laws against gambling (other than the antilottery and some minor statutes), the Government has used the income-tax law to catch some gambling racketeers. Asked if the "information" now being collected

Boy Scout Drowns In Potomac; Dived In on 5-Cent Bet

A 14-year-old Boy Scout drowned yesterday after betting 5 cents with a brother Scout that he would jump in the Potomac River.

Louis Calhoun, 817 22d st. nw., was pronounced dead at 3:30 p. m. in Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, after two hours of efforts to revive him.

The tragedy occurred opposite the Naval Testing Station and Lock 12 of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, in Cabin John, Md., where Troop 506 had gone on a hike.

After an unidentified Scout made the bet with him, Louis stripped to his shorts and did a jackknife off a 3-foot rock into a small pool of water. He struck his brow on a rock and when he came up, other Scouts put out a stick for him to grab. But young Calhoun fell back into the water and disappeared.

Gibson Semmes of 3726 Connecticut ave. nw., a patent attorney, was summoned from nearby. He dived in and pulled the boy out.

GOP Fires Challenge As Truman Sets Out

First Yearbook Copy to Queen

DIANE LANDRE DIETRICH, 21, beauty queen of the George Washington University's 1950 Cherry Tree, received the first copy of the yearbook last night during the celebrity dance arranged by the Newman Club at the Wardman Park Hotel. Miss Dietrich, a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority, lives at 921 26th st. south, Arlington, Va.

By The Associated Press

Republicans hurled 10 broadside charges at the Truman Administration yesterday and challenged the President to answer them on his 16-State campaign tour, which he begins today.

GOP leaders already have laid plans to make a series of replies to the Truman speeches. They got in the first word with a statement accusing him of resisting attempts to "drive Communists from his Administration."

The statement came from National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson, Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee, and Representative Leonard W. Hall of New York, chairman of the House Campaign Committee.

Action Is Derided

It derided the President's official opening of the national congressional campaign as a "quarter-million-dollar cross-country junket" by "our commuting President."

Mr. Truman's trip, the first of a series aiming at a Democratic victory next November, was described by the Republicans as a campaign for socialism. They declared that President Wilson in 1918 and President Roosevelt in 1938 tried to elect a Congress and lost seats to the Republicans.

The Truman trip begins here at 4:20 p. m. today and will carry him to the West Coast and back, with nine major speeches and 50 or more platform appearances. He added the ninth formal talk to his schedule yesterday—a 15-minute speech at about 4:30 p. m. (MST) Tuesday at Cheyenne, Wyo. The topic will be Government aid to small business.

He will return Tuesday, May 16, the day after a party rally at Chicago that will feature all the Democratic bigwigs who can get there.

The Chicago speech will be answered by Senator Taft of Ohio.

Other Charges Added

The GOP statement added the following charges, in the form of questions, that it said were "gravely troubling" American voters, and dared the President to answer them:

Mr. Truman ordered Democrat leaders in Congress "to block the sensible amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act, as favored by Republicans, when he couldn't find the votes" for repeal.

He refuses the people further income tax cuts although "the ordinary workman must labor one day a week to pay his Federal taxes."

The record shows "a reckless nine-billion-dollar increase in the cost (of Government) since 1948 of which six billion dollars had nothing to do with national defense, veterans' benefits or European financial aid."

Although "farm prices have fallen sharply since 1948, when we had a Republican Congress," the only Truman solution is the Brannan Plan, "under which prices would drop still further, and farmers would be subjected to bureaucratic regimentation."

"Mr. Truman's Democrat leaders in the Senate (have) resisted the Republican demand for an honest, searching investigation into Nationwide racketeering and crime syndicates, and their link with politics as suggested by the Binaggio murder in Kansas City."

The President demands "socialized medicine."

those behind the Iron Curtain, "have been permitted to dump surplus products (here), throwing American workmen out of jobs, and depressing farm prices."

Mr. Truman insists on a program of socialism although three Congresses have rejected it.

day whether to vote to cite the two men who defied a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee by refusing to answer a number of questions.

Edward P. Morgan, attorney for the five-man panel studying McCarthy's charges, proposed that the whole Foreign Relations Committee act against the two witnesses. Full Senate approval also would be required to send the cases to the district attorney for court action.

Browder, former head of the American Communist Party, turned aside a volley of questions about individuals, protesting that it was a "fishing expedition."

Field, millionaire descendant of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, claimed constitutional protection for refusing to say whether he ever was a Communist, and withholding other answers.

Morgan drafted the citation at direction of Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md.) of the subcommittee who said "there has been an affront to the dignity of the Senate and the Government."

potent bloc to pieces. The leading farm groups are disagreeing on everything, from Government reorganization of the Department of Agriculture to the Brannan Plan. The result is that the rank-and-file farmer is confused.

The financial statement of price support operations for March 31 shows some interesting developments during that month.

1. Total loans on farm commodities decreased 63 million dollars in March. An increase of about 13 million in corn was more than overcome by a decrease in wheat. The biggest decrease was in cotton, which showed a drop of 52 million dollars. This indicated that improved prices were encouraging farmers to take down their loans.

2. Government inventories—the farm commodities the Government has bought outright or on which it has foreclosed loans—increased 86 million dollars. The biggest increase was 75 million dollars in corn. Percentagewise, big increases were reported in prunes and Irish potatoes, while smaller ones were listed for linseed oil, dried milk, cottonseed and cottonseed meal, and dried eggs. Decreases reported for butter, turkeys, etc., indicate CCC is successful in its give-away programs.

3. Corn was the only product in March for which loans had been approved but not fully processed. In February, 11 commodities were in this category. Programs were closed on March 1 on some of these commodities, but some were slowed down because of diminishing funds.

A few weeks ago every farm speaker was orating on how sharply prices of farm commodities had dropped. With little fanfare prices have recently turned around and, spurred by the prospect of the poorest winter wheat crop in years, shot sharply up. For instance, wheat at about $2.30 is about 60 cents above the recent low; corn at $1.45 is 45 cents above its low; cotton at 32½ cents a pound is up 10 cents. Soybeans yesterday shot up sharply to about $3.10 a bushel—or $2.20 above their low point a few months ago. Eggs, lard, meats, etc., are up.

In fact, many crops such as wheat are above price support levels or nearing them, and some are above price supports plus carrying charges. Cotton is selling above 95 percent of parity, and the support is 90 percent. Wheat is selling at a little more than the average support price of $1.95 plus and average of 28 cents for carrying charges.

No wonder the complaints of the farmers, so loud a short time ago, are quieted.

Too Much?

U. S. Eating More Than Last Year

The question whether Americans are eating too much was raised yesterday by an Agriculture Department report.

It said consumption this year is likely to average about 3250 calories a day for each person, or 10 more than last year's average.

The daily caloric requirements for individuals vary by age, sex and type of activity. But they range from a few hundred for infants to upward of 4000 for men engaged in heavy activity.

For example, the average farmer's wife is said to need about 2600 calories a day; the average city housewife about 2300 calories; the average active farmer from 3500 to 4000; a sedentary man about 2400; and the average nursing mother 3000.

The department made no official comment as to whether Americans overeat on the average. But its nutritional authorities said there is a question whether the average daily consumption need be at the indicated level of 3250, taking into account the lower needs of children and women.

The energy value of the 1950 diet is 130 calories less than the peak of 3350 calories in 1946, but the same as the average for the 1935-39 prewar period.

Today's diet is of a higher quality, however, than the prewar. Americans are eating more meat and poultry products and less starchy foods, such as potatoes and grain products.

Remington Denies Stories Of 2 Accusers

William W. Remington disputed point by point yesterday testimony of two admitted former Communists who said the Commerce Department economist was a party member in 1936-37.

Remington's attorney, Joseph L. Rauh, jr., did most of the talking at a news conference. Remington nodded assent to what Rauh said.

In addition to pointing to what he called "many discrepancies" in the testimony of Kenneth McConnell and Howard Allen Bridgman, Rauh accused Chairman Wood (D., Ga.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee, of:

1. Prejudging the Remington case.

2. Trying to trap him into silence on what McConnell and Bridgman told the committee in executive session. (Only part of their testimony has been made public.)

Committee Hears Miss Bentley

While the news conference was going on, the Un-American Activities Committee was hearing Elizabeth Bentley behind closed doors in connection with its current investigation into Remington's loyalty.

Miss Bently, admitted former courier for a Russian spy ring, told Senate investigators in 1949 that Remington gave her war production secrets which went to Moscow.

Remington was suspended on the basis of her testimony. He went back to work in the Commerce Department after the Government's Loyalty Review Board cleared him.

Wood gave reporters no information as to the nature of Miss Bentley's testimony yesterday.

Rauh said Wood prejudged the case when he wrote Seth Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, suggesting the board reopen the Remington case. Wood did this "before he ever heard our side," Rauh added.

Secrecy Pledge Rejected

Rauh asked—and was granted—permission to read the full testimony of McConnell and Bridgman. He read for about 15 minutes Friday, then asked permission to return and examine it further yesterday. When he went to the committee room yesterday, he was handed a letter signed by Wood. It said in part:

"You are allowed to examine the testimony . . . with the express understanding that the contents thereof will not be released by you to any other persons without authority from this committee."

Rauh rejected this condition.

"If I had read the transcript today, we would have fallen into the biggest trap anyone ever fell into," Rauh commented. "I would have been required to keep from the press and everyone else what I had obtained from a cursory examination yesterday."

Anyway, Rauh commented, "I have already seen enough to prove that the charges are unfounded."

don will, Acheson explained, cover "problems of common concern in all parts of the world."

In the party leaving yesterday, besides Acheson, were Mrs. Acheson; Lucius D. Battle, special assistant to the Secretary; Robert Tufts, of the department's policy planning staff; Barbara Evans, assistant to the Secretary; Edwin Martin, European economic officer; former Senator John S. Cooper, Republican consultant to the Secretary; Robert Barry and Walter Guzzardi of the secretariat.

President Truman and ambassadors of most of the Atlantic Pact nations were at National Airport to see Acheson and his party off with a round of handshaking, picture making and handkerchief waving. Mr. Truman remained in his automobile on the hot concrete apron until the big blue-and-silver Air Force transport left the ground.

The President and Acheson posed for still photographers and then walked over to a microphone attached to a battery of newsreel cameras where they shook hands, smiled, talked and shook hands again.

"Mr. Secretary," said the President, "I came down here to wish you bon voyage and good luck. I know very well you are going to have successful meetings in Europe which will contribute to the peace of the world."

"Thank you very much," said Acheson. "This is one more mark of your support and kindness which have never failed me. I am going abroad to carry out your instructions and your wishes."

"I know you will," Mr. Truman replied.

Acheson then boarded the plane, following Mrs. Acheson, whom the President escorted to the ramp. The plane swung slowly round and taxied off to the shouted good wishes of discreetly perspiring diplomats.

Grave of 700 B. C. In Turkey Yields Ancient Jewelry

Philadelphia, May 6 (U.P.).—Archeologists have made their first "find" in the current excavations at the ancient city of Gordion in Asia Minor, the University of Pennsylvania museum announced today.

Uncovering the grave of a young woman who was cremated in about the seventh century before Christ, the expedition found a gold bracelet wrought with lion's head figures, earrings, pendants, gold chains, a terra cotta vase, a clay pot and various fragments over 2500 years old.

At Gordion, legend has it, Alexander the Great cut the Gordion knot. The archeologists seek information on the Phrygians whose inscriptions never have been deciphered.

First A-Bombs' Use Called Unnecessary

The story of how a high-ranking Japanese navy officer captured in China was "kidnaped" from Chinese and brought to Washington during the war for interrogation was told yesterday by Rear Admiral Ellis M. Zacharias, ret.

The onetime deputy director of Naval Intelligence told the story in a Look magazine piece entitled "We Did Not Need to Drop the A-Bomb."

Zacharias contended that the late Navy Secretary James Forrestal worked up a plan to end the war in the Pacific by psychological warfare methods, thus averting the need for the A-bomb at Hiroshima, the final Okinawa campaign and Russian entry into the conflict with all its subsequent unhappy ramifications.

The "kidnaped" Japanese officer was Capt. Katsusaburo Kato, Chief of Naval Intelligence in China. He was brought, Zacharias reported, to what was known as the Navy's "Op-16-Z" interrogation "cage" outside Washington. Here he was fitted for an artificial leg while he told of the rapidly declining Japanese military power.

Another vital source of information, the retired American admiral stated, was "the top-ranking diplomatic representative of a neutral country in Tokyo" who was known as "Shark" to United States Navy intelligence. This diplomat furnished reports on an imperial palace conference in which the Emperor discussed how to end the war.

But, Zacharias declared, President Roosevelt "failed almost completely to appreciate" the value of psychological warfare and President Truman did no better on entering the White House and discovering "rampant chaos" there.

Zacharias, long a bitter critic of Army intelligence, declared in the article that "incompetent aides" fumbled intelligence in the War Department and that the Joint Chiefs of Staff accordingly made crucial decisions without knowing all the available facts.

Only Forrestal of all the top-level civilians knew the score and tried to act on it, Zacharias charged. But even he was unable to succeed and the decision was made to fight out the war and to use the A-bomb.

1st Step Taken

Bonn Acts To Ban Reds Over POWs

Bon, May 6 (U.P.).—The West German government, angered by Russia's refusal to repatriate any more war prisoners, today took a first step toward outlawing the Communist Party.

The cabinet ordered the Justice Ministry to prepare a bill to set up a Federal Supreme Court. Once established, a ministry spokesman said, the court will be asked to outlaw the Communists under a section of the constitution providing:

"Associations, the objects or activities of which conflict with the criminal laws of international understanding, shall be prohibited."

Returned prisoners and other sources, meanwhile, suggested some "missing" prisoners may be in Communist China.

One former prisoner said thousands of German prisoners dug foxholes and carried ammunition for the Chinese Reds last year. He said 3000 were in his group when it arrived in Manchuria, but only 1400 were alive in October, 1949. were alive in October, 1949.

A Hongkong dispatch said a reliable informant who arrived recently from the mainland reported hundreds of German war prisoners had arrived in Shanghai to do guard duty and manual labor.

[The Associated Press reported from Baden Baden that a daughter of former Field Marshal Friederich von Paulus, German commander at Stalingrad, said communications from her father indicated he still was a prisoner of the Russians as recently as April 17.]

All-African Pact Proposed

Capetown, South Africa, May 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan today suggested the formation of an all-African political and defense charter as a bulwark against communism.

The leader of South Africa's Nationalist government said his country is willing and anxious to place its political, economic and strategic experience at the disposal of neighbor states with the aim of "preserving western European civilization in Africa.

"Nations which have interests in Africa should consult each other," he said, and the African alliance should have a basis similar to that of the North Atlantic and inter-American pacts.

European countries with interests in Africa include Britain, France, Belgium, Portugal and Spain. All but Spain are signers of the Atlantic Pact.

The 76-year-old former Protestant minister made his proposal in reply to questions submitted by an Associated Press correspondent. His government introduced in Parliament yesterday a bill to outlaw the small Communist movement in South Africa.

Malan was asked whether the South African union would give Britain or the United States bases in an emergency. He avoided a direct answer, saying the union's policy at all times is to fend for itself.

Pacific Bases Seen Adequate By M'Arthur

Tokyo, May 6 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in an interview released today the Allies have enough Pacific bases to smash any amphibious attack from Vladivostok in Siberia or from South China.

He told a group of Australian newsmen that he is completely satisfied with the present Allied bases in the Pacific. With them, he said, the Allies could break up any attempt by an aggressor to mount an invasion from west or southwest of Japan.

MacArthur said the Western allies have no intention of building up Japan militarily to use as an ally against anyone.

He said the question of whether the United States should retain bases in Japan to protect the Japanese after a peace treaty has been signed is entirely up to the Japanese.

The Japanese have enough common sense to realize they could not survive another conflict, no matter who their allies were, MacArthur said.

Clay Asks a German Infantry As Part of Defense Against Reds

New York, May 6 (NYHT).—Formation of a West German infantry army as an equal and integral part of an over-all European defense system against Russia, was advocated today by Gen. Lucius D. Clay (retired), former United States military governor in Germany.

West European states, in cooperation with Britain and the United States, must evolve a "new and perhaps revolutionary unification" of their military forces in the face of the Russian threat, he asserted.

Speaking as "a civilian," General Clay said "Germany could contribute to the defense of western Europe without being given the means to take aggressive action on her own."

He explained a new German army should be composed of infantry forces, without air or armor and under a West European commander.

West European nations, such as France and the Benelux countries, should spend their money and effort on ground forces, he added:

Clay said a "continental ground force" of French, German, Dutch, Belgian and Italian infantry, backstopped by American and British aerial and naval strength, "would represent a force of tremendous power."

"In the Cold War," he asserted, "we have overemphasized the value of the Germans. In developing any positive program, we must emphasize that the Germans need us more than we need them. If they hope for a place in the sun, they will only find it in the West."

As a corollary, Clay said West Germany must be given full partnership in West European councils, or none at all.

Germans Must Be Armed, Ex-Nazi General Says

Dietramszell, Germany, May 6 (U.P.).— Hitler's last Eastern-front chief-of-staff, Gen. Heinz Wilhelm Guderian, today said Germany must be accepted as a fully armed equal if it is to be an ally of the West in a possible war with Russia.

Ship Life Is Hectic for Rome Pilgrims

sailors preparing to pull up the gangplank, as well as trying to spot our friends standing in the wharf shed waving their handkerchiefs to us. As the band played, the De Grasse gave her final booming salute and we left the shores of the United States of America.

We stayed on deck to pay our tribute to the Lady with the Torch and then went below to unpack.

When the chimes sounded at 6:30 for the first seating for dinner, we were right on time and eager to taste the delectable French cooking.

We were delighted to discover that our table, for Alma, Helen, Father Maurice King and myself, was right next to the table which seated His Excellency, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, the Very Rev. John S. Spence, the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz and the Rev. Philip Hannon.

On Sunday morning, holy mass was celebrated in every nook and cranny, what with our 18 priests and a number of others who were traveling privately. Our first mass was said by Father King assisted by a very distinguished acolyte, the Right Rev. Henry F. Graebenstein. Then the two priests reversed positions and we had the grace of another mass. At 10 a. m., after a good breakfast, we went to the main lounge for the public mass, which was said by the Rev. John Tracy Ellis. Music throughout the ceremony was played by a string quartet.

If you ever could have seen the various headgear worn by our priests while taking their morning constitutional on deck. I'll try to get a picture of Msgr. Spence, Father Ellis and Father Argaut in their berets!

On Sunday afternoon we had a lifeboat drill. When the siren blew five short blasts we put on our life preservers and went to lifeboat No. 11 on the promenade deck. If you ever could have seen how comical we all looked. Father Chester Ball is so stout he looked like he should have used two instead of one.

In the evening we had horse racing. Wooden horses, about 3 feet high, going around the dance floor in a circular course. I won 400 francs and Herman and Mary Lauten won 700.

During the night we ran into some rough weather and did the ship roll! It dipped so far on one side, I wondered if it would manage to come back. When we got up, it was pouring rain and the sea was full of whitecaps. The sailors had rigged ropes all along the decks for us to hold on to as we walked along. By noon the sun was shining but the ship was still rolling. Some of the passengers were sick, but good old dramamine was keeping me on an even keel!

At night we had a gala get-together, with champagne, paper hats and favors. The rolling of the ship Sunday night was mild compared with Monday night. About 2 a. m. there was a terrific lurch which almost threw a number of passengers out of their berths and toppled suitcases and vases of flowers in various staterooms. Folks looked a little the worse for wear and loss of sleep the next morning. Nevertheless, most of them got up for one or two masses, as usual.

On Tuesday evening His Excellency, Archbishop O'Boyle, gave a reception for the pilgrims and any passengers who wished to come. After a short informal talk, impromptu entertainment was furnished by a quartet composed of Fathers Charles E. Roach, James P. Grace and Joseph F. Denges and your correspondent. Father Roach was the star performer and we enjoyed his antics. The audience joined in a number of old songs. When the "concert" was over, Joe Ready took a picture of the group.

All day Wednesday the sea was very high, with waves breaking over the bow onto the lower promenade deck. We had great difficulty walking. At lunchtime some dishes slid off the tables, so when we went to dinner we found metal guards, affixed to the tables, around our dishes and glassware.

We have been having engine trouble for the last couple of days and the scuttlebutt is that we will be at least 24 hours late in docking at LeHavre.

Your correspondent got together the card players and had a bridge tournament, with 5 tables in first class and 11 tables in cabin class. Members of our pilgrimage who won prizes were Mrs. Ann Strieter and Miss Marjory Hughes.

Each evening at 6 o'clock we assemble in the lounge for the recitation of the rosary. On Wednesday evening several of our girls (I don't dare tell their names) were sitting quietly in the first four seats of a row of straight back chairs, waiting for prayers to begin, when the ship gave a terrific roll and over went the chairs like a deck of cards, with the girls, in their evening dresses, sprawling every which way. It was very funny and we all got a good laugh out of it. It was difficult to get in the proper mood for praying.

Even though there is no permanent chapel on board, a cabin on the lower deck has been arranged into a tiny repository where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved and our people take turns all day long watching for 15 minutes each.

On Friday evening Father Ellis gave a splendid talk about the various places we shall visit on our pilgrimage. He pointed out that we are the first pilgrims to visit the Holy See from the Archdiocese of Washington and that in going to Rome we are going to our Father's house.

I shall bring this narrative to a close now so that I can get it in with the mail that is being put ashore at Plymouth, England, on Monday, May 1.

Until we reach Lourdes, au revoir! KATHRYN.

the resident freshmen women at Howard, in picnic grove No. 17 off Military rd., in Rock Creek Park.

The group arrived at the grove about 1 p. m. in three buses.

When storm clouds began to appear shortly afterward, they began packing up for the return trip.

Suddenly the bolt hit the top of the 80-foot poplar tree sheltering the three girls.

"The rain poured," Miss Eleanor Simmons, dormitory director for Truth Hall, said. "We all ran for shelter and as we did we saw Miss Mills lying on the ground."

First aid was administered on the spot. A passing motorist called the rescue squad.

The brief, sudden storm lasted only 15 minutes, then broke out again at 3:40 and lasted until 4:54 p. m. In that time, the mercury dropped from the record 93 for the date to 83.

The former record high of 91 for the date was reached in 1918 and again in 1934.

Humidity was 100 percent from 5 a. m. to 9 a. m. yesterday. A heavy fog hung over the National Airport here about that time making it necessary to divert some early morning air traffic to Byrd Airport in Richmond.

A 10-minute shower of hailstones was reported in the 2800 block of Connecticut ave. nw., and in the areas of Cathedral ave. and Woodley rd. nw., shortly before 2:30 p. m.

Cold air from Canada is expected to give some relief today with the weatherman predicting cloudy and cooler with a high in the low 70s and showers likely in the evening.

employes a good rest so they will be better able to do their jobs. This purpose is defeated by those employes who carry over large chunks of leave earned during the year. We must stop this practice.

"Each employe should have a vacation of around three weeks. That would take 15 days. He would then have 11 days to use for shopping, attending funerals, and other necessary personal obligations.

"The average employe would have to take most of the annual leave as he earns it under such an arrangement, but I'm sure he'd be more useful to the Government."

Thousands of Federal workers take the minimum annual leave in order to build up an insurance against unemployment. Accumulated leave is paid in a lump sum to employes who are laid off. It's regarded as a form of unemployment insurance.

60-Day Limit

The law now limits classified and per diem employes to a maximum accumulation of 60 days. However, during the war years when leave for most employes was sharply curtailed, a temporary law allowed them to build up a maximum of 90 days.

Hundreds of employes have more than 60 days of leave because of the wartime law. Under the White House directive, they will be forced to take all leave over 60 days but they will be given a reasonable time in which to do it.

Each agency head will be made responsible for carrying out of the Administration's new leave policies.

Winnipeg Flooded as Red River Smashes Dikes

Winnipeg, Man., May 6 (AP).—Winnipeg gave up its struggle against the raging Red River tonight as billions of tons of flood water surged through broken dikes into the city's streets.

"Things have got out of hand," said Deputy City Engineer A. J. Taunton. "It is no longer a question of defense but of relief."

Premier Douglas L. Campbell of Manitoba sent Brig. R. E. A. Morton, chief of the Canadian army's Prairie Command, to direct relief operations in this rich grain center of 300,000 population.

Morton set anti-loot troops to patrolling the city's southern suburbs, where more than 4000 persons have been evacuated. Down the river at Morris—a dead village where 1100 persons used to live—houses floated in the stream.

Prisoners in the threatened city jail were moved to outlying districts north of the flood area.

At nearby St. Boniface, officials warned that six carloads of carbide were liable to blow up when the flood waters touched them. Water and carbide form an inflammable gas.

J. W. Sanger, general manager of Winnipeg's electric power system, told an emergency meeting of the city council that the river may rise another 5 feet—it is already 26 feet 4½ inches—8½ feet above flood risk.

Sanger said any further rise would mean a major evacuation of suburban Winnipeg. He said the Winnipeg Tribune had misquoted him earlier as saying the whole city might have to be abandoned.

During the day the flood claimed its first life in greater Winnipeg. Lawson Ogg, volunteer flood fighter in the suburb of St. Vital, was caught in a wall of water that burst through a barricaded door into a house where he was working. He drowned.

It was the second fatality in three weeks of severe floods sweeping the Red River valley.

Brig. R. E. A. Morton, general officer commanding the Army's Prairie Command, was appointed director of flood relief throughout the valley. The Royal Canadian Air Force sent 120 men from its base here to aid in flood work and called about 80 reserve airmen to duty.

Midwest Storm Roars Into Canada; 12 Dead

By The Associated Press

A vicious spring storm roared off into eastern Canada yesterday, leaving a trail of multi-million-dollar damage, at least 12 persons dead and scores injured in the central United States.

The winds, which reached hurricane force in some places, battered a nine-State area Friday and throughout the night.

Three persons were killed in both Iowa and Wisconsin, two in Illinois and one each in Nebraska, Texas, and Ohio.

A twelfth victim was drowned in New York, where an offshoot of the Midwest storm roared up the St. Lawrence River valley with winds up to 70 miles an hour, overturning boats and damaging docks.

The winds, which reached up to 100 miles an hour in gusts in a few spots, pounded the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. Damage in Superior, Wis., alone was estimated at several million dollars.

Arlington Launches Police Force Probe

The Arlington County Board yesterday appointed a three-man commission to investigate criticisms of county police department administration.

The board voted the investigation two weeks ago, but charges were outlined for the first time yesterday by Board Chairman Daniel Dugan, who said that "many of them" came from the Arlington Sun newspaper.

The charges are:

1. That politics have played a major role in selection of policemen.

2. That police department personnel administration is "below normal standards."

3. That records, particularly the police arrest book, "have been secreted from the press."

4. That new policemen don't get adequate training in firearms, or in "public relations."

5. "That the qualifications, background, experience and temperament of ranking officers of the department including the chief, are questionable."

6. That relations of the chief and the county manager are "not good."

The commission also was asked to look into complaints that the policemen in the county are underpaid, that there aren't enough of them for the county's 125,000 population; that a merit system is needed in the department; that policemen have to work overtime without added pay.

Dugan announced he will propose a similar investigation of the county fire department when the police probe is concluded.

Members of the commission are: Vic Gauzza, 3808 N. 14th st., Arlington, placement officer in the Secretary of Interior's office and a "personnel administration expert," according to Dugan.

Joseph Leib, 3908 N 4th st., Arlington, Federal research analyst on World War II contracts, and a "professional investigator."

E. J. Steger, 6722 N. Washington blvd., appointed chairman, and described as a "long time Arlington resident, with an impeccable reputation."

Police Quiz 25 Inmates in Davis Death

Homicide Squad detectives yesterday completed questioning of 25 District Jail inmates in connection with the mystery death Friday night of Leroy Davis outside cell 132.

Five Government agencies, including the FBI, have been investigating the death since Saturday, April 29. A temporary certificate listed death due to natural causes, acute congestive heart failure.

Last Wednesday a jail guard admitted wrapping a towel around Davis' neck in a struggle which developed when he said Davis made a break for freedom. The guard, James E. Kirkpatrick, 33, 1229 Savannah pl. se., has been forced to take annual leave for using "improper custodial methods."

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday the results of new tests on Davis' brain tissues and blood will probably be known this week.

Davis was buried in Fayetteville, N. C., Friday, after Washington police tried unsuccessfully to delay burial to permit a second autopsy.

Homicide Squad Lieut. John K. Baker said he had asked Fayetteville police to try to persuade the Davis family to postpone burial one day at the request of Dr. MacDonald.

The coroner previously said he had "all the organs we need to determine the cause of Davis' death."

'Allied Trains Used For Smuggling in Berlin, Reds Say

Moscow, May 6 (AP).—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged Western Allied commanders in Berlin today with plundering the divided city and using sealed military trains for wide-scale smuggling.

(The Pravda charge coincided with similar charges yesterday by the Soviet-licensed East German News Agency ADN, which reported the Communist-led East German government had asked Soviet authorities for permission to inspect western military trains passing through the Russian zone.)

The American side of the Berlin zonal boundaries, said the article, are lined with purchase points for scrap non-ferrous metals. The report charged that valuable electric cables, statuary and piping had been destroyed for scrap.

(Under the four-power agreement, Allied freight shipments are exempt from even Russian inspection. British and American officials say the smuggling charges are false.)

U. S. Asks Information on Local Racketeers

might lead to prosecutions, despite the gaps in the law, McInerney said:

"We've got plenty of statutes. We don't have the evidence."

The United States attorneys were asked to search the files of all enforcement agencies in their areas—Federal, State and local—for information.

Most of those in the six-page list of names of "allegedly prominent underworld figures" were listed as being from New York, New Jersey and Chicago areas. Others were listed from Philadelphia, Omaha, Minneapolis and scattered places across the Nation. Beard's name was the only one listed for the Washington area.

The United States attorneys were furnished a full list of aliases under which many of those inquired about are known to have operated.

McInerney's request for information was not limited to those actually named in the list he inclosed. He asked also for data on any others the United States attorneys felt should be added to the list.

The criminal division head noted in his letter that Attorney General McGrath has been particularly interested in the growing menace of big-time gamblers.

It was McGrath who called the February Attorney General's Crime Conference on Law Enforcement Problems which met here at the Justice Department. McGrath called the meeting principally at the request of State and local officials who had been clamoring for Federal help to break up the interstate racketeers.

At that time McGrath took the view that "throughout the United States there is, and has existed for many years, a public policy that condemns organized gambling and makes its activities criminal."

But the criminal sanctions have been mostly State laws, myriad in their types and provisions.

Once Justice receives the "information" it seeks from the U. S. attorneys, it will be able to put the pieces together and determine if any of the "allegedly prominent underworld figures" can be prosecuted under existing Federal statutes.

During McGrath's testimony on the anti-gambling bill (a measure to ban interstate transmission of such gambling information as horse race data), he said:

"I do not come to the committee armed with a verified up-to-date history of violations of law in the gambling field, or even an over-all investigation of the whole field of gambling.

"My department and other executive agencies have had no function in the field other than in connection with the lottery laws. In 1939 and 1940 the Federal agencies did some extensive investigation of horse race information activities in certain Midwestern cities which resulted in the bringing of indictments for violation of the income tax and lottery laws by those who were at that time operating the interstate horse race information service in connection with bookmaking."

He was referring to a Treasury investigation in connection with the prosecution of the late Moses L. (Moe) Annenberg for income tax violation. Annenberg went to the Federal penitentiary but the effort to use the lottery law to attack the race wire collapsed. The courts held that disseminating horse race information was not covered by the ban on lottery information.

This left the race wire problem to the several States. As a result the Continental Press Service has been able, since Annenberg voluntarily went out of business, to run a legal wire service to its various "distributors" who apparently divide up the country.

N. J. Offers Aid in Probe Of Erickson

New York, May 6 (NYHT).—Two of the three big gambling investigations—in New York and New Jersey—narrowed today toward a common front aimed at gambling overlords, and specifically at Frank Erickson, "lay-off" horse racing bookie, whose offices were raided during the week by New York District Attorney Frank S. Hogan.

In the most significant development of the day, the New Jersey attorney general's office made a gratuitious offer of "all possible assistance" to Hogan in his prosecution of the Erickson case before the grand jury. The district attorney is expected to begin presentation of his evidence next week.

Nelson F. Stamler, special deputy attorney general, said he made the call to Hogan on direct orders of New Jersey Attorney General Theodore D. Parsons.

There was no indication of the exact substance of Stamler's offer, except that he alluded directly to Erickson, who recently boasted to a Senate subcommittee that he had operated profitably as a bookie for many years in all 48 States.

Erickson was believed to maintain his principal base of operations in New Jersey.

There was still no sign of the missing Erickson accountant, Harry Pellino, 49, who disappeared with his family Monday.

Couple Found Not Guilty Of Assaulting Census Taker

Judge Thomas D. Quinn yesterday found a District couple not guilty in Municipal Court on charges of assaulting a census enumerator.

Paul Shaw, 21, 1632 Q st. se., said the altercation ensued after he had questioned Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Bartlett about their neighbors, at 726 Congress st. se.

He testified Bartlett "beat me on the shoulders and she pulled my hair and threw rocks at my car." Shaw said he had questened the Bartletts in accordance with census instructions to talk to neighbors when families are not at home.

Shaw said the Bartletts had been drinking and were "rude."

Barltett, who acted as his own defense counsel, said he heard Shaw say "I'm glad I'm through with this job. I won't have to put up with any more of that" as Shaw left, and he went to question the enumerator. He said he and his wife had had two beers apiece.

"My wife, she slapped him, all right," he told Judge Quinn. "But, me, I haven't hit that guy yet."

Filmland Stages Colossal, Real-Life Wedding For Elizabeth Taylor and Heir to Hotel Millions

Hollywood, May 6 (U.P.).—Elizabeth Taylor married hotel heir Conrad (Nick) Hilton, jr., tonight while 27 policemen held back more than a thousand excited fans outside the celebrity packed church.

The 18-year-old movie star, beautiful in a $3500 gown of traditional all-white satin, walked down a yellow-carpeted aisle of the Church of the Good Shepherd at 5 p. m. on the arm of her father, art dealer Francis Taylor.

Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Esther Williams, Greer Garson, Dick Powell, June Allyson, Phil Harris, Alice Faye, Ann Miller and Janet Leigh were among the 700 big names of movieland who jammed the cream-colored stucco church in Beverly Hills.

Outside, crowds of just plain public who didn't receive engraved invitations stood out the 12-minute ceremony behind ropes.

Luscious Liz and the 23-year-old heir to a 125-million-dollar room-and-bath empire knelt during part of the Catholic ritual before an altar banked with yellow and white spring flowers.

Then the sandy-haired bridegroom slipped a platinum band studded with diamonds on Liz's finger. She gave him a plain gold band.

It was Hollywood's most super-colossal real-life wedding since Shirley Temple became a bride.

After the double-ring ceremony, the guests in mink and spring finery went to the Bel Air Country Club to kiss the bride at a champagne reception. In three rooms, buffet tables groaned under lobster, shrimp, anchovies, crabs, eggs, smoked turkey, cheese souffle and gallons of champagne.

The bride's wedding gown, a present from MGM, was of 20 yards of off-white satin and sprinkled with beads and tiny pearls in a floral design. It had a nipped-in waist, a long train and a low-cut, off-the-shoulder neckline topped with transparent chiffon.

Her misty, white veil was held to her black curls by a juliet cap dotted with seed pearls.

For "something old" she carried a white-lace hanky her mother had at her wedding. Her "something blue" was a blue garter.

Her going-away suit was of blue-silk gabardine with linen shoes, bag and straw hat to match.

Maid-of-honor Ann Westmore, of the make-up clan, was outfitted in pale green organdy trimmed with satin ribbon. Elizabeth chose the gowns in yellow organdy for the six bridesmaids, including actress Jane Powell; Marilyn Hilton, Nick's sister-in-law; Betty Sullivan, daughter of columnist Ed Sullivan; Barbara Thompson, wife of actor Marshall Thompson, and Marjorie Dillon, Liz' movie stand-in.

Hilton's ushers included Elizabeth's brother Howard and Peter Freeman, who introduced the couple only last October 21.

Wedding presents included a petticoat embroidered with the words "Hilton Hotel;" a $65,000 pearl ring from her uncle, New York art dealer Howard Young; a gray mink coat and a painting from her father; a white mink stole from her mother; a closetful of clothes from designers; a diamond "little finger" ring from Nick and 100 shares of stock in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York from Hilton, sr.

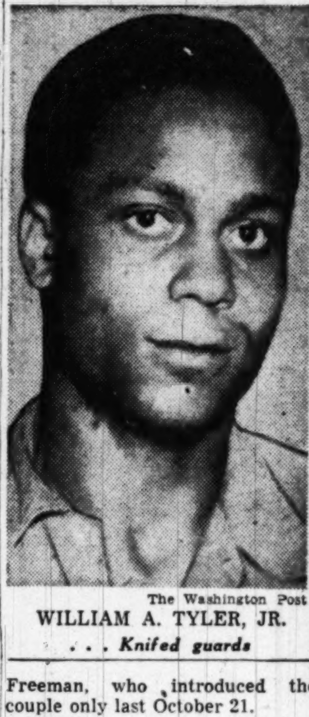
Signs Confession To Store Murders



The Washington Post
WILLIAM A. TYLER, JR.
. . . Knifed guards

Ex-Employe Confesses Good Friday Murder of Guards

ing back to the first floor, he found that Carpenter had worked his hands and one foot loose, and had removed the gag from his mouth."

It was then that Tyler plunged the boning knife into Carpenter repeatedly, Murray said. He left through the E st. door.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett said special commendations were due all police officers who worked on the case that aroused the entire city.

More than 18 officers worked four weeks and one day, sometimes 24 hours a day. More than 300 suspects were questioned.

Murray revealed the confession at a special press conference while Tyler was taken to Lansburgh's to retrace his route.

Tyler was arraigned in Police Headquarters at 10:15 p. m., a giant of a man with barrel shoulders and sleepy eyes.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, hurriedly summoned, held Tyler without bond on two counts of murder.

Tyler spoke only once. "I don't understand 'premeditate' and all those words, but I did not plan murder," he said. "I went to the store to rob, not to commit murder."

Tyler was quiet through the 10-minute arraignment, as Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray questioned Homicide Squad Detective Sergt. Lloyd B. Furr. Police said that Furr was the man to whom Tyler actually confessed, and that Tyler had asked for Furr to confess to.

But when Tyler left the commissioner's office, his mood changed quickly. Coming out the door he took a vicious kick at Post Photographer Harry Goodwin, just missing him.

At the elevator, handcuffed to a deputy United States marshal, Tyler suddenly turned around, faced the photographers and through gritted teeth said, "Here, you want a good picture?"

Tyler himself helped police solve the case.

He was arrested early Friday morning at his home, 2302 Pomeroy rd. se., and charged with the brutal stabbing and beating of a pharmacist, Jack I. Katzoff, 34, 2814 Erie st. se., Thursday night.

Police immediately regarded Tyler as a Lansburgh suspect, and the confessed murderer was placed under $25,000 bond.

Detectives were assigned to round up all of Tyler's acquaintances. One of these proved Tyler's Waterloo.

Murray would not identify the man, except to say that he is a 20-year-old restaurant employe.

After hours of questioning this man finally admitted that on Thursday afternoon, April 6, he and Tyler entered Lansburgh's, at 7th and E sts. nw., and "cased" the store thoroughly with intent to enter the building later that night and remove cash, Murray said.

The Tyler acquaintance insisted that after they had left the store, he told Tyler he was not going through with the robbery, saying he had not been in trouble recently, Murray said.

The acquaintance described details of the store and details of Tyler's behavior which convinced them Tyler was their man. He said he saw Tyler the day after the murders and asked Tyler whether he had been involved. "Tyler just turned and walked away," Murray quoted the acquaintance.

Armed with a signed statement, police brought Tyler back to headquarters for questioning.

"Certain admissions were made, corroborating the statement," Murray said, but Tyler still did not actually confess to the murders.

Accordingly, it was decided to proceed with the lie detector test.

Attachments were strapped to Tyler's arms and legs, and the "vicious" man was left in the room alone with the detector operator.

The detector operator had asked only a few questions, according to Murray, when Tyler announced he was ready to make a statement.

"He said things in that statement only the murderer could have told us," Murray said. The assistant chief of detectives refused to tell reporters whether Tyler's fingerprints matched those found on the knife handle and one found on Carpenter's shoe at the scene.

Murray described Tyler as "vicious" and "savage." When brought to Gallinger Hospital to be identified by Katzoff, Tyler twice lunged at the bed-ridden druggist during the identification.

Tyler was arrested at this home by two probational detectives from Number Eleven Precinct, Carl A. Rudbeck, jr., and Gordon B. Colbert.

Murray said Tyler has a juvenile record for housebreaking.

He worked at Lansburgh's as a tea shop porter and left the store in October, 1949, police said.

Lieut. Richard Felber of the Homicide Squad, who headed up the special investigation into the Good Friday murders, was confined to his bed with a temperature of 101, and was unable to be in on the solution, although he did question Tyler Friday.

Murray said Tyler and his acquaintance stayed in Lansburgh's Thursday until after closing time at 6 p. m., and had to be let out by the guards.

Tyler later entered the store, by hoisting himself up to the second floor, using a pulley.

Although robbery was the motive for entering the store, Murray said Tyler got only an undiclosed amount of cash from Carpenter's wallet, and two packages of cigarettes.

On the sixth floor he took Hess' flashlight after killing him, and used it to light his way downstairs, but left the flashlight in the store, Murray said.

Liquor Law Violations Laid To Two Cafes

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will conduct hearings this week on charges that two restaurants have violated ABC regulations. The ABC Board office said the cases and hearing dates are:

Tuesday, May 9, 10 a. m. the Elite Restaurant, 3663 Georgia ave. nw., charged on two counts with sale and delivery of alcoholic beverages during prohibited hours, and on one count with selling alcoholic beverages for consumption off the premises.

Thursday, May 11, 10 a. m., Billy's Mercury Grill, 615 7th st. sw., charged with sale to an intoxicated person and use of premises for an unlawful purpose (permitting a drunk to remain there).

In addition, the board this week is scheduled to hear protests in these cases:

Monday, May 8, 10 a. m., application of East End Liquors, Inc., 1250 4th st. ne., to transfer its Class A license to 5004 Benning rd. se.

Wednesday, May 10, application of Try Me Market, 201 13th st. se., for Class B license to sell beer and light wine for consumption off the premises.

Boy, 10, Awarded $4900 for Injuries Suffered in Fall

A 10-year-old boy was awarded $4900 damages Friday in District Court for injuries, including almost complete loss of hearing in one ear, suffered when he fell down a grease pit.

The lad is Harold Shotwell, of 3719 30th pl. ne. His father, John B. Shotwell, recovered $350 for expenses. They were represented by Attorneys Wallace Luchs, jr., and Bernard Nordlinger.

The defendant was Roland Stephens, operator of the gas station at 1401 Rhode Island ave. ne., in 1946, when Roland slipped on grease and fell in the pit. The verdict was by consent of plaintiff and defendant and was returned before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

175 Jolted as Flyer Grazes Derailed Car

Harrisburg, Pa., May 6 (U.P.).—The Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania Railroad grazed a derailed freight car today, injuring seven persons and jolting 175 passengers at Duncannon, Pa., 18 miles west of here.

The Chicago-New York Express brushed a refrigerator car, tossed across a track by a derailment, as Engineer William Sensor applied the brakes of the speeding 15-car all-Pullman train.

Sensor was alerted by train-to train phone when Engineer H. G. Coyle of the freight flashed a warning his five front cars had left the rails.

Both the limited and the 60-car freight were eastbound on parallel tracks. The company said Sensor had no time to come to a full stop.

PRR officials said Coyle's alertness and the speed with which Sensor picked up his message averted a more serious wreck.

The Deisel engine, a mail car, and the three forward sleeping cars of the limited scraped the tottering freight car, fourth in line. Windows of the mail and passenger cars were broken.

The shuddering halt of the express jolted passengers in all cars. Sensor's leg was hurt severely, and he was taken to a Harrisburg hospital.

The company said the freight derailment occurred when brakes on the forward cars locked "for some reason."

The wreck closed all four tracks on the railroad's main line. Four other trains—the Spirit of St. Louis, the Jeffersonian, and Pennsylvania Limited and the Admiral—all following the Broadway Limited, were delayed more than an hour.

The 11 undamaged cars of the limited were hooked to another engine and moved to Harrisburg. The train was delayed 3½ hours on its run to New York.

2 Children Found After Big Searches

From Wire Dispatches

Two small children who wandered away from their homes were found safe yesterday after searches attracting Nation-wide attention.

At Fort Lewish, Wash., 3-year-old Tommy Jenkins was found tired, dirty, but unharmed after a 45-hour absence during which 6000 soldiers and civilians, helicopters and bloodhounds searched the dense woods of the 3000-acre Fort Lewis Army reservation.

The barking of his faithful Irish setter led soldiers to the beach of a lake where the son of Army Sergt. William H. Jenkins was wading. The Army provost marshal theorized the boy had been kidnaped and returned, but an Army doctor and the boy's father doubted it. His legs were red and slightly swollen, he was hungry and his body was red as though from exposure when he was found 1500 yards from home.

At Dunbar, in southwestern Pennsylvania, tiny Anna Pearl Thorpe, 2, turned up unharmed in an open field three miles from her home after more than 400 State police, firemen and civilians had combed snake-infested woods for her for nearly 24 hours. She had screamed and suddenly disappeared Friday while playing at the edge of a woods a few hundred feet from her home.

Searchers with flashlights combed a four-mile area around the child's home through the night, and pumped out a well. The little blonde was nude except for a shoe when sighted by a boy searcher from a tree-top. Her clothes were nearby. She was tired, frightened, hungry and scratched on the arms and legs by brush and brambles, but a physician said she had not been molested and was in excellent condition. She cried for her bottle and was soon asleep in her mother's arms.

Mental Tests Given Woman In Fraud Case

A 22-year-old platinum blonde was sent to Gallinger Hospital for 30 days' mental observation yesterday at the request of her attorney.

She is Eva Barrie, 2300 Connecticut ave. nw., charged with two counts of obtaining money through false pretenses and obtaining a driver's permit by misrepresentation.

Miss Barrie, who moved recently from the Dorchester House, 2480 16th st. nw., has admitted writing six rubber checks, mostly for clothes, police said.

She fidgeted nervously throughout a lengthy bench conference with Judge Thomas D. Quinn in Municipal Court yesterday.

Police said she obtained a driver's permit under the name of Gloria Schlosser, and was arrested as she tried to use the permit as identification in obtaining a loan.

Her attorney, who asked his name be withheld, said the girl had been "emotionally upset" for some time.

New York Welcomes Liaquat Ali, Begum

New York, May 6 (AP). — The Prime Minister of Pakistan, Liaquat Ali Khan, and his wife, Begum Liaquat Ali, arrived in New York today by train from Washington.

He was greeted at Pennsylvania Station by a city reception committee, an Army band and an Infantry detachment.

Kangaroo, Cousin Are Found Dead in Kidnaper's Pouch

Philadelphia, May 6 (U.P.).—Joey the kidnaped kangaroo and his baby cousin were found dead today in the pouch he was crowded into by his aunt, who abducted him last Tuesday.

"It was a case of overcrowding," officials at the Philadelphia Zoo said. "Or maybe it was that they were unable to get to the lunch counter."

The male kangaroos, born last fall and still nursing, weighed 2 pounds. The mothers took the deaths "very philosophically."

Joey's mother made only feeble efforts to rescue her son, perhaps because her 1-year-older sister indicated she was ready to fight to keep her nephew.

U. S. Cruiser at Majorca

Palma, Majorca, May 6 (AP).—The cruiser Newport News and three destroyers of the United States Mediterranean Fleet arrived here from Nice today. It was the first American naval visit to this Spanish island in 27 years.

Sesqui May Take Troubles to Capitol

In the last faint hope of having a Freedom Fair next year, the Sesqui Commission on Monday probably will ask Congress to straighten out its legal difficulties.

But everybody concerned admitted yesterday chances of getting the necessary legislation through the House are slight. It took herculean efforts by the House leadership to win approval of the Sesqui's three-million-dollar appropriation and any new bill doubtless would be subject to an appropriations repeal amendment by its enemies.

A Sesqui executive committee spokesman said last night:

"We've just about got to as.. for legislation," he said. "After all, Congress ordered the celebration and it was made quite clear during hearings on the appropriation measure that a Freedom Fair was contemplated as a part of the Sesqui. My own opinion is that the commission will ask Congress to pass an amendment to the act."

The whole tangle stems from faulty wording of the original Sesqui Commission bill. It failed to include provisions exempting the commission from the law against setting up Government corporations and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath last week ruled that plans for a nonprofit corporation were of doubtful legality under the present law.

McGrath said he agreed with the view of the Sesqui Commission's general counsel, Walter M. Bastian, that the proposal was, in effect, an "avoidance of the obvious intent of Congress."

McGrath's statement revealed that Bastian, who originally had said he considered the proposal legal, had on April 19 written McGrath to say that on further consideration "I have reached the conclusion that my former opinion was wrong."

The Sesqui's executive committee is scheduled to meet at 3 p. m. Monday.

Even if the bill could sail past the Sesqui's House enemies, it is doubtful that it could be enacted quickly enough. Sesqui General Manager Paul Massmann some time ago set May 15 as the deadline for clearing away the legal road blocks to open the fair next summer.

The executive committee spokesman told The Post, however, that he thought the fair still would be possible if a bill were passed by June 1. He said he thought the committee would probably tell Congress that in asking for help.

At the Capitol it appeared yesterday that quick committee approval would be possible in both House and Senate. But the House is still embroiled in the omnibus appropriation bill and the Senate is about to tackle the controversial FEPC bill.

House District Committee Chairman McMillan (D., S. C.), a Sesqui Commission member, said he would be "delighted to assist in any possible way in pushing through legislation." He said he thought there would be no trouble in winning committee sanction, but he suggested it might be smarter to get the bill through the Senate first.

Senate District Committee Chairman Neely (D., W. Va.), also a Sesqui Commission member, said he would be glad to introduce a bill. But he noted the FEPC debate held a dim outlook for early action on the floor.

Cosmopolitan

Club Ends Convention In District

Installation of officers and a ball last night brought to a close here the 20th annual convention of the Capital District Federation of Cosmopolitan International.

Fred J. Rice, retiring governor of the organization called for support of his successor, Ray V. Watson of Baltimore. The events were held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Earlier, wives of members cited Mrs. Perle Mesta, Minister to Luxembourg, as "Woman of the Year." This followed a reception by Mrs. Truman for the women's group at Blair House.

Mrs. Mesta told the group that Luxembourg, five years after the war, has "fully recovered and enjoys one of the few stable economies of the world."

Geographers' Medal to Writer

The Washington Post

FOR RESEARCH—Miss Irene A. Wright of 3719 Livingston st. n.w. (left), receives the gold medal of the Society of Women Geographers, from Mrs. Marie P. Stafford of 1605 Allison st. n.w., society president, at the Mayflower Hotel. Miss Wright, writer and authority on Caribbean exploration, received the medal for her contribution to Tudor maritime research

Miss Irene A. Wright, State Department attestation officer and authority on sixteenth and seventeenth century exploration in the Caribbean, last night was awarded the gold medal of the Society of Women Geographers.

The award for her original contribution to Tudor maritime research was presented by Mrs. Marie P. Stafford, 5611 Kirkside dr., Chevy Chase, president of the society, at its twenty-fifth anniversary dinner in the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Wright's medal was added to her former decorations, including the Royal Order of Alfonso XII of Spain, Order of Carlos Manuel Cestedes of Cuba and the medal of the Academy of History of Havana.

After receiving the award, Miss Wright discussed her experiences in the Spanish archives of Seville and the life of the English geographer Richard Hakluyt. The Hakluyt Society of London is to publish her third volume on English voyages in the Spanish main. She lives at 3719 Livingston st., n.w.

Diamondback Gets Award

For the third consecutive semester, the Diamondback, student newspaper at the University of Maryland, has been awarded All-American honors by the Associated Collegiate Press. All-American is the highest rating obtainable.

Judgment was based on news coverage, creativeness, editing, organization and layout.

George Cheely, 3805 35th st., Mount Rainier, edited the semiweekly publication during the period for which the award was made. Morton C. Paulson and H. Ortiz, residents of Baltimore, Md., were managing editors.

Truman Urges Hawaii and Alaska Statehood

President Truman urged the Senate yesterday to "strengthen the security of our Nation" by granting Statehood to Alaska and Hawaii.

"I know of few better ways in which we can demonstrate to the world our deep faith in democracy and the principle of self-government," the President added.

Mr. Truman made this plea in a letter to Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Senate Interior Committee which is considering the two Statehood measures the House passed some weeks ago.

Noting the contention of opposition forces that admission of the two Territories would give them the same representation in the Senate as the most populous States, the President said:

"This argument is not only entirely without merit, but also directly attacks a basic tenet of the constitutional system under which this Nation has grown and prospered.

"Without the provision for equal representation in the Senate for all States, both great and small, regardless of population, there probably would have been no United States."

Asserting "the need is more urgent today than ever before" for action on the Statehood measures, the President added:

"By such action we will not only promote the welfare and development of the two Territories, but greatly strengthen the security of our Nation as a whole."

CHRYSLER CORPORATION'S STATEMENT ON THE STRIKE SETTLEMENT

A good contract that should be helpful to our employees and make for smoother operations in our plants

We are very happy that the strike is settled so that our 100,000 employees, our 10,500 dealers, and all the other people in our various plant and supplier communities affected by the strike can get back to work. Our job now is to concentrate all our efforts on turning out fine quality cars and trucks in large volume so our customers, many thousands of whom have waited patiently for them, can get delivery as quickly as possible.

The new contract is a good contract. It provides pension and insurance benefits that should be helpful to our employees in the emergencies of life that people are not always financially prepared to meet. And with the cooperation of our employees and the Union, the contract should also make for smoother operation in our plants.

We wish our employees to know that so far as the management is concerned there is no bitterness toward any of them on our part. We have tried to indicate that as the weeks went by. The hardships they have suffered are deplorable, especially when you consider what we offered our employees before the strike and what we were willing to discuss.

As regards pension and other benefits that the individual employee gets under the new contract, he could have got substantially these at the conference table without losing a single day's pay.

As far back as January 5, three weeks before the strike was called, Chrysler indicated its willingness to pay the pensions demanded and to see to it that employees retiring under a contract with the Union would be secure in their pensions for life. Under the new contract, retiring employees get the same dollars and cents pension that Chrysler offered before the strike began.

At that time, before the strike cut off development of their full scope, Chrysler also indicated its willingness to discuss with the Union insurance and other benefits comparable with such benefits provided by other major automobile companies. Since the strike, in repeated efforts to end the hardships caused by continued idleness of our employees, the Company has improved on the insurance and other benefits originally offered. Such things could have been worked out over the bargaining table without a strike.

In its pre-strike offer, Chrysler determined to make sure that any fund that might be set aside to pay pensions would be used only for that purpose and not for other purposes. This has been assured under the contract that has just been signed. The Company wishes to avoid any troublesome attempt that might be made five or ten years from now to use for other purposes any funds set up at this time to pay pensions of retiring employees.

With the same thing in mind, in its pre-strike offer Chrysler maintained that no arbitrary cents-per-hour payment into a fund would assure sound pension and insurance benefits and declined to be a party to such an arrangement. On April 5 the Union finally met this point and agreed that the Company could meet the cost of pension benefits without a specific cents-per-hour being specified. There is no cents-per-hour payment required under the contract that has just been signed.

Before the strike, Chrysler also was willing to set up a joint administration board to handle such matters as eligibility for pension payments but not to control any pension funds. Such an administrative board is provided in the new contract; the pension fund will be in the hands of an independent trustee or trustees to be selected by the Company.

There are some changes in the new contract having to do with bargaining procedure and other matters—some the Union wanted and some the Company wanted. We believe all these things could have been negotiated without a strike.

A strike is not a victory for anybody. We point these things out as a matter of experience and perhaps guidance in future relations.

Armed Forces Day Slated May 20

What is promised to be the greatest display of land, sea and air power in the Capital's history will be uncorked on Armed Forces Day, May 20.

It will mark the first observance of the day, with all the armed services joining to demonstrate the Nation's might.

A mammoth parade, beginning at 10 a. m., will highlight the day.

Demonstrations of the armed forces in action, their equipment and fighting techniques will center in a giant land-sea-air show at Bolling Air Base. Gates open at 9:30 a. m. and the show runs from about noon to 6 p. m.

A million square feet of exhibits will be on show, ranging from a quartermaster ice-cream-making machine to the Air Force's "Flying Laboratory."

At night a "Salute to the Armed Forces" program will be unfolded on the Washington Monument Grounds by the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

More than 1500 District National Guardsmen will participate in the day's activities, operating everything from jeeps to 600-mile-an-hour jet fighters.

The entire week ending May 20 will see armed forces displays and tributes in the area.

President Truman and Secretary of Defense Johnson will address a dinner at the Statler Hotel on the night of May 19.

During the week upward of a dozen service installations in the Washington area will hold "open house."

I r 100 Boys

Anacostia Will Offer Air Training

The Naval Air Reserve Training Unit at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, will offer an eight-week basic training course for 100 boys living in the Washington area this summer.

Part of a Nation-wide program by the Naval Air Reserve, the training course is designed particularly for high school boys. It will begin June 21.

Candidates will be selected after qualifying physically and successfully passing basic examinations. Those selected will live aboard the Naval Air Station. Each man will receive full active pay, about $150, and will be furnished uniforms, meals and lodging. He will be given two days' liberty each week.

Among the courses offered will be jet propulsion, first aid, Naval history and tradition, plane types, small-arms firing, aircraft engines, and many others.

At the end of the training period, participants may join the Organized Naval Air Reserve Squadrons, which meet once a week at Anacostia.

75 Today

Hossfeld To 'Retire' Third Time

Col. Henry Hossfeld will mark his 75th birthday today by "retiring"—for the third time.

Col. Hossfeld

The colonel, who lives at 3665 Upton st. nw., first retired in 1939. Recalled to active duty in World War II, he retired a second time in 1946

"Many people talk of spending their retirement in resting," says Colonel Hossfeld, a believer in the active life. "But that is exactly what they must not do. The physical and mental faculties must be kept going to enjoy happiness."

The colonel practices what he preaches.

Since 1946 he has been working on a voluntary basis with the Army's Office of Military History in the Pentagon.

This has meant a half-day's work regularly during the past four years.

Most of this has been devoted to gathering data about World War I. The Army last month published its third volume in the World War I order of battle series, for which Colonel Hossfeld was largely responsible.

Ex-Marines Hear Problems Of Unification

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) said yesterday he is sympathetic to the idea of unification of the armed forces, but warned of a "mistake being made" in "the idea that the forces are interchangeable."

Senator Douglas, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel, addressed the luncheon meeting of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association's first postwar national convention. The two-day session was concluded last night.

Senator Douglas said the Chiefs of Staff are primarily dominated by the Army and Air Force in voting power. While he did not question the sincerity of these men, he said, they are "committed to policies which regard troops first as numbers, then as great masses which can be moved abo t and intermixed at will."

Col. Melvin Maas of Washington was reelected association national president.

Navy Aviation's 39th Birthday at Anacostia

Naval Aviation will observe its thirty-ninth birthday at the Anacostia air station and other naval air activities afloat and ashore on Monday.

There will be no special ceremonies, as all such occasions now are blended into Armed Forces Day, a week hence. Yesterday, however, old-timers at the air station recalled some of the highlights during the third of a century Anacostia has been an important naval air base.

Carved out of Bolling Field, the Army Air Service base, during World War I, Anacostia for many years was the Navy's aviation test center.

During the recent agitation for moving all military flying away from the Nation's Capital, it seemed to be forgotten that most of the "hot" new planes of the Army and Navy were flight-tested over or near the city during the '20s and '30s.

It was in 1917 that the Navy Department selected the Anacostia mud flats as the best spot to test an early seaplane—the HS2L. With permission of the War Department, two 100-foot runways, two hangars and a barracks were built. Formally commissioned January 1, 1919, under command of Lieut. W. E. Doherty, the base contained a test section—and a pigeon school.

Few records of the early days exist, having been destroyed in a fire in 1921 and four floods during the '20's and '30's. However, here are some of the station's high moments:

Commissioning exercises of the dirigible Los Angeles in 1924, with Mrs. Calvin Coolidge serving as sponsor, and the President present.

Receipt and exhibition of Charles A. Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, in 1927.

The first successful broadcast of music by radio in history came from Anacostia in 1921.

Prince Georges Group Plans Government Talk

A public meeting to discuss formation of a nonpartisan citizens' committee for good government in Prince Georges County will be held May 17 at 8 p. m. in the County Service Building, Hyattsville.

Scheduling of the meeting followed the adoption of a resolution by the County Civic Federation on April 6.

The civic body at that time directed a committee to invite every person and group "interested in civic welfare" to form a nonpartisan citizens' committee to "promote study, public discussion and action in behalf of good government in Prince Georges County."

A special committee under the direction of William R. Turner, president of the Chillum Civic Association, is preparing the foundation of the new organization.

A basic function of the new group as proposed by the committee will be the "study of existing governmental, economic and social problems within the county and for the arousing of public interest in these problems," Turner said.

For Congress

Virginia Primaries Approach

The First District of Virginia, despite the interim election last week of Newport News industrialist E. J. Robeson, jr., remains the question mark in this summer's congressional primaries.

Elsewhere in the State, the picture is clear.

In the nearby Eighth District, there are three candidates for the Democratic nomination and two for the Republican.

The winner in the November election will represent Alexandria, Charlottesville and the counties of Albemarle, Arlington, Fairfax, Greene, Loudoun, Madison, Prince William, Fauquier, Stafford, King George, Culpepper, Orange, Goochland, Fluvanna and Louisa.

2-Man Contest

In the Third of which Richmond is the center, a two-man Democratic contest is in prospect.

The Ninth District in southwest Virginia pits the incumbent Democrat, Thomas W. Fugate, against Republican George Sutherland of Grundy, in the November general election. Both have been nominated by convention.

Robeson, former vice president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., will hold office only until the end of the year. He was elected over two Democrats and a Republican in a special election to fill the seat of the late S. Otis Bland.

Fireworks Seen

Thus the primary for the full term in the First, stretching from the Northern Neck to the Lower Peninsula, may provide more fireworks.

State Conservation Department Chief William A. Wright of Tappahannock, or Board of Education President Blake T. Newton, both of whom Robeson defeated, may oppose him in the primary.

Mrs. Katherine C. Blow of Yorktown, who did not enter the special election, has announced she will run in the Democratic primary.

Nile Straughan, Fredericksburg businessman, was the unsuccessful Republican candidate.

Two opponents to the dean of Virginia Congressmen, Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth District, have filed for the August 1 primary.

Beat Deadline

One is Arthur F. Souther, Arlington attorney defeated two years ago by Smith. Souther beat the filing deadline by ten minutes in presenting his qualifying papers at 11:50 p. m. to Garner L. Boothe, of Alexandria, Eighth District Democratic chairman.

Lieutenant-Commander Herman K. Kopp, jr., of Alexandria, is retiring from Navy active duty May 15 to run in the primary.

The second Republican primary in two years in the Eighth is also in the offing. Tyrrell Krum, Fairfax GOP chairman who won in the 1948 primary only to lose to Smith in the election, will be opposed by Hal Flood Hughes, Arlington real estate man,

Youth, 19, Held On Sex Charge

Thomas A. Sweeney, 19, unemployed, was held for the grand jury yesterday, charged with a sex offense in which the victim was a 13-year-old friend of his 11-year-old sister.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn set bond at $1000 in Municipal Court.

Police said the offense occurred April 24, while the girl was spending the night at the Sweeney home, 3146 Dumbarton ave. nw.

At the preliminary hearing yesterday Judge Quinn excluded spectators while the girl testified. She said Sweeney attempted to molest her twice during the night.

Citizens Federation to Hold Annual Cruise Wednesday

The Federation of Citizens Associations' annual cruise down the Potomac River will be held Wednesday night starting at 8:30 o'clock from the 7th st. wharf.

Last year almost 2000 members took the ride, Federation President Herbert P. Leeman said. This year's excursion is purely social, he said, no politics, only dancing and refreshments. The charge is $1.

In another of the week's highlights, the Rhode Island Avenue Association will hold its forty-second anniversary celebration Wednesday night, at Taft Junior High School, a meeting which will also feature a four-lawyer debate on home rule.

Mother Assails Slaying of Son Fleeing Police

Mrs. Mooney Calls His Killing 'Cold-Blooded'; Prince Georges Authorities Pressing Inquiry

Prince Georges County authorities last night pressed their investigation of the fatal shooting Friday of a 14-year-old Industrial Home School escapee, whose mother said police killed him "in cold blood."

The youth, George William Mooney, jr., of 20 14th st. ne., was killed by one of four policemen as he swam the Patuxent River and defied their command to halt.

The policemen, Lawson Peed and Benjamin Richard, of Prince Georges County, and Robert J. Mellin and William L. Walters, of Anne Arundel County, had answered a call that Mooney was in a tavern at Wayson's Corner in Anne Arundel.

Young Mooney left the school March 2 and was apparently living with relatives near Upper Marlboro. He was committed after critically wounding six-year-old Aubrey B. Jasper, 309 14th pl. ne., with a revolver, which Mooney admitted having stolen.

Found in Tavern

Lawrence Prentiss, chief counselor at the school, found George in a tavern in Anne Arundel County yesterday. When the boy refused to return to the school with him, Prentiss called police.

Prince Georges County Police at first refused to go after the boy but later were directed to go by Chief Brown after Prentiss called him and complained the police were not cooperating.

Brown said yesterday that Prentiss told him the boy was 17 and was wanted in Washington in connection with a shooting and that failure to capture him might "result in shootings and holdups in the county."

Efforts were made yesterday to get Prentiss to attend the investigation in Upper Marlboro but late in the afternoon he had not been located.

State's Attorney Bowie and Chief Brown were questioning witnesses in Bowie's office last night. Among them were Policeman Lawson Peed, one of the two Prince Georges County policeman involved.

Brown said a thorough investigation would be made to determine if the police were at fault. He pointed out that the description of the boy given by Prentiss gave a wrong impression of the case and the policeman sent after George. Detective Vincent S. Free was detailed most of the day to investigate the shooting.

Brothers at Headquarters

Two brothers of the dead boy were at police headquarters in Upper Marlboro most of the day awaiting information on the outcome of the investigation.

One of them, Donald G. Mooney, 24, is an Alexandria (Va.) policeman. He said he did not believe the shooting necessary and that his brother was "not really a bad boy."

The incident for which he was sent to the school was one that "almost any boy might do," he pointed out.

The other brother is James M. Mooney, 19. The boy's father lives in Alexandria. His mother had remarried and lives with her husband, Charles Meyers, at the 14th st. address.

The mother was prostrate yesterday.

Detective Free said the two Prince Georges County policemen, Peed and Richards, met Anne Arundel Policeman Mellin and Walters at the Wayson's Corner tavern in Anne Arundel County. It was here that Prentiss reported seeing the boy but the officers were told he was in another tavern across the road.

Began Running

As the quartet approached the other tavern, the boy darted from a side door and began running for the river about 500 yards away. The policemen gave chase. After shouting at him to stop, they fired several shots into the air. All of them said they did not fire at the boy. The fugitive jumped into the river, only about 100 feet wide at that point. Richards shouted: "There he is, swimming."

Peed and Walter brought up the police car and then obtained a boat in which they followed the boy. George stopped on a sandbar about halfway across and slipped off his shoes and shirt and then jumped into the water again. The policemen in the boat shouted to him to stop, and as he climbed out of the water and started across the swampy land at the river's edge, the police began firing their revolvers. They said they did not intend to hit him but merely to frighten him into halting.

It grew dark. The policemen called the Marlboro Volunteer Fire Department with searchlight equipment and about 9:30 p. m. found the boy's body in the marsh.

The body was removed to the Ritchie funeral home, where Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, performed an autopsy yesterday. The bullet had entered the left side and come out on the right, severing the main artery to the heart and plowing through the liver. Dr. Boyd said he died almost instantly.

It probably will be impossible to determine who fired the shot that struck the boy, Free said, because the bullet was not recovered.

Gerard Shea, head of the District Board of Public Welfare, said he would discuss the shooting before the board Monday.

Jail Fugitive

Wife Helps Police Trap Her Husband

A wife yesterday kept her jail-fugitive husband talking on the telephone until police traced the call and arrested the man while he was still in conversation 15 minutes later.

The fugitive, Joseph Daniels, 32, had walked away from a construction detail at Occoquan Workhouse Friday afternoon and disappeared.

He was serving a 120-day sentence for assault and threats against his wife, Sue, and for possession of numbers slips.

Metropolitan police were notified of the escape and several policemen and guards from Occoquan, acting on a tip, stationed themselves near Mrs. Daniels' home, 1449 Holbrook st. ne.

Recognizes Guard

Shortly after midnight, Daniels drove up to the house in a 1950 green car bearing Virginia tags.

Before stepping from the car, he recognized one of the guards. The fugitive stepped on the accelerator and sped off.

After shouting a command to halt, the guard, Joseph M. Broderick, 47, fired a revolver shot at the vehicle but Daniels escaped.

At 8:30 a. m. Mrs. Daniels notified police her husband had again called her and told her he was somewhere on North Capitol st.

Scout cars were dispatched. Police checked all of Daniels' known hangouts on North Capitol st., but to no avail.

Phones Again

About an hour later, Mrs. Daniels notified a neighbor that her garrulous husband was on the phone again.

Eight policemen and four Occoquan guards sped to Mrs. Daniels' home. She was still talking to her husband who made arrangements to meet her near Queen st. and Bladensburg rd. ne., about a block and a half from the house.

She walked to the meeting place while police followed in private cars but Daniels failed to appear.

Police Pvt. Paul SanFelippo was stationed at Mrs. Daniels' home. At about 11 a. m. Daniels called again.

His wife kept him talking as SanFelippo traced the call to a phone booth in a restaurant at 1417 North Capitol st.

Two guards rushed to the cafe and arrested Daniels, still at the phone. He was not armed.

Exploding Wine, Cached In Oven, Burns Man

A hot bottle of wine exploded and burned the upper body of Lee Murphy, 31, in his apartment at 3050 P st. nw., police reported yesterday.

Police said the bottle was in the kitchen oven and blew up when Murphy opened the oven door to put in bread. He was admitted to Georgetown Hospital with second degree burns.

Weekly Bus Pass Favored By Citizens

Federation Thinks Six Percent Profit Is Adequate Return For Capital Transit

The Federation of Citizens Associations last night put in an emphatic bid to have the weekly transit pass retained.

The federation voted down its public utilities committee's recommendation to eliminate the pass and then made its desires positive with a resolution favoring retention.

Meeting in the board room of the District Building, the group, in another resolution, expressed its opinion that 6 percent is a fair return for the Capital Transit Co.

The Public Utilities Commission in the past has set 7½ percent as a fair return. In the current proceedings, the PUC auditors recommended a $2.25 pass, 15-cent cash fare, and four tokens for 50 cents, which he estimated would bring a 6.72 percent return.

The company has asked for a 15-cent cash fare, six tokens for 80 cents and elimination of the pass.

In presenting his committee's recommendation, Chairman Vernon V. Baker said cash and token fares must be higher to compensate for the bargain pass.

By favoring elimination of the pass, Baker said, his committee could urge a proportionately lower cash and token fare.

The federation has previously ordered its public utilities committee to urge the lowest possible rate after ascertaining the facts. The committee expects to file a brief before the PUC before May 24.

President Herbert P. Leeman appointed delegates Soterios Nicholson, John A. Remon and Mrs. Josef F. Vanier to attend a conference on immigration and related matters at the Statler Hotel May 20.

Death Report In Shulman Case Held Up

A coroner's certificate in the death of Robert (Ryebread) Shulman, heavy investor in local crap games, whose body was found in the Potomac Thursday, will not be issued "for at least a week."

This was the report yesterday of Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District Coroner, who said he was awaiting the outcome of chemical tests to determine whether Shulman committed suicide. No marks were seen on his body, police reported.

Meanwhile, police said they found a pencil with a broken point in the Cadillac convertible abandoned near Hains Point, off which Shulman's body was discovered.

A piece of soft lead found in Shulman's topcoat pocket was a "perfect fit" for the pencil, police reported.

Found in the car earlier were four slips of paper, on one of which was scrawled with soft lead a note addressed to "Dearest Rose."

Shulman, 39, lived at 5821 3d pl. nw., the address listed for Rose Marie Stipsky. Police said he borrowed the automobile Wednesday from Robert J. Parker, 475 C st. sw.

D. C. Milk Source Study Set As Dairy Man Hits Charges

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The source—and possibly the price—of the half-million quarts of milk sold in Washington daily will be studied by the District Commissioners at their conference Thursday at 10 a. m.

The meeting was called to determine whether to permit milk from farms not inspected by the District Health Department to continue flowing into the area.

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association has declared a ban should be imposed June 30 to assure the city of "pure milk." The association supplies 80 percent of the milk in this area from District-inspected farms.

On the other side are several dairies which buy milk from farms which are inspected by the health departments of the States where they are located, but not by the District. The State inspection is a "must" under the Commissioners' wartime order lifting the prohibition against "outside" milk.

The principal spokesman for keeping the ban off is Embassy Dairy, which Friday was accused by the Producers Association of instigating the Commissioners' conference because it was worried about supplies if the prohibition is reimposed.

Yesterday, M. Belmont Ver Standig, public relations counsel for the dairy and spokesman for James J. Ward, sr., dairy president, who is out of town, gave his side of the milk supply discussion.

Ver Standig first denied the dairy had asked for the meeting and then charged into the "stigma placed by the association on so-called imported milk.".

He declared that Washingtonians have been drinking this milk for the past eight years and never gave it a thought. He said it has been brought in by the association as well as nonassociation distributors from farms meeting State standards.

The Embassy spokesman deplored the "imported" tag, declaring that often the milk comes from nearby Maryland and Virginia farms, closer than some under District inspection. He scored the "cheaper" milk charge by the association, declaring the price was often higher.

The individual State inspection standards are as high as the District's, he declared, although they differ in one principal respect—sterilization of dairy farm utensils.

The District requires steam—and has since 1925—while other areas permit substitution of chemical sterilization and still others prefer the chemical method.

Ver Standig said if the chemical method is authorized here it would tend to bring lower prices in that it might bring "real competition" for Washington milk sales.

Man Denied Writ Against Transit Firm

District Court Judge James W. Morris yesterday refused to grant an immediate restraining order to the parking lot operator who claims Capital Traction Company buses are blocking traffic in front of his lot.

Judge Morris scheduled a hearing Monday on the petition sought by Charles B. McDonald, 1932 Good Hope rd. se., who operates a parking lot at 1404-1410 I st. nw.

In addition to the restraining order, the suit asks $10,000 damages plus costs from CTC and a court order requiring Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett to enforce traffic regulations near the lot.

In the suit, McDonald said he has rented the lot for $1000 a month since April 1, and because of the congested traffic has lost $30 a day. He said it will "probably be necessary to close the lot," unless relief is granted.

E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president of CTC, said bus drivers had been instructed to make every effort not to block the entrance of McDonald's lot.

Communion Breakfast

The Rev. John Halloran, superior of the Paulist Seminary, will be principal speaker at the annual communion breakfast of St. Michael's Church Sodality today at Stone House Inn, Four Corners, following the 8 a. m. mass.

2 Killed in D. C. By Cars; 7 Die In Area Crashes

Woman on Stoop Victim as Auto Jumps Curb; 3 Members of Family Perish in Md. Accident

Two persons were killed in the District by automobiles last night, following the death of seven others in traffic accidents on U. S. 1 over the weekend.

The District's first fatality occurred early last evening when a car jumped the sidewalk and crushed a 40-year-old woman sitting on the stoop at 727 21st st. ne.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital, the victim was Mrs. Nellie Allene Strother, of 723 21st st. ne., police said.

The driver of the auto, identified as Mrs. Venetta D. Bell, 34, of 2209 G st. ne., told police she had just made a steep left turn into 21st st. and accidentally stepped on the gas instead of the brake.

The car continued its turn until it hurdled the curb and ran up against the stoop. On the way, it struck Anthony Gould, 9, of 853 20th st. ne. The boy was taken to Gallinger Hospitaly with a compound fracture of the right foot.

Learner's Permit

Mrs. Bell had a learner's permit, police said, and was accompanied by Mallie Livingston, 33, of 1326 B st. ne. Both were charged with negligent homicide and released under $1000 bond for a court hearing Monday.

About 9:15 p. m. last night, Robert Graham, 50, who police said lived at 2126 R st. nw., was struck and killed as he was crossing the street at Connecticut ave. and Newark st. nw.

Police identified the driver of the car as Austin Parker Donaldson, 20, of 24 Prospect st., Kensington, a student at Montgomery Junior College.

Blinded by Lghts

Donaldson told investigators he was driving south on Connecticut ave. at 25 miles per hour, was blinded by headlight glare, and did not know Graham was in his way until he heard a thud.

Residents at the R st. address said Graham had not lived there since June, and that he formerly had worked for the Republican National Committee. No other address was available.

Donaldson was released in the custody of his attorney to appear before a coroner's jury.

The weekend traffic dead included three members of a Silver Spring family, and two soldiers from Andrews Field, their lives snuffed out in a three-car collision near Elkridge, Md.

In the second, fog-shrouded accident, two Richmond (Va.) men died in the tangle of an automobile, a tractor-trailer truck and a motorcycle just north of Stafford, Va., about 35 miles south of the District.

The Elkridge fatalities:

William Henry Lewis, 53, of 9928 Grayson ave., Silver Spring, county surveyor for Montgomery County, Md.

His wife, Mrs. Myrtle Q. Lewis, 59.

Their niece, Madeline McFadden, 10, who lived with them.

Staff Sergt. Earl C. Schramp, stationed at Andrews Field.

Corpl. Carl E. Moline, 19, also of the Andrews Field Air Force Base.

The Virginia accident dead:

Cosby Clayton Breeden, 23, of Richmond.

Edwin Ryan Hall, 26, also of Richmond.

Besides the five persons killed in the Maryland smash-up, five others were injured, including Mary Lewis, 17, only child of the dead couple. She was in serious condition at University Hospital, Baltimore, where all the victims were taken.

MARY LEWIS

The Maryland accident occurred shortly before Friday midnight when the Lewis car and the soldiers' automobile met head-on in the Baltimore suburb. The collision drove the wreckage into a third automobile whose six occupants all escaped injury.

All of the fatally injured were pronounced dead on arrival at University Hospital except the McFadden girl, who succumbed several hours later. Her parents live in Philadelphia, but she lived with the Lewises, attending Four Corners Elementary School.

Mary Lewis is a senior at Montgomery Blair High School in Silver Spring.

Sole surviving older member of the Lewis family is James Burton Quiggle, 78, retired railroad engineer, a brother of Mrs. Lewis. He lived with the Lewises and was at home at the time of the accident.

The four other persons injured in the Maryland accident, all soldiers stationed at Andrews Field, included Sergt. Roy D. Ellison, 23, possible internal injuries; Tech Sergt. John Parks, 27, head injuries; Staff Sergt. Edgar Rollins, possible skull fracture, and Pvt. David C. Sullivan, 20, jaw fracture.

In the Virginia smash-up, police said, gasoline leaking from the wrecked tank of the automobile ignited, severely burning two of its occupants. They were identified as James H. Long, 24, and Thomas Whitley, 23, companions of the two dead men.

Attendants at Mary Washington Hospital, at Stafford, said both received first and third degree burns of the body. Their conditions were listed as "fair."

The two others injured in Stafford crash were identified as Lewis Clemmons, 24, of Charleston, S. C., truck driver, cuts of the head, and Sergt. Harry LeStandfuss, 21, Marine motorcycle driver, skull fracture. Physicians at Quantico Naval Hospital described his condition as "not serious."

Dr. Dykstra Dies; Former Draft Head

Laguna Beach, Calif., May 6—(AP)—Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, 61-year-old provost of the University of California at Los Angeles and former director of selective service, died at 67 of a heart attack today after helping fight a grass fire.

He was spending the weekend at his beach home here and volunteered to help put down a blaze in an adjoining vacant lot.

DR. CLARENCE A. DYKSTRA
. . . Dies of heart attack

Firemen were unable to revive him when he collapsed a short time later, and Dr. Raymond Newton pronounced him dead. His wife and his brother-in-law, Walter E. Hartley, were present when he died.

Dr. Dykstra, born in Cleveland February 26, 1883, was a prominent figure in American education and city government.

He was the first director of selective service after Congress passed the Draft Act which mobilized the Nation's young men for World War II.

He had left the presidency of the University of Wisconsin to take the draft directorship. Previously he had served on the faculties of several universities and won prominence as city manager of Cincinnati.

After service as selective service director in 1940-41, he returned to Wisconsin, then once more went into Government service to take over as chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board.

His first wife, Ada M. Hartley, died in 1926. They had one daughter, Elizabeth Sylvester. In 1927 he married Lillian Rickaby. Dr. Dykstra was graduated in 1903 from the University of Iowa and held doctor's degrees from many others.

He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi and of Delta Upsilon social fraternity.

He first won prominence as city manager of Cincinnati, which he served at the time of the great flood in 1937. He was earning $25,000 a year for running the city's government, but when he had a chance to return to academic life as president of Wisconsin he took a $10,000 cut in pay to get back into the field he preferred. He was appointed provost of UCLA in 1944.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son, Franz Dykstra, a Haverport, Pa., geologist, and a daughter, Mrs. Rollin Posey, wife of a Northwestern University dean. They were notified and were to fly to California for the funeral, time for which has not yet been scheduled.

Jim Rayburn Dies; Brother of Speaker

Bonham, Tex., May 6 (AP).—Jim Rayburn, 73, brother of Speaker Sam Rayburn, died today.

Mr. Rayburn was a retired rural mail carrier at nearby Dodge City.

Hecht Company Honors Veterans of Staff

AT BANQUET MEETING—Hecht Co.'s five-to-ten and ten-to-fifty-year service clubs inducted 137 store associates into the organizations at their annual banquet held last night at the Hotel Statler. This group (from left) Charles B. Dulcan, vice president and general manager of Hecht Co.; Mrs. Mildred M. Ehlis, assistant to Mr. Dulcan; Samuel M. Hecht, store president; and Mrs. Betty Pratt, secretary of the Five-to-Ten-Year Club, seem to be in story-telling mood

Veteran associates of the Hecht Co. were honored last night at the store's colorful annual banquet held in the flower-decked Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel.

A packed hall of 752 store associates saw gold watches and emerald service pins presented to 15 of their co-workers who have been with the store 25 years.

Presentations were made by Harry M. Davidow, vice president and general manager, and George M. Quirk, vice president and operating manager.

One hundred and thirty-seven store associates were inducted into the 5-to-10-Year Club and 24 new members into the 10-to-50-Year Club.

Diamond service pins denoting 30 years of service with the store were presented to Spurgeon Nix, Philip Straus, Frank Dawson and Mollie Taebaum.

Ruby service pins for 20 years of service were awarded to 37 associates. Sapphire service pins for 15 years service went to 26 members.

Some 50 retired members of the store were guests of honor.

Addresses were made by Samuel Hecht, president of the company, and by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, who started with the store 38 years ago as an extra Saturday salesman.

Dozens of men who started with the store in small positions and worked up to places of leadership were on hand.

They included such men as Morris Moss, who started 25 years ago as stenographer for the late Alexander Hecht, the store's founder, and is now store manager; and Lou Frankel, who started as a $13-a-week stockboy 24 years ago and is now downstairs store merchandise manager.

Mrs. Coleman Dies; Widow Of Broker

Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, widow of a Washington merchandise broker, died Friday in Bronxville, N. Y. She was 82.

Mrs. Coleman's husband, Edgar A. Coleman, was a merchandise broker here from 1898 until his death 20 years ago. His offices were in the Evening Star building.

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Coleman had lived with her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Peterman, in White Plains, N. Y.

She was visiting another daughter, Mrs. Leo-Rae Axtell, of Bronxville, at the time of her death.

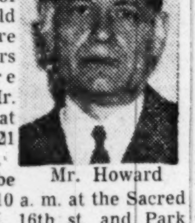
Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Coleman came to Washington with her parents, George and Elizabeth Wood Lowe, when she was 5 years old.

In addition to her two daughters, Mrs. Coleman is survived by three brothers, William Lowe, 5812 5th st. nw.; Arthur Lowe, 2030 Eye st. nw., and Charles Lowe, Queenstown, Md.; and by four sisters, Mrs. Lulu M. Harlow, of 4229 19th st. ne.; Mrs. J. Harry Kettner and Mrs. Carolyn Lowe Rieseberg, of Queenstown, and Mrs. Paul F. Cain, 4207 Tuckerman st., Hyattsville, Md.

Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. Monday at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in the family crypt in Abby Mausoleum, Arlington Heights, Va.

Pvt. Howard, Fire Department Hero, Dies; Rites Set Tuesday

Funeral services for Pvt. Ernest W. Howard, 52, Fire Department hero who died Thursday of a heart attack, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw.



Mr. Howard

A veteran of the first World War and of more than 30 years with the Fire Department, Mr. Howard died at his home, 1521 Monroe st. sw.

Mass will be celebrated at 10 a. m. at the Sacred Heart Church, 16th st. and Park rd. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Howard was born in Washington and attended public schools here. He was with the Military Police in World War I.

His father, the late Battalion Chief Ernest Howard, had been with the Fire Department for 37 years.

Mr. Howard was honored in January, 1946, for rescue work performed at a fire at 1356 Monroe st. nw., in February, 1945.

In November, 1948, he was honored again for rescuing a woman who was about to jump from a third-floor window during a fire covering the entire building at 1227 Girard st. nw.

He was a member of Police and Fire Post No. 29 of the American Legion.

Mr. Howard is survived by his wife, five-term president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, a daughter, Mrs. Mary Jane Smith, and a son, J. Dimmitt Howard, all of the Monroe st., address, his mother, Mrs. Cora Howard, 4425 New Hampshire ave. nw., three sisters and two brothers.

Nicaraguan President Dies at 77

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP).—The President of Nicaragua, Dr. Victor Roman Y Reyes, died at Hahnemann Hospital here tonight. He was 77 and suffered from cancer. President Roman came to Hahnemann—where he had served his internship a half century ago—to undergo treatment for a cancerous ulcer of the stomach. He was operated on April 3.

Last rites of the Roman Catholic church were administered yesterday.

Pneumonitis developed April 10 and corrective surgery was done by his son, Dr. D. A. Roman.

The President showed improvement until Wednesday. Thursday night he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Dr. Roman Y Reyes was elected president by a constituent assembly August 15, 1947. He had previously been foreign minister for a year. Earlier he had served as consul at San Francisco, minister of hygiene and senator.

Hatch Act Changes Called Inadequate

The Arlington County Board yesterday voted 3 to 2 to urge defeat of a pending Hatch Act amendment to allow Federal employes to participate actively in local party politics.

The motion, proposed by nonpartisan board member Robert W. Cox, was opposed by Democratic board members Alfred Frisbie and F. Freeland Chew, and supported by the nonpartisan board majority.

Cox said the proposed Hatch Act changes, still pending before the Senate, would "open a Pandora's box of abuses, by failing to provide Federal employes with needed additional protection against political corruption."

His motion charged the House-passed changes in the act would actually give the Civil Service Commission "authority to deny Federal workers the right to take part in any political activities whatsoever."

In addition, Cox complained, the changes provide that confidential Civil Service Commission files can be made available to any congressional committee, establishing what he called a bad precedent.

Debating other Federal legislation, the county board also indorsed a bill that would provide Federal financial aid to school districts whose population is seriously affected by Federal activities.

Also yesterday, the board:

1. Voted to advertise an ordinance banning self-service gas stations from the county, on the recommendation of Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel.

2. Authorized a $1000 appropriation to exterminate rats on the county dump, at Route 1 and S. Glebe rd. County officials fear the rodents will hunt feeding grounds in surrounding homes when an incinerator, now under construction, eliminates their present food source.

At Georgetown U.

Trade Show And Program Scheduled

An international exhibit and a series of programs on world trade at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service this week will precede World Trade Week, May 21 through 27, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The Georgetown programs will be opened at 5 p. m. Monday by the Rev. Edmund K. Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service, on the theme "Freer Trade for a Freer World."

The programs, to be held in Annex 1 on the campus, 37th and O sts. nw., include South Africa Day on Tuesday, Europe Day on Wednesday, Asia-Pacific Day on Thursday, Central America Day on Friday and North America Day on Saturday. Government and foreign representatives will participate, and entertainment will include native dances, music and costumes.

The Georgetown exhibit will be open today through Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., in Annex 1.

During the official World Trade Week from May 21 through 27, the Washington Board of Trade's world trade committee will sponsor an exhibit of importable goods from at least 14 countries, in the main lobby and corridors of the Department of Commerce, 14th and E sts. nw.

New Assignments

Elementary School Aides Are Shifted

New assignments for District elementary school administrators were announced yesterday by school officials.

The new job designations were brought about by the recent reorganization of the elementary schools.

The administrators formerly known as divisional directors will take over city-wide administrative functions under the reorganization. At present the city is divided up into geographical districts with a director in charge of each.

In the white schools, Miss Katherine F. Scrivener, head of the third division, was named director of curriculum.

Miss A. Grace Lind, fifth division, becomes director of administration, and Mrs. Bessie Cramer, division six, director of special services for children. Miss Ida M. Lind, now director of supervision and curriculum planning, will be redesignated director of supervision.

In the Negro schools, Mrs. Josephine C. Smith, division 10, will be director of administration; Mrs. Alice W. Elam, eleventh division, director of curriculum, and James I. Minor, division 12, director of special services.

Miss Edith A. Lyons, division 13, will be in charge of supervision for grades four through six, and Dr. Willa C. Burch, now director of supervision and curriculum planning, will become director of supervision for the kindergarten through the third grade.

Pre-School Clinic

A pre-school clinic for children planning to enter the Oakton (Va.) elementary school next fall will be held Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. Prospective enrollees must bring birth certificates showing they will have reached their sixth birthday by September 30.

Video Effect On Children Topic of Talk

4000 Expected Here For 9 Conventions

More than 4000 persons are expected to attend nine national conventions openings this week in Washington.

Largest of the meetings will be that of the American Institute of Architects. About 1500 persons are expected for the 4-day eighty-second annual convention opening Wednesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

First of the week's conventions is that of the Maryland-Delaware-District of Columbia Jewelers Association, which will open its thirty-sixth annual two-day meeting with registration at 10 a. m. today in the Shoreham Hotel.

A boat ride to Mount Vernon and an informal dinner in the Shoreham's Blue Room will feature the jewelers' activities today. Monday's program will feature a morning business session, afternoon election of officers and a banquet.

Three conventions will open Monday: the two-day meetings of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture, at the Mayflower Hotel, and the United States Pharmacopoeial Society, at the Statler Hotel, and the four-day meeting of the International Seed Testing Association, at the State Department.

Tuesday the National Industries for the Blind will open a two-day meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel, and the Military Chaplains Association of the United States a three-day meeting at the Shoreham Hotel.

Wednesday the American Institute of Architects' convention will get under way at 9:30 a. m. in the Mayflower Hotel's ballroom. A highlight of the morning session will be the award of a fine arts medal to photographer Edward Steichen, of Ridgefield, Conn., and a craftsmanship medal to Joseph Gardiner Reynolds, jr., of Boston, artist and stained-glass window designer. Two Washington residents, F. Stuart Fitzpatrick, manager of the construction and civic development department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic Association, will receive honorary memberships in the institute.

Symposiums and forums will feature the architects' convention. The annual dinner will be held at 7:30 p. m. Friday at the Mayflower, when Sir Patrick Abercombie, British architect and town planner, will be awarded the institute's gold medal for distinguished service to the profession.

Thursday the Eastern Region, Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada, will open its three-day meeting in the Washington and Willard hotels.

Friday the American Planning and Civic Association will open its five-day National Citizens Conference on Planning for City, State and Nation, at the Statler. The American Institute of Planners is cooperating in the conference, which will feature discussions of planning in the District and Washington area on the opening day.

Architects' Unit to Meet Here Monday

Producers' Council, Inc., affiliated with American Institute of Architects, will hold its annual spring meeting Monday through Wednesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Speakers will include J. M. Ashley, president of Producers' Council; Ralph Walker, president of the American Institute of Architects; R. J. Ashton, past president of AIA, and R. U. Ratcliff, director of housing research, Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The following science and engineering organizations will meet in Washington this week:

Monday: American Society for Metals, Washington Chapter, dinner meeting and installation of officers, 6 p. m., Dodge Hotel. Dr. A. E. Focke, president of the society, will speak on "Mechanical Testing for Service Applications."

Institute of Radio Engineers, Washington section, dinner, 6:30 p. m., O'Donnell's Restaurant, meeting, 8 p. m., Pepco auditorium. J. W. Leas of the Air Navigation Development Board will speak on "Analysis of Performance of the Omni-Bearing-Distance Navigation System."

Society of Photographic Engineers, Washington Chapter, 8 p. m., National Museum. John Christensen of the Columbia Broadcasting System will speak on "Calorimetry as Applied to Color Television."

Tuesday: American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Washington section, dinner meeting, 6:30 p. m., Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md. Adrian L. Terlouw of the Eastman Kodak Co. will speak on "Functional Photography." Business meeting and installation of officers.

American Society of Civil Engineers, D. C. section, 8 p. m., Cosmos Club. A paper, "Pollution Control in the Potomac Basin," by H. A. Kemp, director of sanitary engineering for the District, will be presented in his absence by R. E. Fuhrman, superintendent of the sewage treatment plant.

Wednesday: American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, Washington Chapter, dinner, 7 p. m.; meeting, 8 p. m., Congressional Country Club. Dr. Maria Telkes of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will speak on "Space Heating With Solar Energy."

Thursday: American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Washington section, 8 p. m., Pepco auditorium. W. R. Ahrendt, president of the Ahrendt Instrument Co., will speak on "Pneumatics in Automatic Control Systems."

Saturday: Philosophical Society of Washington, 8:30 p. m., Cosmos Club. Dr. W. Shockley of Bell Telephone Laboratories will speak on "New Phenomena of Electronic Conduction in Semiconductors."

Montgomery Pupils to Mark Music Week

Approximately 1000 Montgomery County school children will present music festivals this week as part of the observance of Music Week.

The western suburban area will open the series of concerts with a program at the Leland Junior High School at 8 p. m. Wednesday. A mixed chorus of 90 children from Chevy Chase and Westbrook Elementary schools will sing while other features will be presented by children from Alta Vista, Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Clara Barton, Forest Grove, Somerset.

The lower county elementary school festival will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. at Montgomery Hills Junior High School.

The upper county music festival will also be held Thursday night at Gaithersburg High School.

Montgomery Civic Group Plans Slate

A nominating committee to select a slate of officers will be named at the meeting of the Montgomery County Civic Federation at 8 p. m. Monday at Bethesda Elementary School.

Herbert Eaton, president, has requested that all member organizations certify their delegates before Monday night since only certified delegates are eligible to serve on the nominating committee. The committee will present the proposed slate at the June meeting. Plans for the annual dinner in June also will be discussed.

The school committee, of which Russell Whyte is chairman, will report on the proposed budget of the Board of Education.

Pollution Is Parley Topic Here Tuesday

Representatives of 19 major industries troubled with water pollution problems will meet here on Tuesday and Wednesday at the Federal Security Building.

Occasion is the organization meeting of the National Technical Task Committee on Industrial Wastes, a committee to consider water pollution from industrial wastes for which no treatment methods have been deveoped, and to study existing waste treatment methods.

Formation of the task committee, concerned only with technical matters, was proposed by Public Health Service officials at a meeting of the Water Pollution Control Advisory Board in Cincinnati last January. Invitations to the meeting were issued by Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, PHS surgeon general.

Fund-Raising Conflicts to Be Discussed

District Commissioners have called a meeting Wednesday of Government and civic leaders in the metropolitan area to "discuss problems associated with multiple fund-raising campaigns."

The meeting, announced by Commissioner John Russell Young, follows these recent actions:

1. Submission of a report to the Commissioners by District Budget Officer Walter F. Fowler in February stating that the increasing number of fund drives is causing "considerable dissatisfaction" among District Government employes.

2. Suggestion by the Community Chest Federation March 8 that a citizens meeting be called to discuss combining all fund drives. This action was supported by the Board of Trade News, official organ of the Washington Board of Trade.

Fowler yesterday said about 170 persons have been invited to attend the meeting Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the District Building board room. He said invitations have been sent to Federal, District and county government officials; representatives of civic, business and religious groups; and leaders of organizations conducting independent drives in the area.

Wednesday's meeting will be a preliminary session with key representatives to discuss problems involved, Fowler said.

A spokesman for the Community Chest Federation, which has fallen short of its goal in the last five campaigns, yesterday said that in addition to the Community Chest and Red Cross drives "there are at least a dozen others of major import conducted here each year."

(Yet it costs so little to own)

JUDGED "FASHION CAR" OF 1950
Yes, Ford has again been judged "Fashion Car of the Year" by the New York Fashion Academy . . . two years in a row.

THAT'S ALL IT TAKES—10 minutes behind the wheel of a '50 Ford—and you'll realize that quality has invaded the low-price field. Ford's new V-8 power will show you in a matter of seconds why America's costliest cars favor this type of engine. (But in the low-price field only Ford has it.) Yet with all its road-commanding power, this V-8 never raises its voice.

For comfort you'll like Ford's lower, level "Mid Ship" Ride and Sofa-Wide seats. For safety, its 13-way stronger "Lifeguard" Body and 35% easier-acting King Size Brakes. And for your pocketbook's sake you'll be glad to learn you can own even a Ford V-8 for hundreds less than most "sixes" (and Ford's "Six" for even less). Yes, you'll find Ford a sound investment—low in first cost—low in maintenance and low in depreciation.

That's what I did! Made a regular Cook's Tour of the stores. Looked . . . and looked again. Compared performance. Compared cabinet styling. Compared prices.

To my way of thinking, Admiral Television gives the clearest picture of them all . . . bar none! Admiral values overshadow all others to such an extent that only one choice is possible.

Incidentally, I saw plenty of so-called bargains . . . off-brand sets I'd never heard of . . . and all of them with the added inducement of immediate delivery. Maybe that offer of immediate delivery tempted me for a moment . . . because I had to wait about a week for the Admiral model I had chosen. But only for a moment. The way I figure it, a television set is a long time investment in wonderful entertainment. And you have a right to expect top-notch performance week-after-week, month-after-month for years to come.

Your best assurance of such performance is to choose a brand name you can depend on . . . a set built by a manufacturer whose product is proved, whose reputation is established.

The fact that almost 100,000 other people are buying Admiral television sets every month, simply confirms what I've already proved for myself . . . that Admiral is the greatest value, the wisest choice in television!

WORKERS' COURAGE AND SOLIDARITY WIN VICTORY OVER CHRYSLER CORPORATION'S BLIND SELFISHNESS

The courage, solidarity and determination of the Chrysler workers has at last compelled the Chrysler Corporation to grant their reasonable and just demands.

It is most unfortunate that the Chrysler Corporation forced its workers and their families to undergo the hardships of a long and costly strike before the Chrysler Corporation was willing to give the Chrysler workers the economic and contract concessions that other companies granted their workers without forcing them to strike.

Despite the 1949 record profits of $213 million, the Chrysler Corporation was unwilling to grant its workers the same reasonable demands which other companies had granted their workers. It is nothing short of tragic that the Chrysler Corporation, while making a profit in 1949 of more than $2000 per employe, lacked the simple, common decency to share these profits with their workers without forcing them to undergo the hardships of a long strike.

Fully mindful of the sacrifice and hardship of a long strike, the Union and the UAW-CIO Chrysler National Negotiating Committee did everything humanly possible to avoid the Chrysler strike. During more than six months of negotiations before the strike began, the Company refused to make any concessions whatsoever and refused to meet any of the reasonable demands of the Chrysler workers. The Corporation rejected two different arbitration proposals advanced by the Union. The Union insisted throughout the strike that the issues in dispute had to be settled on the basis of fairness and on the basis of the facts. The Corporation, however, preferred to hide behind its million dollar propaganda campaign of unfounded charges.

In view of the unreasonable attitude of the Chrysler Corporation, Chrysler workers had the choice of surrendering to the Corporation's blind selfishness and arrogance or of standing up and fighting for their just demands. It is to the eternal credit and honor of the Chrysler workers that they had the courage and the will to stand up and fight for justice and fair play despite the tremendous odds and sacrifices involved in a strike of this duration.

The price of human progress, like the price of freedom, has always been high. Throughout history working people have won greater security, greater happiness, and a greater sense of human dignity only through their common effort and their common sacrifice. The blind forces of privilege and greed have blocked every step along the road of human progress. Powerful corporations like Chrysler continue to put property rights above human rights and to compel their workers to fight and sacrifice for every little gain which they win for themselves and their families.

The Chrysler strike was more than a fight for Pensions, Hospital-Medical, and Insurance benefits and a better contract. The Chrysler strike was a part of a great human crusade to build a better tomorrow and a better world—a world in which we and our children can have a little more of the good things in life, a little more security and a little more happiness. In their strike victory, Chrysler workers have made an important contribution to the building of a better and more secure tomorrow. Chrysler workers have made an investment that will, in the long run, pay large dividends to themselves and their families in terms of security and happiness.

No amount of Corporation propaganda can hide the simple fact that the Chrysler Corporation forced the strike upon the Chrysler workers and their Union because Chrysler refused to grant the 10 cent economic pattern (which has now been finally met in the new agreement) for Pensions, Hospital-Medical and Insurance benefits. The full responsibility for the strike rests squarely upon the Chrysler Corporation's shoulders.

The Chrysler Corporation carried on a continuous propaganda campaign in which it charged that the Union was stalling on a strike settlement. The Company made numerous references to a magic date, inferring that the Union would not settle the strike until the Union had collected all of the strike assessment.

Chrysler Corporation knows that its charge concerning the Union's strike assessment is false. The Corporation knows that the UAW-CIO's constitution clearly provides that every dollar collected through the emergency strike assessment must be spent for relief of strikers and their families and for expenditures directly related to the strike. The Chrysler Corporation knows that the UAW-CIO invited a group of Detroit civic leaders to check all the Union records on receipts and expenditures of money in the emergency strike fund.

This campaign of unfounded charges was an obvious attempt on the part of the Company to cover up its refusal to agree to the reasonable and just demands of the Chrysler workers.

No amount of Chrysler propaganda can change the fact that the strike would not have been necessary had the Chrysler Corporation been willing to meet the economic and contract pattern agreed to by Chrysler competitors. No amount of Chrysler Corporation propaganda can change the fact that the strike was not settled because Chrysler held out in its refusal to meet the economic and contract pattern accepted and agreed to by Chrysler competitors. No amount of Chrysler Corporation propaganda can change the fact that it took the Chrysler Corporation 82 days of strike action before Chrysler agreed to the sound Pension Trust Fund such as was agreed to by Ford, Nash, Budd Manufacturing, Kaiser-Frazer and other Chrysler competitors without a strike.

CALENDAR OF GAINS WON DURING STRIKE

Throughout the first 56 days of the strike, the Chrysler Corporation maintained the fixed position it took before the strike started. It was not until the 56th day of the strike that the Corporation made any concessions at all on any of the issues in dispute.

Following is a calendar of major gains made by the Union in the negotiations from the 56th day until the conclusion of the strike:

DAY STRIKE BEGAN (Jan. 25)	—The Chrysler Corporation refused to fund pension benefits in any way whatsoever. Chrysler said its offer to pay pensions was backed up by the good faith of the Company.
56th DAY OF STRIKE (March 21)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to increased vacation pay by providing a middle step in vacation payments. Thousands of workers with 3 years of seniority but less than 5 years will receive an increase of $31.10 in vacation pay.
56th DAY OF STRIKE (March 21)	—The Chrysler Corporation partially agreed to a Joint Board of Administration for the Pension Plan on which the workers, through their Union, have equal representation with the Company. The Joint Board of Administration was finalized in later negotiations.
56th DAY OF STRIKE (March 21)	—The Chrysler Corporation made its second offer. They proposed funding of pensions for the workers, only as they retired, but provided no protection to workers who had not retired by Company payments into a Pension Trust Fund to cover cost of past and future service credits.
59th DAY OF STRIKE (March 24)	—The Chrysler Corporation made its third offer. They proposed funding pensions for workers as they retired with a $30 million bank deposit. However, the $30 million was not to be placed in a Pension Trust Fund, nor would it have been sufficient to cover the cost of past and future service credits even if it had been placed in a Pension Trust Fund.
73rd DAY OF STRIKE (April 7)	—The Union won reduced payments by workers and larger payments by the Chrysler Corporation for group insurance.
73rd DAY OF STRIKE (April 7)	—The Chrysler Corporation made its fourth pension offer. They proposed funding of future service credits to cover all workers, but still refused to fund past service credits. They proposed, instead, paying only the interest on past service credits.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation finally agreed to guarantee pension payments by establishment of an actuarially sound Pension Trust Fund into which the Corporation is obligated to make payments to cover cost of both past and future service credits for all Chrysler workers. The Chrysler Corporation forced its workers to strike for 82 days before Chrysler was willing to agree to the same sound funding principle which Ford, Nash, Budd Manufacturing, Kaiser-Frazer and other Chrysler competitors had agreed to without a strike.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation moved from its position of refusing to pay anything whatsoever on hospital coverage, and agreed to pay one-half the cost of hospital coverage.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation moved from its position of refusing to pay anything whatsoever on surgical coverage and agreed to pay one-half the cost of surgical coverage.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation moved from its position of refusing to pay anything whatsoever on in-hospital medical care and agreed to pay one-half the cost of in-hospital medical care.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to increase its payment to approximately 50 per cent of the cost of sickness and accident insurance. Benefits were increased from $25 to $28 a week. Waiting period in case of sickness was reduced from 8 to 4 days.
82nd DAY OF STRIKE (April 16)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to disability benefits under the Pension Plan and Group Insurance, and to pay the entire cost of such benefits.
85th DAY OF STRIKE (April 19)	—As demanded by the Union, the Umpire was given authority to reverse, modify or set aside all types of penalties and discharges imposed by management.
85th DAY OF STRIKE (April 19)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to grant discharged workers the right to see their stewards or committeemen and to have their grievances presented to management before being required to leave the plant.
85th DAY OF STRIKE (April 19)	—The Chrysler Corporation for the first time in its relationship with the UAW-CIO agreed through collective bargaining to any form of union security when it agreed to a contract clause providing check-off machinery.
91st DAY OF STRIKE (April 25)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to a contract provision to insure greater protection for workers affected by a transfer of work between plants.
94th DAY OF STRIKE (April 28)	—The Chrysler Corporation receded from its steadfast insistence that the 2-year seniority break provision be continued in the contract. The Corporation agreed to the Union's demand that workers have both their seniority and their pension credits fully protected during any lay-off for a period equal to their years of seniority, with a minimum protection of 1 year for new employes.
94th DAY OF STRIKE (April 28)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to 3-cents-per-hour wage increase for thousands of workers in the Kokomo, New Castle, and Evansville, Indiana, plants in order to reduce the differential in wages between the Indiana plants and the Chrysler Detroit plants.
94th DAY OF STRIKE (April 28)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to wage increases from 3 cents to 13 cents per hour on major job classifications in several parts plants in order to reduce the wage differential between Chrysler parts plants.
94th, 95th, 96th DAY OF STRIKE (April 28, 29, 30)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to eliminate numerous wage inequities by granting wage increases of approximately 5 cents per hour on numerous job classifications.
96th DAY OF STRIKE (April 30)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to contract provisions to eliminate favoritism in the promotion of workers to higher paid and better jobs by permitting the Umpire to review promotions made out of line of seniority.
97th DAY OF STRIKE (May 1)	—The newly organized Pekin Wood Plant in Helena, Arkansas, in which the workers enjoyed none of the advanced contract provisions of the Chrysler agreement, will now be protected by most of the basic provisions of the Chrysler production-maintenance agreement.
97th DAY OF STRIKE (May 1)	—The Chrysler Corporation presented a letter to the Union in which the Corporation agreed to protect vacation pay of all Chrysler workers by providing that every worker returning to work after the strike will be considered as having been on the payroll May 1, and therefore eligible to vacation pay for 1950, to be paid within the month of May.
99th DAY OF STRIKE (May 3)	—The Chrysler Corporation agreed to continue the shop Steward system intact by withdrawing its demands to limit grievance time for stewards, which would have weakened the effectiveness of the plant grievance machinery.
99th DAY OF STRIKE (May 3)	—Contract improvements agreed to in the production and maintenance contract, which are applicable, were incorporated in the Office Workers, Engineers, Parts Plants and Cafeteria Workers agreement, plus some additional improvements to meet the needs of each of these groups.
99th DAY OF STRIKE (May 3)	—The Chrysler Corporation moved from a continuously fixed position on this important item and finally agreed to the Union's demand that older workers who continue to work after age 65 be permitted to earn future service credits until age 68. This will permit workers who do not have 25 years credit at age 65 to earn additional needed credits toward a full pension.
99th DAY OF STRIKE (May 3)	—The Chrysler Corporation finally agreed to give California Chrysler workers the same economic concessions as were granted other Chrysler workers. Because California laws provide disability benefits (hospital and medical), the Corporation had refused until the 99th day to make the necessary adjustments to protect California Chrysler workers.

Many hours of the last three days of negotiations were taken up in working out final contract language on general contract matters and on the Pension Agreement to eliminate sleeper and joker clauses which the Corporation tried to insert in an attempt to deny full pension rights to Chrysler workers.

We are confident that the splendid solidarity demonstrated by the Chrysler workers in their determination to win their just and reasonable demands will have taught the Chrysler Corporation a much needed lesson, and we trust that in the future the Corporation will be more willing to grant its workers a fuller measure of economic justice without again forcing them into strike action. Industrial peace in a society of free men is possible only if great corporations accept their moral and economic responsibility and are prepared to give their workers and their families the things to which they are rightfully entitled.

NLRB Rules Union May See Company Payroll

Unions have a right, during collective bargaining, to take a look at the company's payroll, the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday.

The board declared that the negotiating union is entitled to information on the wage rates of individual employés, but only for the year preceding the contract discussions.

The decision kicks a hole through the traditional argument of employers that their payroll is none of the union's business.

The ruling was issued by a three-member panel of the NLRB—Paul M. Herzog, chairman, James J. Reynolds, jr., and Abe Murdock. The latter member of the board, in a partially dissenting opinion, would have gone further than the panel majority and have permitted the union access to wage information going back as far as three years.

The NLRB'S decision came up in the case of the Yawman & Erbe Manufacturing Co. of Rochester, N. Y., and Local 34 of the AFL Office Employes Union.

The board held that information on wages for 1948 was "clearly relevant" to negotiations on 1949 wages, and was needed by the union to bargain intelligently.

"Most certainly the going rate is a factor to be considered by a union in determining whether or not to press or eliminate its demand for a general wage increase. Likewise, current wages are directly related to the demand for a minimum. Without such information, there is no basis for determining the extent, if any, the minimum wage would affect any employes in the unit," the decision said.

In a second important ruling yesterday, the NLRB unanimously decided that a department store may ban solicitation of union membership among its employes at any time on the selling floors, but it may not make such a prohibition during the employes' nonworking hours off the selling floors, such as lunch time and rest periods.

The selling-floor ban is reasonable, the board held, because the discussions that normally follow union solicitation would interfere with the handling of customers and tend to disrupt the business.

The case involved the Meier & Frank Co. Inc., operators of a department store at Portland, Ore.

The Gallup Poll

Repeal of Taft-Hartley Act Generally Opposed by Public

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 6.—As President Truman heads west on his tour one of the things he is almost certain to discuss is repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. If he does, this is the situation he is likely to find so far as public sentiment is concerned:

1. Throughout the country, in general, judging by an Institute survey of public opinion, the weight of sentiment is against repeal of the act and in favor of keeping it the way it is.

2. However, in the congressional districts within Northern big city areas, such as New York, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and so forth, the Administration campaign for repeal is getting more acceptance from voters. As many persons in those areas are for repeal as against it.

This is of great significance to the Democrats from the point of view of political strategy, for it was defections in the Northern metropolitan areas that accounted in large part for the overthrow of the Democratic Party in the congressional elections of 1946. Organized labor failed to turn out then in support of the Truman Administration.

To the extent that it turns out this year in response to the Truman campaign for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, Democratic prospects for November will be benefited.

3—Among union members, sentiment is overwhelmingly (2-to-1) in favor of repeal, and this sentiment has grown in recent months.

To measure the Nation's opinion of the act at the present time, the Institute put the Taft-Hartley issue into a political frame of reference, with the following question:

> "Suppose there were two candidates running for Congress from your district next fall and one of the candidates was in favor of repealing (doing away with) the Taft-Hartley law and the other candidate was in favor of keeping it as it is. For which candidate would you vote?"

Here is how voters sampled in the metropolitan congressional districts outside the South voted on the issue, as compared with those living in mixed urban and rural districts and in predominantly rural areas:

Vote for Candidate Favoring:	Metropolitan Districts	Mixed Districts	Rural Districts
Repeal T-H	34%	24%	26%
Keep as is	35	50	44

Throughout the rank and file of union members questioned in the Institute survey this is the vote on repeal:

Industry Show Opens Week's Whirl for AFL

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP).—The AFL today began a week-long whirl of activity that is likely to result in some major strides by organized labor.

The official start of what Mayor Bernard Samuel has called "AFL Week" came as AFL President William Green opened the fifth annual Union Industries Show at Convention Hall.

On Sunday, the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor begins its annual convention. And on Monday the union's national executive council opens its spring session.

There is a strong chance that the executive council will approve CIO President Philip Murray's bid that the AFL join his union in creating a united labor front, particularly for political action.

And AFL leaders expect to announce that the International Association of Machinists, which quit the AFL four years ago, will return to the fold. The machinists' union numbers 500,000.

There is likely to be some fireworks about John L. Lewis and his "catch-all" District 50 branch of the United Mine Workers. Lewis once led his miners out of the AFL to form the CIO. Later he quit the CIO, rejoined the AFL, and he finally quit altogether to create an independent union.

Edward H. Weyler, secretary-treasurer of the Kentucky Federation of Labor, has accused Lewis of "moving in" on AFL contracts and jobs in Kentucky coal towns and of taking them over by threats of force.

Weyler said Green will bring up the Kentucky charges at the executive council meeting, which will run until Friday.

AFL bigwigs toured the Union Industries Show today. They called the exhibit "the biggest free show ever staged anywhere." Millions of dollars worth of exhibits, which took a year to organize and assemble, are on view at Convention Hall.

The show, sponsored by the AFL, is a teamwork job of the union, manufacturers and distributors and the Armed Forces.

To point up the teamwork theme, the show presents an industrial peace exhibit. Three Cornell University professors were on the floor answering questions and demonstrating techniques of labor-management harmony.

The Navy put on display a radio-controlled racing car. The Army showed off its guided missiles, the Air Force the nosepiece and pilot's section of its new jet bomber, the B-45, and the Marines built a replica of a tavern where the corps was organized more than a century and a half ago.

Anti-FEPC Forces Ready For Battle

By The Associated Press

Southerners limbering up for a marathon filibuster said yesterday they would wage "all-out war" against the Administration's FEPC bill in the Senate this week.

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), a leader of the Dixie group, served notice of a showdown battle in a communique for his colleagues, saying:

"We are thoroughly convinced that the passage of this monstrosity will mean a 'Pearl Harbor for the South.'"

Democratic Leader Scott Lucas (Ill.) has called for debate Monday on the bill to create a fair employment practices commission. This agency would have powers to combat discrimination in employment because of race, color or creed.

Lucas said he plans to wait another week before seeking to limit debate on FEPC. The real FEPC test is expected on the debate-limiting motion, which requires approval of 64 Senators.

Johnston cleared the decks for action. He canceled, after Tuesday, hearings on a postal rate increase bill before the Senate Post-office Committee he heads. This leaves him free to devote full time to the FEPC fight.

23,000 Youths Expected for Safety Parade

Some 23,000 boys and girls from 21 States are expected to descend on Washington Saturday for the School Safety Patrols' 14th annual parade down Constitution ave.

Sponsored by the American Automobile Association, the parade honors the work of the patrols in protecting fellow students from traffic dangers.

Bands, floats and drill teams will participate in the colorful event. A feature will be a United States Marine unit carrying the flags of the 48 States.

Notables in the reviewing stand will be headed by Vice President Alben Barkley and will include cabinet members and congressional leaders.

Acheson Tackles His Hardest Job Yet in Europe

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

SECRETARY ACHESON flew to Europe this weekend to do one of the hardest and most baffling jobs he has ever tackled as Secretary of State.

He will try to persuade the North Atlantic nations to build a unity of purpose and of action which will have some slight resemblance, at least, to the unity of the Western allies in wartime.

The thesis he carries with him in his briefcase is a gloomy but a fairly simple one. It is that the cold war will be with us for a long, long time—so long that the non-Soviet world might just as well regard it as permanent, and shape its course accordingly.

He will ask the European Foreign Ministers if they agree with his estimate of two weeks ago that Soviet communism is "a threat to the very basis of our civilization and to the very safety of the free world."

If they do agree, the Secretary will argue that each country of the North Atlantic community should take a fresh look at its political, economic and military policies, and should see whether they contribute toward keeping the peace and checking Soviet power.

This has been aptly described as a viewpoint, not a policy. Certainly nothing like a new policy is discernible either in Foggy Bottom or in any of the Foreign Offices of western Europe.

But if the Acheson viewpoint wins acceptance, then, perhaps, the Americans, British and French as the major powers, and the other nine nations that signed the North Atlantic treaty, will set to work to reshape their policies as the cold war requires.

Jealous of Diversities

ALL THIS sounds easy; actually it is harder than anything Acheson has faced, even in dealing with the Russians. It is harder for at least three reasons.

In the first place, the non-Soviet nations are free and different from one another, and proud of it. Their diversity is one of their glories, as Acheson himself has pointed out again and again. And governments with diverse habits, traditions and interests do not find it easy to pour their policies into a single mold.

Secondly, almost every government involved is weak in one way or another, unable up to now to produce what Winston Churchill called the "surge of new impulse" that every great struggle demands.

The British government has a razor-edged margin in Parliament; France has an uneasy coalition; the State Department here is under a fierce attack that is being watched throughout Europe and Asia. Of the smaller nations, the Belgians are torn apart over King Leopold; the Scandinavians are militarily exposed; the Dutch are recovering slowly from the amputation of their Indonesian empire; the Italians are distracted by Communists and ultranationalists alike.

The Foreign Ministers, in other words, not only have no blueprint; they have crumbly bricks to work with in trying to dam up the flood of Soviet expansion, and to make the free world safe and strong.

The Reins on Germany

THE THIRD and greatest reason why the Foreign Ministers will have a difficult time is the complexity of the big, continuing problems that face them. The continuing problems of the Paris and London meetings involve Germany, Japan, southeast Asia and the economic structure of western Europe.

Each of these would be hard enough to solve if the Foreign Ministers had a clear and agreed idea of what they wanted to do.

In Germany, for example, the problem facing them is how (1) to bring Germany into the community of western Europe, and (2) to remove the restraints of occupation. There is no longer the slightest doubt that the Western allies are moving along this road; from the moment they set up the Bonn government they had no other choice.

The most convenient occasion for the next round of concessions will come next fall, when the present occupation statute expires. The Americans would like the new statute to remove every restraint that is not needed for security—every important one, that is, except the demilitarization laws and the continuing presence of an occupying army.

This would set the western Germans free to have their own ambassadors and trade missions, to take full charge of their educational system and other civil functions of government, and to come into the Western community as an equal.

But there is no agreement as yet, not even a meeting of minds, on what restraints are still needed for security. The British, conscious of German industrial competition, are increasingly disposed to keep some brakes on German industry. The French, with their deeply ingrained fear of Germany, are reluctant to change the present occupation law at all.

Japanese Competition

THE PROBLEM of Japan is similar, except that here the United States does not yet have a policy agreed to by all the government agencies concerned. In general, the American position is that restraints on Japan, as on Germany, have to be removed, leaving an occupation army or permanent bases to take care of security.

But the British already complain loudly of Japanese commercial competition, even though Japan has only a third as many cotton spindles as before the war. The Australians take an even stiffer position, like the French in Europe, and for the same good and understandable reasons; they object to the presence of Japanese trade representatives, and are in no mood to let Japanese goods into their continent.

Southeast Asia presents even worse difficulties to those who are trying to get Western policies moving in the same direction. For here America's two major partners, Britain and France, are still hated or distrusted as "colonial powers."

If the United States sidles up too close to the British and French in Asia, it runs the risk of alienating the peoples of Asia whose encouragement and support is the basis of American policy. If it holds aloof from the British and French, or tries actively to discredit the "colonial powers," it runs the risk of weakening the morale and the authority of the only effective armies—the French in Indo-China, the British in Malaya—that are fighting the Communists today.

In these circumstances Secretary Acheson may relax his pressure on the French to give full independence to the semi-independent French-sponsored governments in Indo-China. He will suggest, though, that the French should let the rest of Asia know more about the extent of the independence they gave the Indo-Chinese in the agreements signed on March 8 last year.

Much of Asia has swallowed Communist talk of continuing French "oppression" in Indo-China; the State Department does not believe this talk is true, and would like the French to be more active in telling the truth about Indo-China to the other Asian governments and peoples.

Secretary Acheson will assure the French again that the United States will give military and economic help in Indo-China, although his advisers have not yet decided, after months of fiddle and faddle, whether to give the military supplies directly to the French or to the new native governments there.

As for the rest of Southeast Asia, which means Burma, Siam and Malaya, the three foreign ministers will try to agree on just what each government will contribute to strengthen the present areas of weakness. Acheson hopes the British will assert their leadership in persuading the other commonwealth countries to lend money and otherwise to help in this region; for southeast Asia has always been vital to British imperial security.

It is at this point that British imperial problems entangle American officials, like Paul Hoffman, who have struggled for the closer economic integration of western Europe. Washington has chastised the British on this issue for so long that it has become a habit; now, at the coming London meetings, the British are ready to ask some sharp and searching questions.

Do you want us to go on being a worldwide commonwealth? they will ask Acheson. Do you want us to go on carrying heavy defense burdens in Hongkong, Malaya, the Middle East and Africa? If you do, then you should help us carry those burdens instead of sniping at us on colonial issues. And if you help, then we shall be willing to take the risks of lowering our trade and currency barriers to European goods.

Probably it will be a relief for Acheson in London to spend some of his time on the easier, short-range tasks that friendly

Crime Probe Is Job of 'Distilling'

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

"Gambling today is the nest egg of the criminal underworld which operates throughout this country."
—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

"In organized gambling we are dealing with the biggest illicit traffic since prohibition. Everywhere the pattern is the same — struggling and double-crossing to eliminate competitors for the right to cheat the public."

"It is . . . an inescapable conclusion . . . that in this modern society gambling as a private business cannot operate on its present gigantic scale without corrupting all that it touches."
—Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

ON THESE premises, the Senate has embarked upon a unique investigation into organized interstate crime and its "corrupting influences" on American politics.

The special crime committee, with freshman Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) at its head, will have only one job: to get the facts. If the committee branches off on any other tack, it will be largely wasting the taxpayers' $150,000 which it has as a starting budget.

Kefauver has repeatedly promised he will rout out the truth about interstate gambling and crime syndicates, big-time slot machine kings, underworld czars, bookie racketeers and all the rest. The Senator's office is piled high with newspaper and magazine clippings and reports of local crime commissioners and grand juries, the raw material of what must be a giant distilling process.

For Kefauver knows that much of what has been written is surmise and guess, sometimes nothing more than fancy. He knows that many witnesses, both public officials and admitted gamblers, have told a Senate Commerce subcommittee in the past weeks that they either didn't know or didn't believe there is any such thing as a national crime syndicate.

Criminals and gamblers seldom sue for libel. This has made for some picturesque, if rather poorly founded, stories about the reputed syndicates.

Plenty of Promises

THE JOB of getting at the facts will be tough. It will require top-flight counsel for the committee and equally well-qualified investigators. It must have the full cooperation of the Justice Department. And it must have help from State and local law enforcement officers all over the country. There will be plenty of pledges of help but the extent of the aid remains to be seen.

After World War I, the prohibition era brought on a great wave of national lawlessness and breakdown of respect for law. Something of the same sort prevails today, except that the laws now generally being violated are State rather than Federal statutes.

McGrath pointed out to the Commerce subcommittee that, aside from the Federal antilottery law and some minor statutes, "the Federal Government has no present enforcement function in the field of gambling." Nonetheless, in the curious manner in which we Americans sometimes operate, the Government did put a momentary crimp in the bookie business by an income tax case against the late Moe Annenberg, then the operator of the Nation-wide race wire on which bookies generally depend. Annenberg went to jail, just as did Al Capone, on a charge only indirectly related to his major activity.

A Mobile Element

THE SENATE inquiry has grown out of a demand from the grass roots for Federal help against today's racketeers. Numerous mayors and local and State's attorneys have thrown up their hands in desperation, some after making an honest effort to cope with their local problems, others perhaps only to pass the buck.

The point they all have made is that today's criminals move rapidly around the country, seeking out soft spots in the Nation where they can muscle in on local rackets and establish their own power. Use of political bribery and murder as weapons is pretty well documented, for example in Kansas City. Only last week, two ousted police commissioners charged that Charles Binaggio, the murdered Kansas City Democratic boss, had offered

A High-Stakes Gamble in Indo-China

By Seymour Topping

Associated Press Correspondent Seymour Topping has just completed a 10-week tour of Vietnam, the French-supported state in Indo-China where an almost forgotten war is raging. It was the longest assignment in that little known country for an American reporter since Viet Nam came into being. Topping, who has a background of three years in China, interviewed former Emperor Bao Dai and other dignitaries. This is what he found.

SAIGON, INDO-CHINA—The United States is gambling that a shaky government installed by France in Indo-China will win the popular support it now lacks—and become a bulwark against the tide of communism in Southeast Asia.

If the gamble fails, Indo-China will fall to the Communists, perhaps with costly results for the West in the global cold war. If the gamble pays off, the West will have placed a stumbling block in the path of communism at the threshhold of vast and restless Southeast Asia.

The American policy—a groping one with pitfalls on every side—was initiated last February, when the United States and Britain recognized the French-sponsored Bao Dai government for Viet Nam. France had just granted limited autonomy within the French union to Viet Nam and the associated Indo-Chinese states of Laos and Cambodia.

Rice-rich Viet Nam, with a population of about 23 million, is the major country of the Indo-Chinese federation. With the minor kingdoms of Laos and Cambodia, Viet Nam approximates Texas in size. Strategically, it is now the most vital region in Southeast Asia.

Paris Runs Diplomacy

THE State Department's decision to recognize the Bao Dai government, and to back it with military and economic aid, was taken in the knowledge that the regime had little popular support. Washington gambled that Bao Dai could eventually rally the Viet Namese behind him.

Popular support has been withheld from the Bao Dai regime because Viet Nam was not given full independence. The reservations are apparent in the terms of the March 8, 1949, agreement by which the French created a nation with Bao Dai, former emperor of Annam, as provisional chief of state.

Bao Dai reluctantly consented to French direction of Viet Nam's diplomacy and national defense. Viet Nam was to be federated with Cambodia and Laos into an economic unit and the currency tied to the French franc. Special prerogatives were assured French business and cultural interests. Frenchmen were to be tried before mixed courts and according to French law. Frenchmen were also to be given preference in the appointment of foreign advisers and technicians.

The French government gave the Viet Namese no assurance that the agreement was a step toward fuller independence. Most galling to the Viet Namese, not even a tentative timetable was set for the withdrawal of French troops from the country.

The majority of politically conscious Viet Namese have continued to base their intense hopes for independence upon the Vietminh, league for the independence of Viet Nam, led by the Communist, Ho Chi Minh. Many Viet Namese independents have given their tacit support to the Vietminh by refusing to cooperate with the Bao Dai regime.

Russia Forced Hand

IN 1949, the State Department could afford to look with grave doubts at the French role in Indo-China. What precipitated last February's Anglo-American alignment with the French in Indo-China was the unexpected recognition of the Ho Chi Minh regime by Russia and Communist China.

The Soviet bloc's action signaled a Communist political offensive in Southeast Asia. The Chinese Communists had already reached the north Indo-China border and were cooperating with the Vietminh.

Vietminh forces have been fighting since 1946 to prevent a postwar restoration of French rule over Viet Nam. An estimated 20 percent Communist element in the Vietminh controls the Vietminh army and the key posts in Ho Chi Minh's government, which functions in the "resistance zone."

There is no evidence to prove that the Chinese Communists are supplying arms to the Vietminh on any large scale. But there are good indications that the groundwork for an aid program is being laid.

Many observers doubt that Ho would invite Chinese Communist troops to enter his country. The Viet Namese have always distrusted and feared the colossus to the north. They have experienced several long Chinese occupations and are not anxious for another one.

What respect the Chinese Communists

Some Truman Aides Fear Whistle-Stop Slugging

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

CAPITOL Democrats are as nervous as kittens as the President leaves today on a 16-State, 6400-mile campaign swing deep into the Northwest.

They are worried (1) about the timing of the trip, (2) how "nonpolitical" it will be and (3) how the country will react if he decides to "pour it on."

Some of these fears have been communicated to the White House and may influence the entire character of the trip.

For example, all but one of Mr. Truman's eight major speeches may be pitched on a "high level" that could make Governor Dewey's 1948 stratospheric venture look downright earthy.

If the "high plane" advocates win out, his one major sally into politics would be saved for his last stop, at the National Democratic Conference and Jefferson Jubilee in Chicago.

But what Mr. Truman says informally on the rear platform at the 40 to 50 "whistle-stops" en route is his own business, and the temptation to return to his 1948 stance will be terrific.

Local Democratic organizations, preparing crowds to receive him all along the route, plainly expect him to "lay it on the line." Unless he does, a lot of folk who rooted for the fighting Truman of 1948 will be mighty disappointed.

If the tug of war between some Capitol advisers and local Democratic politicians continues, the result could be a really schizophrenic tour, with Mr. Truman alternately appearing as President and Harry-the-Slugger.

Fear an Emergency

CAPITOL Democrats aren't all of one mind on the subject, but a large chunk of them are considerably disturbed about the timing and freely say so in the House and Senate lobbies.

These claim that cold war tensions have increased since Mr. Truman planned the trip. How would it set with the public, these ask, if the tensions took a crucial turn while the President was politicking at a station stop.

The President minimized these alarms even while a House committee was voting a two-year extension of the draft and the House was considering a big increase in the defense budget. He insisted that the cold war situation was better now than it was in 1946 and even promised a reduced defense budget next year.

In any event, Mr. Truman will have communication facilities aboard comparable to contacts he was never without during his 1948 sorties. Presumably, he would be the first to know whether his presence was required here, and would fly back.

Another factor in the "Take-it-easy-Harry" signals he's been getting from the Capitol is the sharp contrast in the Democratic Party's 1948 and 1950 situations.

In 1948, that "worst" Republican Eightieth Congress was in the saddle on the Hill as a convenient whipping boy and Mr. Truman himself was a candidate. In 1950, the Democratic Congress he helped to seat is in control, each member has his own individual reelection stake and Mr. Truman isn't running.

The President obviously can't attack his own Congress on this tour, they point out. It he singles out Republicans, or blames legislative failures on the coalition of Republicans and Southerners, it could make things more difficult for his own leadership. Some Democrats think it's "too early" to kick the coalition gong, insist he ought to wait until the score's in.

Senate Accompaniment

CONFLICTING advice, from another faction in Congress, mostly reflects the views of the local politicians. The locals don't go for this "high level" stuff, think now is as good a time as any to mix it. "Enjoy yourself, it's later than you think," is their choice of a theme song.

Besides, Mr. Truman has a good reason to celebrate. Tomorrow is his 66th birthday.

If the President decides to give the station-side throngs what they want and "pour it on," the Senate will provide an appropriate backdrop.

The long-awaited Southern filibuster against the fair employment practices bill is slated to get under way tomorrow and will probably rage, with sound accompaniment, throughout his tour.

The Administration has long contended that the coalition's so-called Wherry cloture rule "won't work" to break a filibuster. Thus the temptation may be great to tee off against Kenneth S. Wherry, Senate Republican leader, particularly in passing through Wherry's home State of Nebraska.

Congress also is wondering, with mixed emotions, how Mr. Truman will face up to another temptation. In passing through the home State of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), what will be say about the Senator's Red charges? In pot boiling Wisconsin can he afford to pass them up?

In that connection, those who planned his itinerary gave Mr. Truman an interesting alternative. His train crosses Wisconsin on a Sunday. During the 1948 campaign, Mr. Truman had one unbroken rule; "No political speeches on the Sabbath."

Fishbait's Formals

HOUSE members have discovered an infallible way to tell when Congress is about to have a distinguished visitor.

Before every such visitation, House Doorkeeper William M. (Fishbait) Miller, who leads official guests down the aisle, dons a double-breasted blue serge suit.

Fishbait calls it his "undertaker's suit."

Last Thursday, Miller showed up bright and early in his official uniform. One of the leaders called him over.

"Well, Fishbait, I see you have on your undertaker's suit. Who's it going to be today?"

The official guest, of course, was Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan.

The ABC of Politics

DEFEAT of Senator Claude Pepper by Representative George Smathers in last Tuesday's Florida primaries has been custom tailored to fit every sort of interpretation politically.

But it means only one thing to the growing number of House members gunning for Senatorial seats—that years of Senate seniority may be a liability rather than an asset in this election.

Congressmen who expect to be Senators make out a good case that one large factor in Pepper's upset was a growing swing of voter sentiment "against the ins." Observers who have been scouting another close primary contest say they sense the same tide in Oklahoma.

There, Senator Elmer Thomas, who has served in the Senate a quarter of a century, is having a rough time on the seniority issue from Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney.

The Monroney forces never miss an opportunity to point out that the septuagenarian Thomas has been on the public payroll ever since Oklahoma became a State in 1907.

Singing commercials and the widely advertized slogan of a name brand cigarette have added oomph to Monroney's campaign.

The slogan: "L.S. M.F.T." In broadcasts and stump speeches all over the State, Monroney backers are telling the voters it means: "Let's Substitute Monroney for Thomas."

The slogan is catching on since it was cleverly publicized by a formal request to the cigarette company for permission to use the initials. The company, tongue in cheek, denied permission. But Monroney found there was no copyright law covering use of initials.

Parodies on such Irish ballads as "The Wearing of the Green" and "McNamara's Band" enliven the singing commercials. Thomas becomes "Elmer" in the commercials. And McNamara's Band becomes "Mike Monroney's Band."

Say Where

DELUGED with letters from back home demanding cuts in Federal spending, Congressmen have been hard put to it in recent weeks to find an answer.

What puzzled them most was that some of the same constituents persistently requested more appropriations for some projects.

Pennsylvania's Representative Augustine B. Kelley (D.), who wants to economize but can't find a way, finally hit on an answer to the barrage of mail.

When some 50 Keystone Staters wrote him to get busy and balance the budget, he answered each letter something like this:

"Dear Mr. Doe:

"I greatly appreciate your letter urging more economy in Government. That is exactly what I favor. Would you mind sitting down and writing me exactly what items we can cut?"

The flood of mail stopped. Thus far Kelley hasn't received a single reply.

Rhetorical Question

WHEN Senate Democrats set out last week to find a parliamentary way to call Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), a liar, Capitol old-timers searched the records for a precedent.

They discovered that many Senators over the years have hurled the lie at one another, but never in mass formation.

Incidentally, they dug up one of the most unusual methods ever used to call a colleague a liar without having the offensive language expunged from the Record. It happened a quarter century ago, on March 14, 1925, following a row between Senators Richard Ernst (D., Ky.), and James Couzens (R., Mich.).

Ernst tossed the lie at Couzens by asking the Senate's presiding officer to answer a parliamentary inquiry.

Blandly inquired Ernst:

"I wish to know if there be any way under the rules of the Senate whereby I can, without breaking those rules and without offending the Senators about me, call a fellow member a wilful, malicious and wicked liar? Is there any way of doing that?"

Before the presiding officer could answer, two Senators made a point of order that Ernst had already broken the rules, and the chair ordered him to take his seat. But the words remain to this day in the official record of Senate proceedings.

West Faces Dilemma in Dealings With Viet Namese

themselves have for the frontier stems from the knowledge that to cross may start an international war.

Top French officers do not believe that enough material can be supplied across the border to the Vietminh to enable Ho to take the major French positions by frontal assault. The Vietminh strategy will remain one of attempting to bleed the French until sheer cost drives them from Indo-China.

Saps French Resources

THE Russians, however are already reaping great benefits from the war in Viet Nam. The Vietminh is pinning down more than 100,000 French troops who could be used in western Europe. Once a source of wealth, Indo-China has become a great drain on France. Officials estimate that one eighth of the French budget goes to Indo-China to finance the war, support the currency and maintain the civil administration.

The Communist thrust into Southeast Asia has one purpose classic to Communist global strategy. It is to deprive the western powers of markets and raw material sources so as to weaken their domestic economic position.

Strategic bases are another consideration. A successful drive will carry Soviet influence to the flank of a restless India, which has yet to recognize either Ho or Bao Dai.

In dealing with the Viet Namese, the west now faces a difficult dilemma:

Most non-Communist Viet Namese who are politically conscious, including Catholics, consider getting rid of the last vestiges of French colonialism as their primary problem. They consider secondary the problem of resisting Communist regimentation if Ho Chi Minh wins.

American officials look hopefully to the Bao Dai government as the only means of eventually satisfying Viet Namese demands for independence without allowing the country to pass under Communist domination. They have obliquely encouraged the new government to seek the most liberal interpretation of its 1949 agreement with France.

Many Viet Namese, particularly those associated with the Bao Dai government, hope they can use the United States as a lever to achieve greater independence from France. Viet Namese officials understand they can win native popular support only by riding the wave of nationalistic feeling that demands complete independence.

An Embryo Army

AMERICAN sympathy with Viet Namese aspirations for independence has evoked a sharp response from the French. They have warned publicly that France will not continue to fight in Indo-China if her colonial interests are to be sacrificed later.

French officials say that if their army left Indo-China now, the Vietminh would overrun the country in a few weeks. The Bao Dai government has only begun with French help to build an army whose loyalty has yet to be proved.

Bao Dai's army consists of about 3000 men in training. Officer personnel is almost completely lacking. The United States is depended upon for the material to equip the army.

Bao Dai has the rather uncertain support of several large semi-independent factions which have armies of their own. The Cao Dai religious sect is the largest, with an army of about 25,000. Cao Dai has some two million members in Cochin China and combines several religions, including Christian, Buddhist and Confucian. Other groups nominally aligned with Bao Dai would bring the total armed support of Bao Dai to 50,000. All of them are paid by the French.

Viet Nam is made up of the provinces of Cochin China, Tonkin and Annam.

Hottest in Tonkin

MORE than 130,000 French troops are locked in a savage and almost forgotten war with Ho's forces. The French in Cochin China generally have cleared major Vietminh forces from the region north of Saigon. The most important part of the war is being fought in Tonkin, whose sturdy, active people live on the delta of the Red River, one of the most densely populated areas in the world. The rest of the province is mountainous, and the delta yields just enough food to feed the province's population.

Ho's best troops—some 30,000 of an estimated 70,000 regulars for all Viet Nam—are in Tonkin. Tonkinese Vietminh militia, or "popular troops," similarly number 30,000 of a total of 70,000 irregulars. The Vietminh military center, and probably the political capital, is in the mountains at Thai Nguyen, 45 miles north of Hanoi, which is the big French bastion city in Tonkin.

Annam, a long, narrow coastal plain backed by the Annamite chain of mountains, is poor and sparsely populated. The French hold only the major coastal towns and the Vietminh have free access to the rest.

Most Frenchmen in Indo-China see little future for themselves. There is a growing movement to get out. A few are still making big profits. They are merchants exploiting the lopsided exchange rates and others working various exchange rackets at the expense of the French taxpayer, who is supporting the Indo-Chinese piastre.

100,000 Casualties

THE burden on the French is getting unbearable, both in casualties and financially, for a war that is not popular at home. To stay in Indo-China, the French want aid from the United States, and they are thinking in terms of hundreds of millions of dollars.

In three years the French probably have suffered nearly 100,000 casualties in those disabled by disease, killed and wounded. The French estimate war damage to their properties at $140,000,000. The 1949 French budget allocated 106 million francs for solely military expenditures in Indo-China. The official exchange rate is 350 francs to a dollar.

The war has cost the Communist-led Vietminh and all the Viet Namese people a good deal more. Villages and towns have been leveled, communications destroyed, production crippled and grain left rotting beside blockaded roads.

The French fought to protect about $1,100,000,000 in investments. Indo-China was also a growing center of French culture. If France lost this important part of its empire, it would be taking a long step toward being reduced to a third-rate European power.

When it became apparent that military means alone could not defeat the Vietminh, the French searched for a complementary political solution. They found the "Bao Dai solution." Frenchmen admit "it is a bad one but the only solution."

CONCLUSION of the March 8 agreement was a victory for Leon Pignon, able and respected French high commissioner for Indo-China. It had taken the French parliament almost a year to ratify the agreement. Elements of the left and the right had combined to oppose ratification.

The left favored complete concession to Ho Chi Minh. The right feared that Viet Namese internal autonomy would endanger French investments.

Americans know little about Indo-China. Even the State Department has lacked full information. When the decision to recogniez the Bao Dai government was made, the United States had only a small and overworked consular staff in the country.

There are many ready to shift the blame for any kind of fiasco in Indo-China onto American shoulders. And there is danger of alienating the Asiatics if the United States becomes identified with an unpopular colonial policy.

Bao Dai and Ho know that whichever wins the majority support of the passionately nationalistic Viet Namese ultimately conquers.

Retained by Japs

BAO DAI mounted the "dragon throne" of Annam, now central Viet Nam, after seven years of schooling in France. It gave him only token powers, such as ruling head of the Annamite religion, which is a mixture of Buddhism and ancestor worship. The Japanese kept him on the throne when they seized Indo-China in 1945.

When Ho proclaimed his "Democratic Peoples Republic of Viet Nam" in August, 1945, Bao Dai abdicated but was "retained" as "high councilor." He escaped soon after to Hongkong.

Bao Dai is married to a Catholic. At 37, he is a shrewd politician and an accomplished sportsman. Stocky, fleshy, he likes to wear American style sports clothes.

Bao Dai left exile to sign the 1949 agreement and become provisional chief of state. General elections for a constituent assembly are scheduled to be held after peace is restored. The assembly must frame a constitution defining Bao Dai's future position.

The chief of state cannot find men for his government who will give it stature. Those few nationalist leaders not committed to Ho are waiting for Bao Dai to gain more independence, and to see if popular support will swing from Ho.

Fear of the Vietminh is another factor. Vietminh secret police and terrorists are everywhere.

The French are stern in the handling of any Viet Namese suspected of Vietminh activity. French police do not hesitate to put to the torch villages thought to have harbored Vietminh.

Millions 'In Between'

IN THE center between Bao Daists and the Vietminh are those without politics, perhaps most of the 23 million Viet Namese. They are largely simple rice farmers. The French claim these are not interested in independence and only want peace. But if a spark has been ignited among them, it came from Ho Chi Minh.

Ho Chi Minh was born 56 years ago in Annam, the son of a petty official. He settled in Paris at 25 and followed a grueling regimen of self-education. By 1921, Ho was an active Communist and a leading opponent of French colonial policies.

He went to Moscow in 1923 as a delegate to the "Peasant International" and stayed to study. He reappeared two years later in Canton, deep in revolutionary work for Indo-China. In 1931, he organized the Indo-Chinese Communist Party, and in the same year directed an unsuccessful revolt against the French in his country.

By this time, he was Comintern agent for Southeast Asia. His underground activity landed him in a British prison for 18 months. In 1940 he organized the Vietminh, and with Allied support based himself in the north Indo-China mountains to fight a guerilla war against the Japanese.

When Ho arrived in Hanoi in August, 1945, he was "Uncle Ho," the universally acknowledged leader of the Viet Namese independence movement.

Rumors of Death

FOR THREE years no foreign correspondent has seen Ho, a small, slender, tubercular man with intense eyes and a thin, straggling beard. There have been rumors of his death; other rumors say he has lost power to fanatical Communist lieutenants.

But according to the Vietminh radio, which presumably broadcasts from his capital in the northern mountains, Ho Chi Minh is still President and Premier.

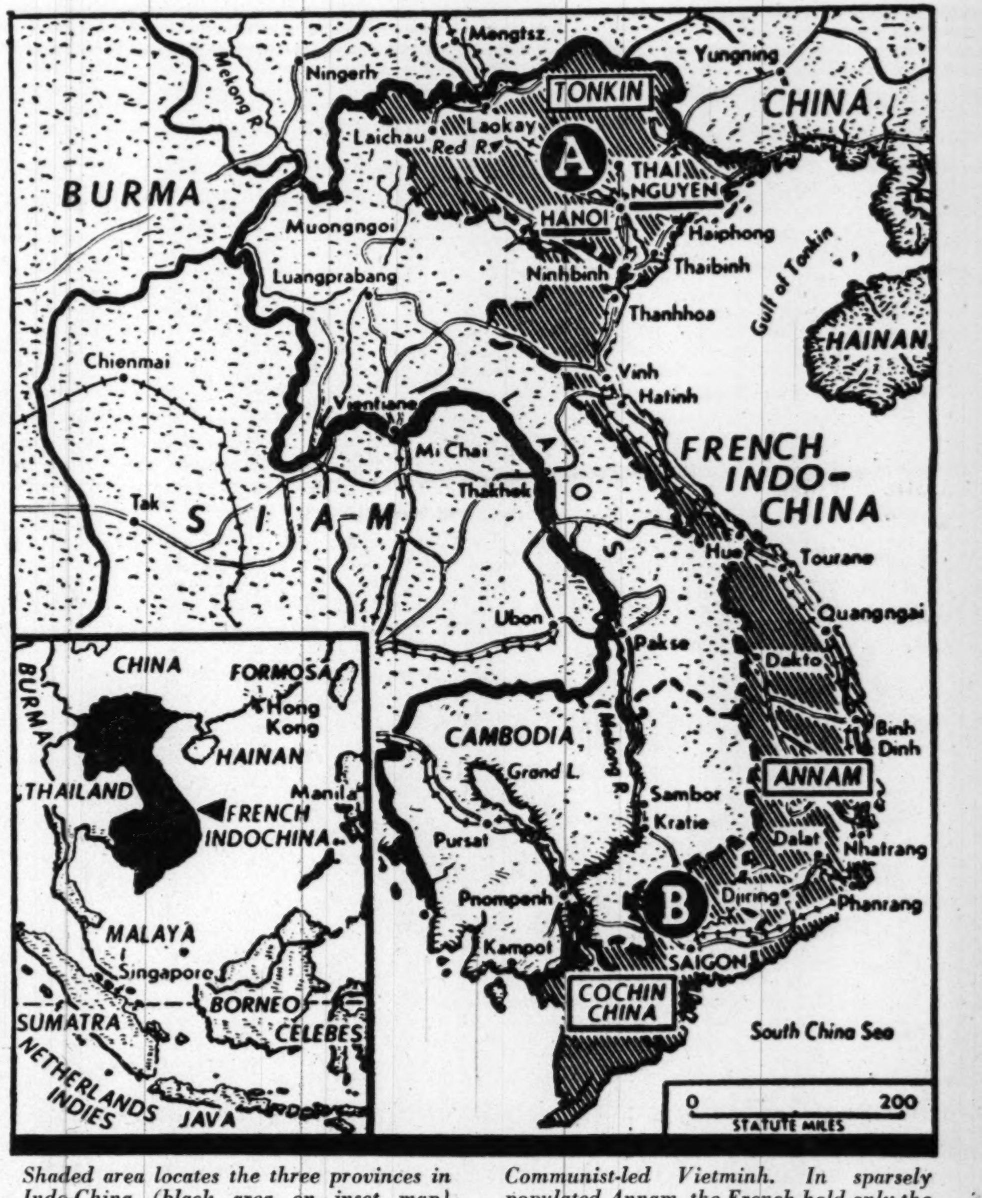
The French army is made up of Foreign Legionnaires, half of whom are German war veterans, such colonials as the Moroccans and African Senegalese, and regular French forces. It is supported by a small air-force made up of transport aircraft and less than 100 fighter planes, mostly American-type P-61 Kingcobras.

Morale is not good in a war that is not even popular at home. Military equipment dates back to the last war.

The war is not one of great masses of men colliding. It is a war of surprise attacks on isolated French garrisons, of ambush and massacre, and ruthless retaliation against Vietminh villages.

This war escaped world attention because of major events elsewhere and to some extent because of French press censorship. The arrival of Chinese Communist armies at Viet Nam's northern border, however, put Indo-China on the international stage.

This is accepted as fact for a long time to come: If French troops leave Indo-China, the gold-star-on-red flag of the Vietminh will be hoisted in Saigon not many days after the last French transport leaves the city's river port.



Shaded area locates the three provinces in Indo-China (black area on inset map) which comprise Viet Nam. The most important part of the war there is being fought in Tonkin (A), where Hanoi is the French bastion city, and Thai Nguyen, 45 miles north, is the military center for the Communist-led Vietminh. In sparsely populated Annam, the French hold only the major coastal towns, but in Cochin China (B) the French have cleared Vietminh forces from the area north of Saigon. Laos and Cambodia are minor kingdoms of Indo-China them bribes to "open up" parts of Missouri.

Law Maze Is a Boon to Criminal

The major reason for attacking the crime problem on a national basis, as the Senate committee will do, grows out of the peculiar Federal nature of our Republic. Criminal laws are traditionally State laws. The Federal Government has used the power it has over interstate commerce to hamper certain types of crimes—white slavery, auto thefts, kidnapings, stolen arms, lotteries and a few others—but generally criminals must be caught and prosecuted under 49 different sets of laws for the States and the District.

Within the States there are many jurisdictions, and lawyers are bird dogs at discovering ways of playing off one against another.

In California and Florida, long and expensive legal battles have been fought between State authorities and race wire service owners over the State's right to cut their lines. In both cases the States won. In Florida, the result was a big boost in the legal betting at the race track parimutuel machines on which the State collects a share.

But in California, a second legal case pretty much nullified the first. For the courts decided that mere transmission of the gambling information was not in itself a crime.

Nationally, the same rule holds. That is exactly why the Attorney General's Crime Conference, which met here in February, recommended a Federal law to ban interstate transmission by wire, phone or radio of gambling information. A bill to accomplish this was submitted by McGrath and an alternate by the Federal Communications Commission.

But the hearings by the McFarland Committee have made it clear that such a statute is tough to write, perhaps next to impossible to enforce without wire tapping, and unpopular in a lot of legitimate quarters outside the gambling world.

The basis on which race track betting operates, it seems reasonably clear from the testimony, is the Nation-wide wire service of Continental Press. For this service, the regular press associations pay less than $100 a week for the right to send it to daily newspapers.

But Continental's "distributors" pay up to $6000 a week, Continental officials testified. These officials, wise in the knowledge of Annenberg's troubles with the law before the wire service was reorganized, appear to have carefully closed their eyes and ears, at least legally speaking, to the identity of the ultimate customers who buy the service in such numbers and at such prices that the distributor can afford to pay Continental up to $6000 a week.

In a way, it has been a tragedy to bring such notorious figures as Frank Costello and Frank Erickson before a Senate committee without any prior investigatory work. For this has taken the edge off their undoubted fear of an appearance before Senators.

It has been charged that the Kefauver committee is likely to protect Democratic politicians who may turn up in the course of inquiry. That is possible, and the cynical on Capitol Hill are ready to discount the committee already on that score. But this reporter's observations of Kefauver's activities in the Senate don't square with any such view.

It also has been asked how a group of Senators, even if they have some good investigators and a sharp lawyer or two, can ferret out facts which neither the FBI nor literally dozens of grand juries around the country have been unable to uncover. The answer is that maybe the Senators can't.

On the other hand, the power of congressional investigators is extensive. Besides the force of publicity (which, for example, brought the New York raid on Erickson's offices after he had publicly admitted he was a law violator), there is the dual punishment power of a contempt citation and a perjury charge. Both have been used effectively by congressional committees of late—witness Messrs. Christofel, May, Dennis and Maragon.

But all of these weapons, if the committee does as Kefauver intends, will be used for only one purpose: to get the facts.

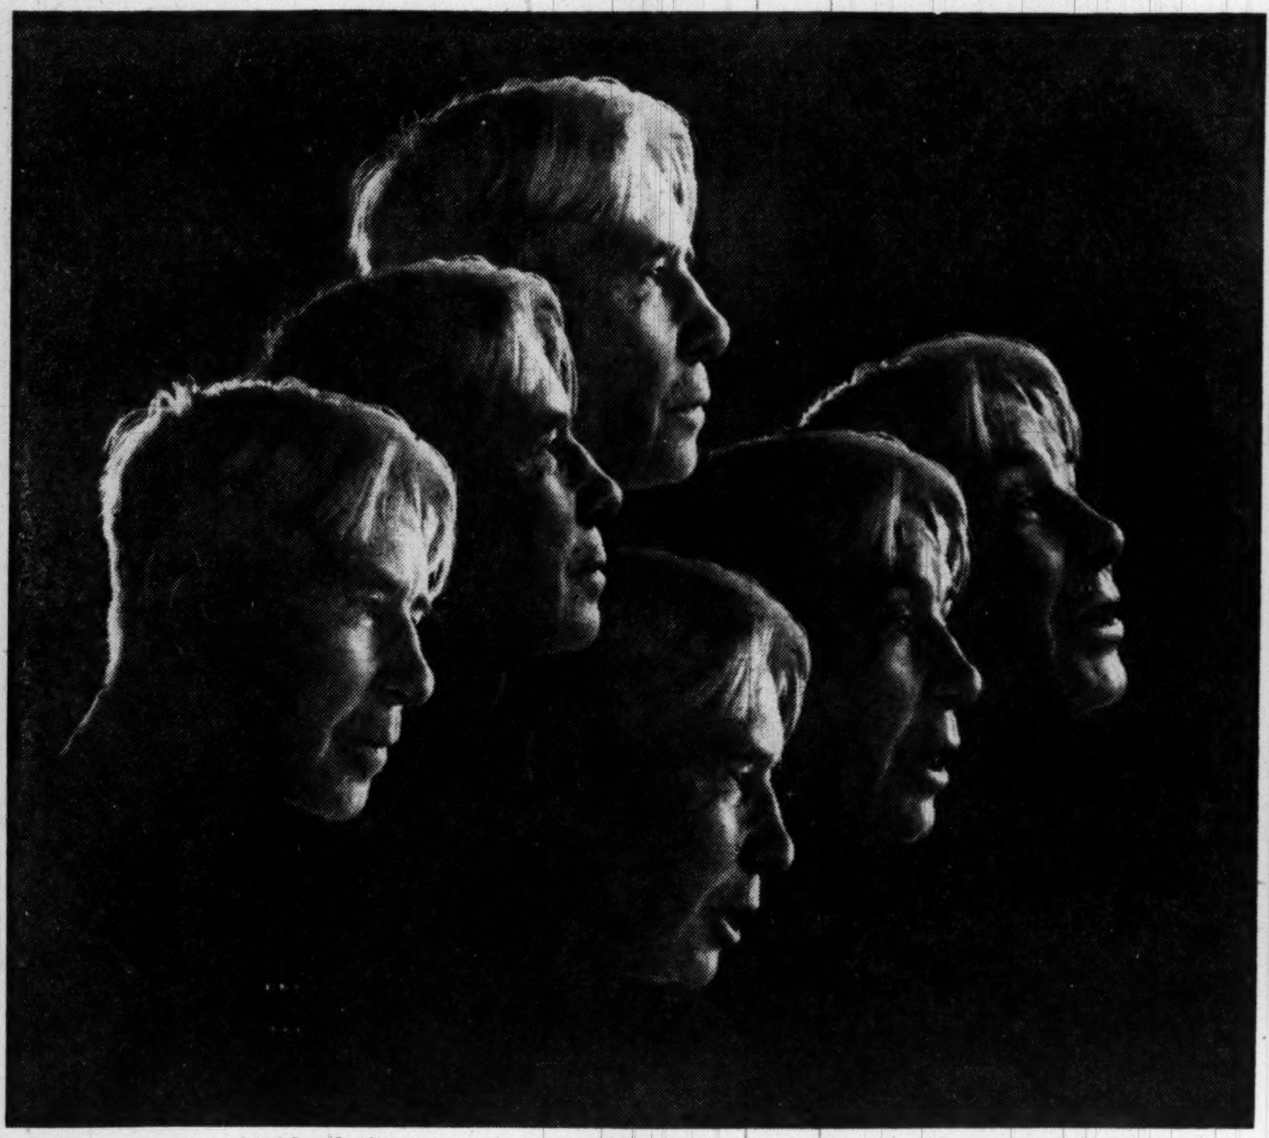
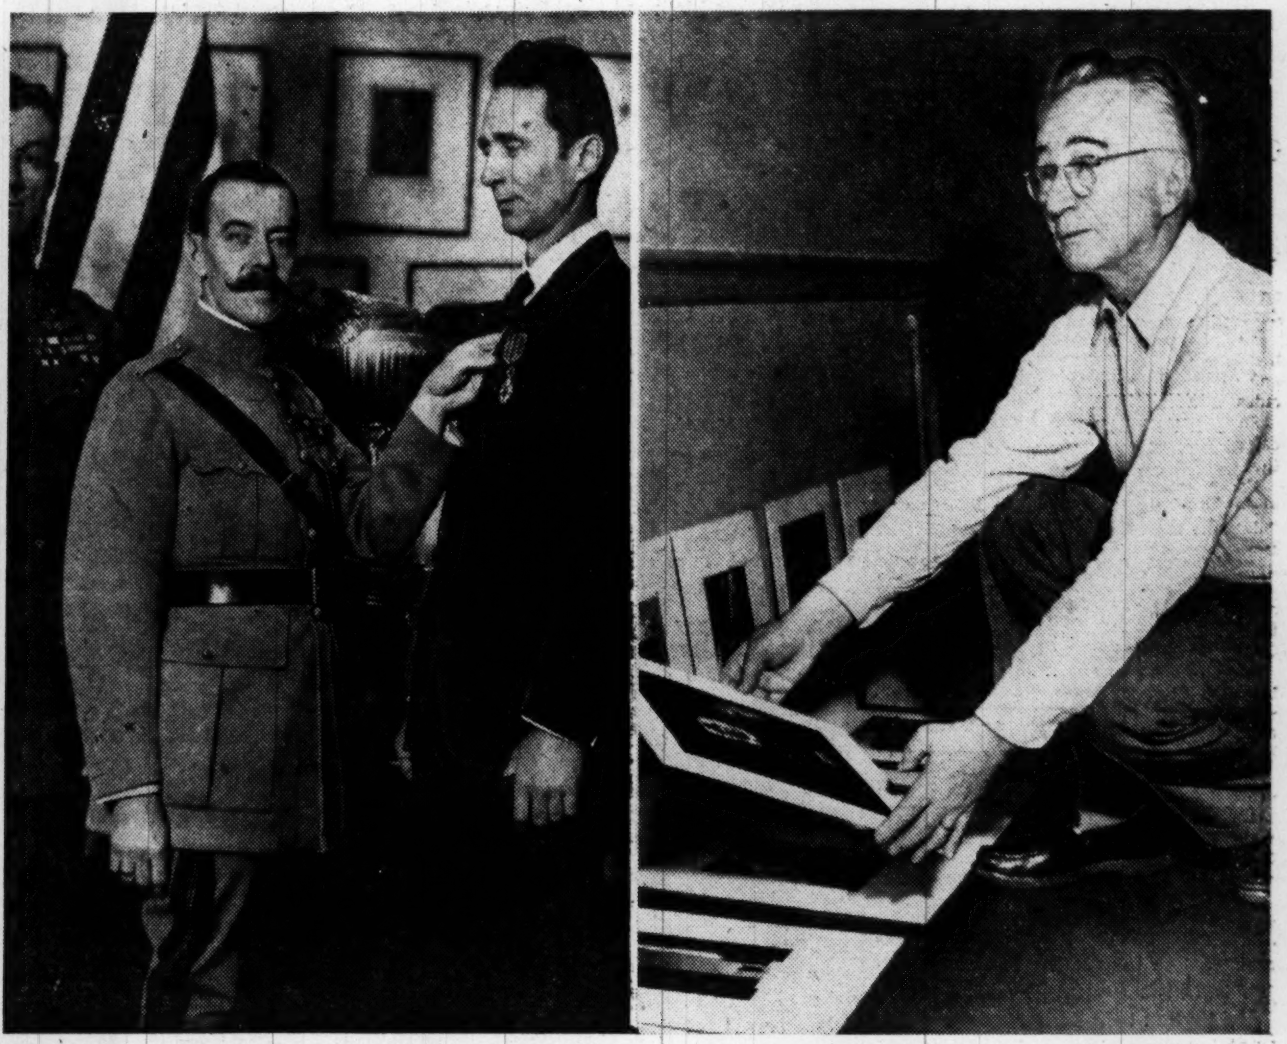
Steichen Made Camera A Fine Art



An example of Steichen's camera artistry: Studies of Carl Sandburg, the poet and Lincoln scholar



Left, the first news photo ever made of Edward Steichen was made in 1919 by Hugh Miller, now chief photographer of The Washington Post. The scene was the office of the Secretary of War, and the occasion was the presentation to then Lieutenant Colonel Steichen of the Cross of the Legion of Honor by General Collardet of France (left). The part of a face on the left edge of the picture is that of Gen. "Billy" Mitchell, the pioneer airpower advocate. Right, Edward Steichen as he looks today, photographed by Harry Goodwin of The Washington Post, as he arranged an exhibit of his photographs at the local headquarters of the American Institute of Architects

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

EDWARD STEICHEN, master photographer, comes to Washington this week to receive another honor—the Fine Arts Medal of the American Institute of Architects for 1950.

It will be the first time a photographer has won the medal, which is the highest honor the institute can bestow in the field of fine arts. Photography was added to the group of fine arts eligible for the award at a meeting of the board of directors last year. The board then chose Steichen as the No. 1 recipient because of his notable achievements in a "long and distinguished career."

The presentation ceremony will take place Wednesday morning in the Mayflower ballroom as the American Institute of Architects opens its eighty-second annual convention. Two other men will be honored at the same time. Joseph Gardiner Reynolds, jr., Boston artist and designer of stained glass windows, will be awarded the Craftsmanship Medal, and Sir Patrick Abercrombie, British architect and town planner, the institute's gold medal for distinguished service to the profession of architecture.

A Mitchell Man

STEICHEN, who is 71 but doesn't look it, has been coming to Washington and getting himself adorned with laurel leaves for something like 30 years.

In 1919, not long after he was demobilized from the Army, he was presented with the Cross of the French Legion of Honor. The ceremony took place in the office of the Secretary of War, and Hugh Miller, The Washington Post's chief photographer, was there to make a picture of it.

Two and a half persons are shown in the accompanying reproduction of Miller's picture: General Collardet, then Military Attache of the French Embassy, who made the presentation; Steichen himself, then a tall, big-featured and confident man of 40, and Gen. William (Billy) Mitchell, who is sliced in half, right down his buttons.

There was good reason for the presence of General Mitchell, then director of military aeronautics. Steichen, as a lieutenant colonel, had been one of the redoubtable Billy's most important men in France. He was chief of the photographic division of the Air Service, and flew over the German lines to make pictures of the enemy's terrain and troop movements.

He took part in three major engagements, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne, and besides getting the Cross of the French Legion of Honor, he won a citation from Gen. John J. Pershing.

Seagoing 'Colonel'

STEICHEN was in Washington again in 1942. He didn't get a decoration that time, but he was on the way to one. What happened was this:

When the United States was plunged into World War II, Steichen tried to get back in the Army. By now he was world famous as a photographer, able to command $1000 for a portrait. He was 62, however, and the Army said it couldn't use him. This gave the Navy its chance—and the Navy grabbed him.

There was a little confusion for a while. Steichen was wearing 2½ gold stripes on his Navy uniform. He was, indisputably, a lieutenant commander, but friends of World War I days still were addressing him as "Colonel."

When Steichen showed up in Washington again late in 1945, he was a four-striper and as Navy as Anchors Aweigh. He served first as commanding officer of the Naval Aviation Photographic Unit and later as chief of all Navy combat photography. In 1943 he was aboard the famous carrier USS Lexington when she sustained a torpedo attack, and in 1944 was at Guam and Iwo Jima.

Captain Steichen made the trip here in 1945 to receive the Distinguished Service Medal for "meritorious service to the Government." The citation, read by then Undersecretary of the Navy Artemus L. Gates, said that the "illustrious photographer" had created "an invaluable historical record of our ships, planes and fighting men."

Author and Director

HE HAS since turned out a book, "The Blue Ghost," which is an illustrated account of his experiences aboard the Lexington. He took his title from the nickname given the old carrier by the Japanese, who, whenever they claimed to have sent her down, found her cruising in their backyard. The book shows that Steichen is a stout man with words as well as pictures.

Steichen, incidentally, directed most of the shooting of the color film, "The Fighting Lady," the authentic story of an aircraft carrier which actually was a composite record of four carriers, principally the Yorktown.

So much for Steichen's experiences with the Army and the Navy. His fame as a photographer was established in the period between the two wars when he was chief photographer for Conde-Nast Publications, Vogue and Vanity Fair.

He photographed countless men and women of fame, and at the same time did a revolutionary job in the field of advertising photography. Telling about those days, he once said:

"After photographing a granddaughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, I would make negatives of Gene Tunney, Norma Talmadge, Jack Dempsey and Eugene O'Neill. These sittings would be interspersed by long sessions with Welch's Grape Juice and Simmons Mattresses."

Price No Object

STEICHEN in that period was earning around $100,000 a year through his contracts with Conde-Nast and J. Walter Thompson. He began charging $1000 for a portrait merely to discourage that kind of business.

"I was very busy at that period, during the 20's, doing industrial pictures which interested me a great deal," he later told the New Yorker. "At the same time, many people were bothering me to do portraits of them. So, as a way of stalling them off, I said I would have to charge $1000 a picture. When that got around, more people came for portraits than ever before."

Some of Steichen's more arty friends, watching the money roll in on him, thought that he had gone astray and become a "tradesman." Steichen had no apologies. Michelangelo, he contended, was well paid for his murals in the Sistine Chapel.

Never a subtle man, Steichen showed his feelings by the name he gave a pond at his home in Ridgefield, Conn. He called it Jergens Lotion, in honor of the toilet goods people who paid for it.

A $50,000 Bonfire

STEICHEN was born in Luxembourg March 27, 1879. His parents brought him to this country when he was 18 months old, and the family settled in Hancock, Mich. As a boy he became interested in both photography and painting. He didn't actually make a choice between the two until he was a mature man, following his service in World War I.

He was living in France, on a farm in Voulangis, 30 miles from Paris. Some of his paintings had sold for as high as $5000, but he was not satisfied with his work with the brush. One day his gardener, a Breton peasant, showed him a canvas, a copy of one of Steichen's own works. Steichen thought that the man's picture was better than his own, and he proceeded to do a drastic thing.

He made a bonfire of his paintings, worth something like $50,000 and representing 20 years of work. On his return to New York he ran a knife through those he found there. He was through with the manufacture of "high-grade wallpaper," he announced, and would henceforth devote his time to photography, which seemed to him "more in resonance" with the way he felt about life.

Steichen spent a whole year, following the bonfire, photographing a cup and saucer. He exposed 1000 negatives on the subject, trying for the best effects and the highest degree of realism.

Examples of his work will be on exhibition from now until June 1 at the headquarters of the American Institute of Architects, 1741 New York ave. nw. The prints, borrowed from museums and private collectors, include romantic subjects, psychological studies of famous authors and actors, fashion and advertising photographs and studies of insects and plant forms.

For the last three years Steichen has been director of photography of the Modern Museum of Art in New York.

"The good photographer of today," he said here recently, "is not satisfied with just the descriptive side of photography. He wants to get under the skin of appearance. And it's that particular quality that makes photography so valuable in explaining man to man."

His advice to a person who is being photographed is not to be afraid, and not to worry about looking funny or old. But trying to be natural under such circumstances, he agrees, is one of the most difficult things in the world to achieve.

Steichen photographed the late Franklin D. Roosevelt three times. Roosevelt, he says, was able to act as natural as if the camera weren't there. He was, that is, except when he was sitting for a portrait. Then, says Steichen, he was "as bad as anybody else."

Steichen thinks that Harry S. Truman grins too much in pictures. The President may feel, he says, that by grinning he is not revealing anything. But as one expert to another—photographer to politician—Steichen would advise Mr. Truman to have "more balance" in his pictures.

'Swarmer' Shows Up Limitations of Air Invasion

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

ARE large, purely aerial invasions—on a scale approaching that of Normandy—practicable within the foreseeable future?

That was the $64 question in the back of the minds of most of the military observers at the airborne maneuvers just concluded in the Carolinas.

Officially, Operation Swarmer was not supposed to prove or disprove such a question. Its scope was too limited, and there are many imponderables.

Therefore, few of the top generals will venture a flat yes or no answer for the record. But Swarmer did teach these lessons, which probably add up to a negative reply to the query:

Airborne operations of a much greater scope than those of the last war are feasible and we should push ahead strongly in this field.

An airhead of limited size, opened by paratroopers, can be sustained and expanded by aerial supply alone for a considerable time, where circumstances are favorable.

Any large, overseas invasion by air alone, under present limitations, however, undoubtedly would fail or be unduly costly.

Much work must be done in the development of new aircraft, weapons, parachutes, techniques and communications, but the lines of approach are clear and in some cases the prototypes are available.

Containment First

THE Carolina maneuvers involved 60,000 men and some 375 planes. As posed to Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, the war games commander, and his aides, it involved the following situation:

An enemy had invaded the United States in Florida, Alabama and North Carolina. We sought to hold him in the area gained initially and then counterattacked by an airborne assault on his forces in the Fort Bragg-Camp Mackall section of Carolina.

The latter was the problem played out in the maneuver. Two airborne divisions—the Eleventh and Eighty-second—seized an airhead, and then an aerial supply line, patterned after the Berlin Airlift, was started to keep them fighting. In most prior airborne operations, a quick link-up with heavier land or amphibious forces was counted upon.

Under this situation, it could be assumed that the enemy had limited ground and air forces which had to come from overseas. Therefore, in the apportionment of aircraft between the two sides, the United States was given control of the air.

It was a 7-to-1 superiority in tactical planes before D-Day. But despite this overwhelming margin, the aerial supply train suffered heavy losses until the bad weather which hung over the Middle Atlantic Coastline last week kept the "enemy" aircraft grounded. By the "luck of the draw," the bases used by the United States planes were open most of the time.

This turn in the weather prevented airmen from learning much about one of the key questions posed: What fighter tactics are best for protecting a combat airlift?

Complete Supremacy

BUT all concerned were agreed, as the maneuver concluded, on this primary lesson: Almost complete air supremacy is required for a sustained airborne operation to have any chance for success.

Another fundamental for success in such an operation, taught by Swarmer, officials agreed, is: Paratroopers must get protection against enemy tank attacks from the outset, or the whole effort may be crushed then and there. Several answers were indicated.

One is close support by rocket-firing jet fighters, which serve as the troops' "anti-tank guns." Utilizing Air Force pilots trained as paratroopers as forward air controllers, this worked fine while the weather was good. The controllers jumped with the troops with radios on their backs to guide in the plane attacks.

But enemy tanks played havoc with the invaders when they had no air cover, and officials concluded the paratroopers must have their own weapons to fight the armor. They recommended further development along two lines:

1. The "heavy drop program," tested very successfully during the maneuvers, in which artillery is floated down with the troops under big chutes. Numbers of 105-mm. howitzers, 40-mm. anti-aircraft guns, ¾-ton trucks and jeeps were dropped.

Even bigger—150-foot—chutes are under development, and it is planned to drop the 90-mm. anti-tank gun, the 155-mm. howitzer and the 2½-ton truck in future tests—using clusters of the parachutes.

2. Perfection of a new type of aircraft known as assault transports. Three experimental models were on display during the maneuvers, built by Chase and Northrop. They are designed to land and take off from rough, unprepared fields to bring in heavy weapons, trucks, engineering equipment, etc., vitally needed in the crucial early hours of such an airborne attack. Officials have high hopes of the craft, as yet unevaluated.

An Improved Packet

ADDITIONAL deliveries of two new types of planes also are needed for successful airborne operations. They are the Fairchild C-119 Packet—an improved version of the C-82—and the huge Douglas C-124.

The C-119 is used to drop paratroopers and heavy equipment and land even heavier stuff once an airstrip is operating. It has large doors on the stern and a built-in ramp, making unloading easy. The C-124 has a built-in ramp and huge clam-shell doors in the nose and an elevator in the belly. It can haul and quickly unload a 26-ton tank, or a dozen jeeps, or 200 paratroopers.

Still other essentials lacking today for successful airborne operations of this type are proper radar equipment and adequate communications. Air transportable GCA and early warning radar of greater range are a must if the airlift is to operate round-the-clock in all weather and alert fighters against approaching "bogies."

Spearhead Tactics

WHILE full-scale airborne invasions depending upon aerial supply alone probably are far in the future, top generals see bright prospects for the tactics tested in Swarmer.

Airborne forces might act as the spearhead of an invasion, dropping in just back of an enemy coastline from island bases under cover of warship guns and carrier aircraft. Supplied by airlift, these forces could then expand and seize a long section of beach.

Then the heavier forces and supplies could be brought in by amphibious forces spread out over a wide area where they would be less vulnerable to A-bomb attack.

Top Pentagon officials plan further maneuvers along the lines of Swarmer to develop the possibilities of airborne operations. They also are talking of an airborne-amphibious exercise, probably along the lines indicated above. Tentatively slated for 1952, it will be the biggest war game ever staged in the United States.

A Radio Station in the Nose?

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Your nose is a radio station, and that is why you are able to smell.

It broadcasts heat waves. You recognize smells when these waves tune in on things that have an odor.

This is a theory of smell worked out by Dr. Lloyd H. Beck, Yale University psychologist. There are other theories. Dr. Beck has some evidence for his. The evidence comes from tests on human beings, bees and cockroaches, and some studies in physics and chemistry.

The broadcasting station for smelling is located in a hollow chamber between the eyes. Here are about five million tiny sense organs. Each is covered by 2 to 12 hairs, of different sizes and shapes.

These cells radiate or broadcast infrared heat waves. The wave length varies with the size and shape of each hair cell, but all are within a narrow range of extremely short wave lengths.

That's the broadcasting part.

Things that have an odor give off particles or molecules into the air. You breathe them into your nose and into the chamber between the eyes.

These molecules are the radio receivers. When they receive or absorb the infrared rays, the broadcasting cells put out more waves, and lose more heat. The cells cool down and start the process whereby sensations of odor are registered in the brain. The temperature of a single hair cell may drop by 1/100th of a degree.

Things smell different because they differ in ability to soak up the infrared waves from different hair cells.

This comes from the fact that chemical compounds can be left-handed or right-handed, like a pair of mittens. These chemicals are identical in every way except in the way they twist light. They both soak up infrared rays to the same degree, so they should smell the same.

But Dr. Beck's volunteer sniffers detected differences. So he had to change the theory somewhat.

Now he assumes that each hair cell is covered by a thin layer of water. When the incoming molecules touch it, they form a film and shrink down the layer of water. The infrared waves travel through this water layer. The pattern for absorbing infrared waves may be different when the chemical is right-handed than when it is left-handed.

The size and shape of your nose has little or nothing to do with your ability to smell, Dr. Beck said. He gives women a slight edge over men in smelling ability. But this is due to more interest in odors and to training, rather than a physical difference, he said. Women simply use their noses more.

Most people are pretty poor at detecting odors, he added. The average person can't tell the difference between orange and lemon odor.

Truman: Optimist

An interesting contrast is presented between President Truman's optimism and the gloomy picture painted by General Bradley. The President, whose sunny outlook is almost congenital, minimized the possibility that the cold war may turn into a shooting war, and asserted that the world is less unsettled now than in 1946 before the advent of the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan. This is true enough, yet it flew in the face of General Bradley's testimony before the House Armed Services Committee only two days earlier.

General Bradley was speaking, of course, in behalf of an extension of the selective service law. But a look at the conditions in critical spots pretty well backs up his contention that "there has been no letup in the aggressive extension of communism toward its goal of world domination." Even if events themselves are not worse than four months ago, he says, "an accumulation of them makes the situation worse." The effect of the President's statement was to undercut the draft extension—a measure which he himself had indorsed. Indeed, Representative Cole observed that if the President had made his statement prior to Armed Services Committee approval of the draft extension, more than one member would have voted against it.

In yet another respect the President's remarks were, in our opinion, injudicious. He said that the next military budget would be smaller than the present one. In the first place, it cannot be determined now whether world conditions will realistically permit a reduction in the 1952 budget. Secondly, there is a limit to the effectiveness of economies without impairing military strength. Finally, the bill for additional aircraft procurement now before Congress, which Mr. Truman referred to merely as contract authorizations, implies that more money must be provided in future budgets to maintain the procurement rate. There is plenty of reason for the President to exert a calming influence in counteracting the rashness of those who see a war around the corner and those who think the United States should arm to the teeth, but we wish he would not overdo it. Peace will be maintained not by soft words but by unremitting action.

Impartial Jurors

The Supreme Court has made evident its concern about the possibility of unfair trials resulting from the use of Government employes on juries. In the latest decision on this issue it reversed the conviction of Richard Morford for refusing to turn over to Congress records of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, because the trial court did not permit lawyers to question prospective Government employe jurors as to whether the President's loyalty order would interfere with their rendering a fair and impartial verdict. There was no dissent from the conclusion that questions as to the prospective juror's reaction to the loyalty order must be permitted.

What divides the Court is whether Government employes should be allowed to serve at all on juries trying cases of this kind. In Frazier v. United States decided in 1948 the Court upheld the conviction of a dope peddler by a jury composed entirely of Government employes. Recently it also upheld the conviction of Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist Party, who appealed from a conviction for contempt of Congress on the ground that Government employes in the jury box could not give him a fair trial in the present "miasma of fear." A majority concluded that Dennis was not entitled to any special protection or exception. In the Dennis case the prospective jurors in Government service had been asked if the loyalty order would sway their judgment.

Justice Jackson voted with the majority in the Dennis case because there was no prospect of overruling the Frazier decision. "We are actually urged to hold," he said, "that the kind of a jury a defendant may have depends upon his political affiliations." Some group or other, he added, is always being investigated or castigated in Washington. He could see no reason why a Communist accused of contempt for failure to appear before the Un-American Activities Committee should have the privilege of a jury excluding Government employes if that privilege were to be denied a Republican defying a committee investigating the State Department. The point is well taken. But the effect is to highlight the danger of using Government employes as jurors in any sort of case where they are likely to have difficulty rendering an unbiased verdict.

Both Justices Black and Frankfurter, dissenting, pointed out the mental handicap that a juror in the Government service would have to overcome in order to vote for acquittal of a Communist. "Considering the situation in which men of power and influence find themselves through such alleged associations," wrote Justice Frankfurter, "it is asking more of human nature in ordinary Government employes than history warrants to ask them to exercise that 'uncommon portion of fortitude' which the founders of this Nation thought judges could exercise only if given a life tenure." To go back to the old practice of presuming that Government employes are biased in all cases to which the Government is a party would make it more difficult to find enough qualified jurors. But surely steps ought to be taken to avoid calling Federal workers for jury service where the nature of the case makes it difficult for them to be impartial.

The 81 Files

The President's decision to let the Tydings Subcommittee see State Department loyalty files reflects, no doubt, a conviction that these files will show no carelessness in respect of security and a hope that they will at last silence Senator McCarthy's howling. Even assuming, as we do, that the President is right in his conviction, the hope is unlikely to be realized. If Senator McCarthy and the little clique of colleagues that has rallied to his dubious standard were open to reason, he would have been silenced long ago. Whatever the files contain, they will not satisfy Senator McCarthy. He will invent new charges and new excuses for being unable to substantiate them.

The files to be made available to the subcommittee are not the so-called "raw files" of the FBI; they do, however, include FBI reports. Disclosure of them is therefore open to many of the same objections that the President expressed so vigorously less than a fortnight ago in his address to the Federal Bar Association. "The preservation of the strictest confidence with respect to loyalty files is the single most important element in operating a loyalty program which provides effective security for the Government and justice for the individual employe," he said . . . "Opening these files would reveal FBI procedures and methods. It might reveal highly secret information vital to our national security and of great value to foreign nations. Disclosures of these files would result in serious injustice to the reputation of many innocent persons."

All this might be said in a slightly smaller degree of the FBI reports contained in the State Department files. Information conveyed in them could well be of such a nature as to make the source apparent or to reveal the techniques by which it was procured. It does not seem to us that this danger is appreciably altered by the President's belated discovery that the files in question were shown to four congressional committees two years ago. The more they are shown, the greater is the risk of leakage.

The strictest confidence will be incumbent on the members of the subcommittee. If this is observed, Senator McCarthy will not be privy to the contents of the files. Before this appears in print he will doubtless have complained that the President's action deprives him of the means to prove his points. He has already raised a clamor that he be given access to FBI files. And in spite of the fact that he himself declared in his Senate speech of February 20: "When I call for a disloyalty file I do not mean that I am calling for the source of information. I do not think any intelligence agency can work and do a good job if the Senate or the House or any other body is entitled to make public the source of the information." The only hope that the President's surrender of the vital State Department documents can prove genuinely effective lies in the possibility that the Senate of the United States, including members of Senator McCarthy's own party, will decide to put an end at last to his exceedingly dangerous buffoonery.

The China Lobby

A House subcommittee headed by Representative Buchanan is currently inquiring into the practices of lobbyists and the means by which public opinion affecting governmental policies is aroused. In its most recent hearings the committee has given its attention to the real estate lobby. Undoubtedly that is a fertile field for inquiry because of the strong influence that real estate interests are known to wield in the halls of Congress.

At the moment, however, there is even greater interest in the China lobby. The methods by which this powerful and active lobby has been drumming up sentiment and trying to get funds and arms for the defunct Chiang Kai-shek regime in China ought to be known to the public. The fact that the China lobby has been furnishing ammunition to Senator McCarthy in his campaign against the State Department is well established. But just how does this lobby operate? How much money does it have at its command? What are the sources of its funds? Is there any connection between officials of China and the lobbyists? Congress and the public has a right to the answers to these questions.

More and more writers are raising their eyebrows over the anomaly of the so-called Soong dynasty (i. e., Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek and her relatives) piling up a fortune in American banks in this country and at the same time urging more financial assistance for Chiang Kai-shek. The last estimate of Soong bank deposits is given by Mr. Constantine Brown in the Evening Star at no less than half a billion dollars. Why, it is being increasingly asked, do not the Soongs attempt "to rescue Formosa with at least a part of their wealth?" That this question is being raised at such a late day puts the American taxpayer in the role of an easy mark.

Yes, the China lobby would most certainly make an excellent case study for the Buchanan Committee as soon as the inquiry into the real estate lobby has been completed, in spite of the opposition to such a quest on the part of the President and the Secretary of State which Mr. Marquis Childs reports.

Nobody's Victory

The settlement that ended the automobile workers' strike against the Chrysler Corp. does not entitle either side to claim a victory. As usual in contests of this kind, both the company and the union were forced to make concessions. Even the pension plan set up under the agreement—the major issue that led to the strike—did not satisfy the original demands of the union. But the company finally consented to accept a funded pension scheme patterned after that of the Ford Motor Co. We agree, therefore, with Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler vice president and general manager, that the strike "is not a victory for anybody," though we doubt that the employes could have got as good a contract at the conference table.

The fact that strikes, in spite of the enormous losses they entail, often enable unions to obtain better contracts than can be secured by peaceful collective bargaining is a reflection on both labor and management. In the present instance both the union and the company knew that a contest of endurance would ultimately end in a compromise settlement. Yet they were not ready to make mutual concessions until the mounting pressure of a strike forced a settlement.

If unions and managements continue to rely on the strike and the lockout as weapons of coercion in labor disputes involving large numbers of workers in our basic industries, demands for compulsory arbitration, possibly for Government fixation of wages, will inevitably follow. Indeed, this kind of intervention and deprivation of the right to strike would be a necessary defense against economic distress and social demoralization resulting from any breakdown of the machinery for voluntary peaceful settlements of disputes affecting the national economy. If private enterprise is to remain free from such restrictions, the managerial heads of large industries must be more tolerant and labor leaders less power-mad. And both labor and management must display the disciplined restraint in bargaining negotiations that is the surest preventive of industrial warfare.

Leaving Out Mr. Dulles

John Sherman Cooper has gone to the Foreign Ministers' Conferences in Europe without John Foster Dulles. This is indeed regrettable. Not in the slightest do we doubt that Mr. Cooper will be a good influence. He is, moreover, a Republican, so that a bow to bipartisanship is given by his selection. But Mr. Cooper, being a modest man, would be the first to agree that Mr. Dulles has a superior claim, both because of his knowledge and his wisdom and because of his greater standing in the Republican Party.

The reestablishment of nonpartisanship in the conduct of foreign policy is still a tiny sprig which requires sustenance and nurture. When Senator Vandenberg suggested that Mr. Dulles should be called to the State Department, he certainly had no intention that he should remain inactive on great occasions. Now the European conferences are going to be very significant occasions. They are intended to supply a dynamism in the prosecution of the cold war, and this intention makes them as important as any conferences in the postwar period, particularly in the light of the crucial stage at which the cold war has arrived. Certainly the Republicans are entitled to have on hand a man who is as representative as could be found and the Nation is entitled to a selection that is also a man of substance.

But, aside from these considerations, Mr. Dulles has immense prestige with the French. They feel he understands their problems better than any other American outside Paris; and, as they are preparing to take several initiatives in the parleys (some of which seem to be pretty unpalatable), elementary prudence would favor his inclusion in the delegation. In general, too, Mr. Dulles has a balance born of experience as well as faith which remains unshaken by the current jitteriness and defeatism.

FAREWELL TO IRISES

I may not keep cold secrets in my heart too long; the numbed desires must have them out and let in air and sunlight where today's threshing and baking need the strength of me.
Youth, have you been too sweet to be relinquished?

Fetch in new books, my maidens, cut fresh quills, and cast the faded ink of yesteryear onto the straw. Our mouldered stairs want mending, our drive wants cobbles, and our lands the plough.
We shall set out new trees this day, young clover, shall clear the weedy brook, and weld new bolts to brace the beam that sags the stable door; and where the ancient hedge has ceased to bear its due of roses in the praise of spring, cut down, and stir the mulch for braver bloom!

Then come no more, young knight of the bidden quest, come no more past these gates, nor wait for me where lilacs bud and soft clouds bed the stars.
The bitter draft is drunk; the day is done;
nor even reverie shall ride the paths ever again, with thee.

Need for ITO

The League of Women Voters of the District of Columbia urges members of both parties in Congress to recognize the need for prompt action on the International Trade Organization charter. Two years ago the United States joined with 52 other nations in signing the charter of the ITO at Havana. United States membership will require a majority vote in both the House and Senate. It is probable that the ITO will not come into being without United States leadership, as other nations are waiting to see what we will do.

The need for an International Trade Organization has become clearer than ever before in our history. While the charter is complex and portions of it are controversial, it provides the best workable agreement on principles that it is possible to achieve. It also provides a roundtable for working out solutions to the complex problems involved.

MRS. DONALD C. BEATTY.

Hotel Discrimination

A few weeks ago CIO President Philip Murray moved out of a Washington hotel (where he had stayed for 15 years because the management insisted that George Weaver, a Negro and director of the CIO's Committ to Abolish Discrimination, use the back stairway if he wished to call on Mr. Murray.

Such a policy is humiliating not only to those discriminated against but to all Americans. It is another example of the gap between our democratic ideals and our practices. Furthermore, it is wholly unnecessary.

In bold contrast stands the attitude of the Shoreham Hotel, where Americans for Democratic Action held its national convention last month. The Shoreham management fully understood beforehand that both Negroes and whites would be among the ADA delegates. The Shoreham promised to—and did—register all ADA delegates who wished to stay there, and admitted delegates to all parts of the hotel without question. No one expected any "incidents," nor were there any.

It is heartening to find an establishment in the Capital of the United States—and a hotel with as much prestige as the Shoreham—willing to serve patrons without discrimination. I rather imagine it is good business practice, too.

FRANCIS BIDDLE,
National Chairman, Americans for Democratic Action.

Hapsburg Illusion

I should like to comment on the second paragraph of Mr. Paul de Hevesy's letter of April 24 on the destruction of Austria-Hungary after World War I. He states that "nowhere did people live a happier life than in the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, at least during the 50 years preceding 1914. They went cheerfully to their daily work and nobody went hungry. Smile and song were on the people's lips."

My parents who are now 80 lived in the Austro-Hungarian Empire under the Hapsburgs, and spent many years in Vienna. They and many of their friends and relatives in this country would like to tell Mr. de Hevesy from their own experiences stories of poverty, hunger and misery among the masses of white collar workers. Malnutrition and tuberculosis were rampant in the cities.

In this very period which he described so glowingly thousands upon thousands came to the United States from Austria-Hungary to work on farms, in factories, in steel mills and coal mines. Why? Perhaps Mr. de Hevesy is writing of the people who lived in the castles and palaces, danced to the Strauss waltzes, and drove behind the prancing horses in the Prater. But there were those others who came over here for the chance to raise themselves materially and culturally which was denied them under the Hapsburgs.

Humane Sunday

Humane Sunday and Be Kind to Animals Week, this year May 7-13, are designated to help us remind ourselves and friends of our churches, Sunday-schools, educational and welfare groups of our Christian obligations to God's animal creation—our friends and helpers of the "lesser brethren," as the great painter Margaret Tarrant, calls them in her beautiful portrayal of Christ among His creatures.

Let us all this year resolve to promote the welfare and rights of speechless creatures by kindly deeds, by refusing products or amusements procured through their enforced sufferings, and by urging laws to free them from cruelty and pain.

Rockville Pike

Numerous accidents have occurred this year on the heavily traveled 7½-mile stretch of the Rockville pike, connecting Bethesda and Rockville. The high accident rate is not surprising, for the combination of many hills and curves and heavy traffic on a three-lane highway definitely is not conducive to safety. Passing vehicles find it difficult to edge back from the center lane into the bumper-to-bumper traffic in the right-hand lane.

The remedy lies in the construction of a wider road, preferably a dual highway. But as an expedient, large signs could be placed along the highway, reading as follows: "Warning! Maintain 100 feet clearance between vehicles except when passing." This should serve to break up bumper-to-bumper driving, and thereby would permit cars to pass and to swing back into the right-hand lane when necessary.

"Tangled Web"

I wish to congratulate you upon the editorial in your April 21st issue entitled "Tangled Web." This is a brilliant piece of writing and the best editorial that I have seen on the incredible effort of Mr. Budenz to convict Professor Lattimore of an involvement in communism because he had expressed anti-communistic views which, of course, to a man of Mr. Budenz's acumen merely means that "he is a Communist in disguise." What devastation Mr. Budenz might have wrought if he had ever met Professor Lattimore or even had had him pointed out to him at an inapproachable distance!

Safeguards In The Loyalty Program

Loyalty to the United States rests on more than one level. We cannot allow any minority, whether with noble or ignoble motivation, to be so unneighborly as to find its authority and inspiration elsewhere than in our own midst when it is a question of our country's interest. This is loyalty to hearth and home, we are loyal to ours, let others be loyal to theirs. It is therefore most deplorable, as the retiring Undersecretary of Commerce, Cornelius V. Whitney points out, that "there are thousands of people who no longer regard loyalty to their country as a virtue." It is elementary that in any position of public trust such people cannot be permitted and elsewhere must be reduced to a minimum.

They will be reduced to a minimum when resort is had to a higher claim on loyalty, which luckily is the traditional American claim. Communists, says the President (meaning of course all forms of disloyalty), "has little appeal for people who are healthy, well educated, prosperous and free." Two of these conditions are material and two spiritual. When he speaks of the material conditions he speaks as a party leader plugging for the achievements of his Administration (about which all need not agree); but when he speaks of the spiritual conditions, he speaks as the President of the United States. His words are simple, but they are gospel for all loyal Americans. The United States is more than a geographical expression. "Against this tyrannical force which we know as communism the United States stands as the great champion of freedom."

There are those who, when confronted by a complex danger, can see only one side of it. The measures they advocate would be fine except that in combating one side of the danger they increase the chances of our being undone from the sides which they do not see. They are like the fanatic who redoubles his efforts after he has forgotten his aim. The aim of the loyalty program is to preserve our democracy. But these people, in the President's words, "actually resent the democratic safeguards of the loyalty program."

The security of the United States would rest on a weak reed indeed if the heart of the American doctrine were cut out of it. If "the evidence is of such scanty nature that it is impossible in all fairness for a loyalty board to discredit and dismiss the individual under fire" (remembering that associations and stability of character cannot be disregarded in determining "loyalty" by any reasonable definition), it is harmful to the security of the United States to continue to hound this individual and prevent him from giving his best efforts to his country. The President has stated that it is his "equal" concern that "loyal Government employes should be protected against accusations which were false, malicious or ill-founded."

Public employment is not a constitutional right, but also dismissal on loyalty or security grounds "is a business which must be done carefully and objectively." Those who call for more blood are activated more by irrational fear than by confidence in American principles. Let us not fall into the snares of statism. Against this, President Truman has given the American answer. "Justice is the foundation of true democracy. Our system of justice preserves the freedom and dignity of the individual and his right to think and speak as he feels and to worship as he pleases. It protects him in the assertion of his rights even against his own Government." Not the arrogance of totalitarianism, but the humility of democracy will win the hearts of men.

Atlantic Pact Consolidation

By Andre Visson

The London Meeting

FROM THE flow of dispatches from London and Paris, and from the information available in Washington on the forthcoming Conference of Foreign Ministers in London, there emerges one basic idea: the urgency of consolidating the common front which, on paper, was created by the North Atlantic Pact.

When the North Atlantic Pact was signed in Washington in 1949, American public opinion had the pleasant feeling of having achieved a goal. But European feelings were best summed up by a continental diplomat in Washington, whose comment on the North Atlantic Pact was: "It is a beginning, not an end."

A year has passed since the signing of the pact and all its members feel that it is indispensable to do "something" in order to make it a living instrument. The pact was originally conceived as a security measure. Like all pacts, it was a compromise.

The main value of the pact lies in the warning it gives to the Soviets that an armed attack on any of its members would be met by the overwhelming military force of all its members, including the United States. But at the same time, Senators Connally and Vandenberg, in their Senate speeches, promised that the treaty would not include any legal or moral commitment by this country to go to war automatically.

The European members of the pact accepted this because they had no alternative. They preferred a controversial American commitment to none at all. They had to be satisfied with the knowledge that the greatest military and economic power, possessing the monopoly of the world's most powerful weapon, was, in principle, ready to come to their defense.

SINCE THEN, however, a very important change has taken place in the world picture. The world's strongest power has lost its monopoly of the atom bomb. It still has superiority in atomic weapons, but it no longer has the monopoly. Some of our policy makers may contend that this does not seriously affect the world situation. But western Europeans do not find this argument convincing. In the opinion of western Europeans, atomic energy in Soviet hands may mean either a stalemate between the democratic West and the Communist East, or a frantic armament race that that would sooner or later result in armed conflict.

Now, the theory of stalemate brings a very dangerous illusion of some neutral standing between the two super-powers which alone possess the dreaded weapon. "Since each of the two super-powers considers itself threatened by the other, let them take all the measures they deem necessary to maintain the stalemate," some western Europeans reason. Why should western Europe, ruined by two world wars and unable to pursue its recovery without American dollars, drain itself by spending a large part of its precarious budget on armaments?

No responsible western European official has espoused this dangerous, and in the opinion of the writer, fallacious theory. But an increasing number of Europeans are asking these questions in the press, and lately even in the parliaments. Realizing that western Europe can no longer exert its former influence on world developments, many continental Europeans wonder whether some kind of "neutrality" or even "isolationism" might not be the least expensive way to assure their survival in the present uncomfortable world.

MANY western Europeans have developed the dangerous illusion entertained by so many Belgians between the two world wars—the illusion of the so-called "policy of independence" or "neutrality." But the majority know better. They know that whatever they may do, they will not escape involvement in an armed conflict if and when it comes. Now, if they cannot escape it, their main objective is to create conditions under which, by fighting, they at least have a 50-50 chance of preventing their countries from being overrun by the Red army. Unless they have this 50-50 chance, one can hardly expect them to fight.

Should the war come in 1950, 1951 or 1952, western Europe would not be able to put up much resistance. But by 1955, provided her recovery continues and she gets the necessary American economic and military aid, western Europe may become an extremely valuable ally. To achieve these conditions it is indispensable to knit the presently divided members of the North Atlantic Pact not only into a military alliance, but into some kind of economic and political community.

Article II of the North Atlantic Pact offers a good possibility of creating a standing Atlantic Economic Council. This idea is now under discussion in Washington as well as in Paris and London. In order to make of western Europe a valuable ally, it is indispensable to give it a feeling of some security. And this can be done only by making it feel that the United States is the leader of a community of which all western European nations — Germany included — are an integral part.

For different reasons, neither England nor western Germany can find their place in a restricted western European community. This makes indispensable a broader North Atlantic Community.

U. S. Labor Hears Chilean Slant

By Drew Pearson

MOST dramatic event in the Washington visit of Chilean President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla was his off-the-record meeting with top United States labor leaders.

The democratic-minded "good neighbor" invited heads of the AFL, CIO and railway brotherhoods to the Chilean Embassy, addressed them briefly and then answered searching questions for an hour.

The engaging Gonzalez Videla won his guests right away with the story of how he fought the Communists without endangering basic civil liberties.

"After the war," explained the Chilean President, "I thought, as did many other leaders, I could work with the Communists. I accepted their political support. I put Communists in my cabinet. Then I discovered they owed allegiance only to the Kremlin and were plotting with foreign embassies to create chaos in Chile. Whereupon I threw the Communists out of the government, and asked for legislation to curb the fifth column. This was a case of democracy protecting itself from those who would destroy democratic systems in obedience to foreign dictators."

Gonzalez Videla emphasized that he considered free trade unions a bulwark for democracy, and that his administration was trying to raise the standard of living and institute social security for Chilean labor.

Asked why he had taken the unusual step of meeting with American labor leaders, Gonzalez replied, "I want to build better understanding with labor."

McCarthy's Lie Detector

SENATOR McCARTHY has a unique tactic for saving his political skin after he talks himself into hot water.

Last summer he fired a broadside of reckless charges, much as he is now doing against the State Department, at the Army for allegedly torturing and abusing German war criminals. Then, as now, the Senate appointed a committee to investigate, and found that McCarthy's accusations were mostly empty air. The Army was not guilty.

With his back to the wall, McCarthy quickly demanded that witnesses against him be subjected to a "lie detector" test. Since this is out of the Senate's line, and since the investigation had been painstakingly thorough, the committee refused. Indignantly, McCarthy walked out, washed his hands of the whole affair.

Note—McCarthy's colleagues are now waiting for him to shout for the lie detector again to prove his charges of Communist infestation of the State Department.

Congressional Absentees

IN PUBLISHING the list of House Democratic absentees the other day, this writer was not aware of certain circumstances affecting two Congressmen. In fairness to them, I should like to make these facts known now.

One Representative having a high score for absences was Congressman Thurmond Chatham of Winston-Salem, N. C. Chatham was a conscientious member of the House, had worked hard, studiously attended to his duties. But last July Mrs. Chatham died, and the grieving Congressman has had difficulty concentrating on his work since then.

Another Representative having a high absentee record on roll-call votes was William Dawson of Chicago, one of two Negroes in Congress.

Neither Dawson nor Chatham have asked for any statement explaining their absences. In fact, Dawson said: "You were absolutely right. I guess I had it coming and I'm willing to accept my medicine."

However, Dawson's colleagues inform me that frequently he does not sit on the floor of the House because he feels that he may not be welcome. Actually, this is not the case. Virtually all Southern Congressmen like Dawson and respect him. However, he is the modest, retiring type, who prefers to work in the quiet of the committee room or in his office.

Representative Dawson is chairman of the Expenditures Committee, the first Negro to hold such a post.

Merry-Go-Round

LOOKS LIKE Phil Willkie, son of Wendell, is going to be a chip off the old block. Running for the Indiana Legislature, young Willkie was unopposed; while as a candidate for the Republican State Convention, he led the ticket in every precinct, also was high man in the total voting . . . The top Air Force brass flew to Puerto Rico—away from telephones and interruptions—to indoctrinate their new Secretary of the Air Force, Tom Finletter . . . Convention Hall in Philadelphia is the scene of a unique example of labor-management harmony. Under the direction of Matthew Woll, the AFL is staging the 1950 Union Industries Show—a singular demonstration of labor-management teamwork . . . The State Department's two new Republican advisers, former Senators Cooper of Kentucky and Dulles of New York, have been slipping in to see GOP leaders on Capitol Hill in order to patch up the bipartisan foreign policy. They have been pleading that bipartisan unity is more urgent now than at any time since V-J-Day. (They're right.)

Senator McCarthy's Security

THE SAME Senator McCarthy who is afraid State Department secrets might get into the wrong hands, almost lost his own top secrets recently.

McCarthy carries his Communist data in a bulging briefcase which he won't trust out of his sight and lugs with him wherever he goes. Accordingly, he took it to radio station WWDC, which originates the MBS broadcast, "Meet the Press."

McCarthy got so wrapped up in his radio discussion, however, that he left without his precious briefcase. An hour later, the WWDC switchboard received a frantic call.

"Where is my briefcase?" pleaded the Senator from Wisconsin, as if the Communists had stolen it.

Manuel Michaelson, an employe, finally found it, and when he returned it to McCarthy's home, the Senator almost kissed him, wouldn't let him leave without opening a bottle of champagne.

Our Political Economy

The Pork in Rivers and Harbors

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

WHEN Senator Paul Douglas gave his demonstration of Horatius at the Bridge during the recent consideration of the rivers and harbors bill, he may not have stopped the assault on the national purse, but he did highlight a problem which is as old as Congress.

The rivers and harbors bill gives would-be congressional economizers the most painful choice between principle and interest. If the latter usually carries the day, it is less because of moral weakness in the legislative fiber than because of the wrong approach to national development projects.

There are really two issues here. One concerns the whole process of "log-rolling"—a mechanism much talked about but little understood. The other is the difficulty of separating projects of genuine national interest from those which are usually known as "pork."

The present bill included multimillion-dollar flood control measures along with a $14,000 project for dredging Fly Creek, Ala., to permit 15 pleasure craft to use the creek. What is the necessary connection between the two? Granted that flood control may be of national interest, why the extraordinary beneficence for everything from resort harbors in Mattapoisett, Mass., to the diversion of a river from an old cemetery in Livingston Parish, La.?

"I think they have been inserted in the bill," said Senator Douglas, "partly because of a . . . belief that if a number of the projects were distributed over the country, that might create wider support for the other features of the bill."

A Personal Problem

WHICH brings us directly to one of the two issues at stake in such legislation: How does a legislator reconcile local with national interests? Can he divide his personality, and where is the dividing line?

Senator Douglas himself came up against this problem last year when he tried to cut down the Army civil functions appropriations. Senator McKellar acidly reminded him that he had himself been before the committee to ask support for the Calumet-Sag project in Illinois.

"I draw the conclusion," gibed McKellar, "that when the Senator was before the committee he made no suggestion about lowering appropriations. He was asking for millions of dollars for his own State."

Douglas defended himself by drawing a line which no one has yet successfully maintained. As Senator from Illinois, he argued, it was his duty to present to committee projects of interest to his own State. On the floor of the Senate, however, it was his responsibility to consider the national interest. If he thought a total appropriation too high, he should vote against it.

This kind of split personality would be admirable if it could be maintained. Unfortunately, however, it cannot, and there lies the secret of log-rolling.

It is not a question of one Senator's saying to another, "Vote for my project and I'll vote for yours." It is the more fundamental weakness that if an omnibus measure of this type contains projects of interest to a legislator, he is in no moral position to vote against similar legislation for other areas, whatever his personal misgivings about them.

Heartrending Reports

UNDER the circumstances, how is it possible to separate the pork from those projects of genuine national interest? Each legislator believes his local project to be of consuming importance. The Congressional Record and committee hearings overflow with heartrending accounts of fishermen who must wait for high water to float out of their harbors, of crabs bruised and injured by the tides, of beaches floating away to the detriment of resort hotels.

In quiet moments, it must be clear to any Congressman that some problems are of greater moment than others. Some multimillion-dollar flood control measures are cheap at the price; and not infrequently a $14,000 project is pure extravagance.

Representative Adolph Sabath has proposed that all basic development legislation, including futile pork-barrel, piecemeal reclamation, reforestation and hydroelectric projects, receive an over-all study, and that "the futile pork barrel, piecemeal legislation proposed in this bill should be ended once and for all."

Senator Douglas offered an amendment to the present bill to assess at least half the cost of levee and drainage projects against adjoining real estate which is directly and substantially benefited. Needless to say, his proposal was promptly voted down.

It might be a very good idea to charge half the costs of public works to the interests which benefit by them. The presumptive value of many projects might undergo drastic revision.

If, for example, the 125 fishermen of Grand Marais Harbor were to pay half the cost of the dikes and channels the Government has been building for them, they would be assessed $610,719, or some $4900 apiece. In this case they might find that there were better uses for the money.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

PEARL S. BUCK tells a heartrending story, her own, in the Ladies Home Journal. It is the story of a mother who has only one child, a mentally retarded one. She calls it, "The Child Who Never Grew."

Since it is so personal, and so tragic, Mrs. Buck immediately answers the first question to come to mind. Why tell it? She gives more than one reason. Partly it is to answer questions that reach her by letter from people who ask, "What shall they do for their children; and, second, how shall they bear the sorrow of having such a child?" The final reason for setting down the story, she notes, "is that I want my child's life to be of use in her generation."

As sad a tale as it is, it seems to me that Mrs. Buck's reasons for telling it are justified. Almost one person in every hundred, she reports, is or will be mentally retarded. The families of these children should derive much comfort and knowledge, too, from Mrs. Buck's experience. Proceeds from the piece go to the Training School at Vineland, N. J.

Jumping the Gun

A PIECE that goes to the opposite extreme is in Red Book. Clothed in high moral purposes, that magazine runs as silly a piece of purposeless immorality as has appeared recently in any of the periodicals with any claim to responsibility. Nor was it truly purposeless, of course. The true purpose of "What Kinsey Will Tell," by Morris L. Ernst and David Loth, must have been circulation in a season which is always difficult for magazine newsstand sales, and this was apparently accomplished.

Newsweek reports the issue a best seller, although Kinsey himself insisted the story was "unauthorized and, in some spots, even erring." The editors replied they bought the story in good faith from the authors of the book, "American Sexual Behavior and the Kinsey Report."

The story itself seems to be made up partly of guesswork, partly from the old Kinsey report on the habits of American men, and partly either from Kinsey, from his interviewers or from someone with access to them.

If Dr. Kinsey wants to maintain any pretense that his surveys are scientific, this sort of thing should be stopped. Who ever heard of reporting the results of research before the work was concluded? Or if the work itself is finished, why let bits and pieces leak out as teasers to a voracious public?

Finny Fortune

THERE'S a fortune under the sea, and it's not sunken treasure. It's the fish swimming around down there. "Vast ocean expanses today offer a new frontier as fabulous in untouched wealth as the old frontier of the West," says United States Fisheries Expert Wilbert McCleod Chapman in the American. New methods of finding the fish, new instruments for catching them and new methods of getting them to the housewife account for the recent emergence of this new and fertile field for enterprise, the author explains.

Atomic Arranger

THE mayor-to-be of Eniwetok is getting to be a deadpan artist, says Richard Witkins in Collier's. The mayor—and commanding general of Task Force Three, scheduled to conduct the Nation's ninth nuclear bomb test at the Pacific atoll this spring—is the Air Force's able, energetic Lieut. Gen. Elwood (Pete) Quesada.

Just a few of the headaches Quesada faces include security (hence the deadpan which just doesn't come naturally to the animated young general and former fighter pilot); drafting a blueprint for the tests; setting up police and fire departments; provision for sanitation and communications; construction of a water distilling plant, and keeping the budget for all this as low as possible. When the whole works is set, says the author, on Quesada's shoulders rests the burden of giving the final go-ahead for the blast.

Slick-Paper Garden

ROSES bloom all over Flair. There's a picture of a new Flair rose. Roses are on the cover and adorn the head of a girl on the second cover. They blossom in gardens, in house decoration, in fashion, beauty and art. Physically, it's an especially beautiful issue of the magazine which uses all the latest gadgets in printing and makeup.

The New Yorker, which has made a regular thing of poking fun at Flair's peephole covers and booklets within, has another cartoon. A Charles Addams ghoul is looking at the rose issue, and holding the inserted accordion leaflet is an unexplained third hand. (Well, it's funny if you see it.)

RUTH FISCHER, former Communist and sister of the famous Communist Eisler brothers, discusses in Life the meaning of the Tito revolt against Stalin. She agrees with State Department Planner George Kennan, who called Tito's defection "among the greatest reverses the Soviet leaders have ever suffered." On our comprehension of the meaning of this split, and it is not a recent development, according to the author, "depends, in large measure, the West's hold on its own future," she thinks.

Baby Boom

ECONOMIST PETER DRUCKER asks, "Are We Having Too Many Babies?" in the Saturday Evening Post. Census and population experts as well as wiseacres came a cropper in the face of the true proportions of the population increase, says Drucker. The one thing on which they failed to count was the increase in the number of children in the American family. Women's magazine editors were among the first to face facts and alter their fictional heroines accordingly, says Drucker.

Nobody really knows quite why the change took place, but one thing is certain. There are going to be giant headaches in connection with schools, doctors and houses, and these questions must be resolved fast.

Matter of Fact

A Device for Unshackling Reich

By Stewart Alsop

SECRETARY of State Acheson has left for Europe with some remarkably interesting ideas in the back of his mind. These ideas are sure to have a great impact on the progress of Acheson's crucial talks with his British and French opposite numbers, which will be described and interpreted in reports which will shortly appear in this space, from Paris and London. But it is important also to understand something of the Washington background of Acheson's mission.

The fact is that the long period of barrenness and sterility in the making of American foreign policy seems to be coming to an end. The log jam really began to break very recently, when Acheson submitted a sort of global policy paper to the National Security Council and President Truman. This paper was the first fruit of the new look at the world situation, ordered by Truman after the decision to go ahead with the hydrogen bomb.

The details of this paper, prepared largely by the State Department's planning staff, are of course secret. But it includes two basic assumptions. First, a much greater effort must be made to create what Acheson calls "situations of strength" with which to confront the Soviet Union. Second, situations of strength can only be created within the framework of a full working partnership of the Atlantic powers, including both Germany and the United States.

The global paper was approved unanimously by the National Security Council, including Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, although it obviously implies a reversal of Johnson's business-as-usual policy. These, therefore, are the basic premises of Acheson's position, in his negotiations with British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

Voluntary Unshackling

THESE premises clearly involve a complete fresh approach to a whole series of vital problems, above all to the problem of German policy. Acheson and his advisers, including German High Commissioner John McCloy and Republican Adviser John Foster Dulles, have reached certain firm conclusions about Germany.

They believe that a great unshackling of western Germany is sooner or later inevitable, and that the unshackling had better be done gracefully and voluntarily now, rather than later under bitter nationalist pressure. But an unshackled Germany must somehow be tied firmly in the system of the Atlantic alliance, and must somehow contribute to the defense of that alliance.

Put these conclusions together with the assumptions contained in the global policy paper and the new French proposal for an "Atlantic High Council" to include the United States, and a fairly obvious policy line emerges. In broad outline it is as follows:

An Atlantic Council would be created in line with the French suggestion—an economic and political equivalent of the Atlantic Pact, with the United States firmly committed to the new body. At least in theory, the American commitment would permit the British confidently to play a role of leadership on the Continent, and would answer French fears of German domination of the Continent. Thus in turn the paralysis of Allied policy in Germany could be ended.

Germany would remain outside the predominantly military Atlantic Pact, but it would become a full member of the new council. And through the new organization, Germany would make an essential contribution to the defense of the West by supplying all sorts of materials short of actual armaments, from raw steel to trucks, essential to Western defense.

Meanwhile, the whole complicated occupation apparatus would be very largely dismantled, leaving only combat troops, plus some sort of basic Allied veto power. At least in the immediate future, there would be no rearmament of Germany, but in most other ways the West Germany government would be granted the essential attributes of sovereignty.

Some Advisers Doubtful

IT IS important to understand that these ideas do not constitute a firm, final American policy. They are no more than ideas which Acheson will explore with the British and French. Some of Acheson's advisers, including Dulles, are distinctly doubtful about creating another new organization, on top of those already existing; certainly the United States will want a firm British and French commitment on Germany before agreeing to join such a new organization.

Others of Acheson's advisers are convinced that if there is to be a real Atlantic partnership, the United States should be the wooed and not the wooer—that if the partnership seems to be imposed by the United States, it will fail.

Yet it is certainly true that there is a ferment, a new yeastiness, in the making of American policy. And it is at least possible that Acheson's mission may lead to the first halting step toward an effective union of the Atlantic nations, on all levels, political and economic as well as military. It is thus also at least possible that the Foreign Ministers' meetings which are now getting under way may mark a great turning point in postwar history.

Big 3 Have 'Little' Problems, Too

foreign ministers usually do when they get together.

There will have to be some comparing of notes on the prospects for the near future. Each minister will tell the other what his government believes, for example, about Soviet intentions toward Marshal Tito, or toward Turkey or Iran or other threatened areas.

The Berlin Threat

THE MINISTERS will try, too, to agree on common attitudes and parallel actions if certain emergencies happen. What, for instance, will the Big Three do and say if the Communists really march on Western Berlin on May 28, as they have threatened to do? The United States has already declared its stand—to use the West Berlin police as far as possible, but to use troops with orders to shoot if necessary.

Or, to take another question, what if the Emperor Bao Dai should be assassinated in Indo-China? What, if anything, could the Western powers do now to stave off a collapse in Iran? What would they do if the Shah should lose control there?

Should the three powers try to keep their diplomatic establishments in the satellite countries of eastern Europe, even in the face of persecution and trumped-up trials? Is it worth anything to keep diplomatic relations in such conditions?

The Foreign Ministers cannot come up with agreed answers to all such questions in a two-week meeting, but they can make more progress on these short-term questions than on the continuing problems. They will be doing well on Germany and Japan if they simply agree on a few principles and assign the continuing work to deputies.

A New Mechanism

ONE MORE subject of discussion in London will be the organization of the North Atlantic nations. The French have already proposed setting up a new council to handle political and economic questions under Article 2 of the North Atlantic Treaty.

By common consent, Article 2 has not yet been used; the emphasis of the treaty so far has been overwhelmingly military. But Secretary Acheson firmly believes existing mechanisms are more than enough, if the treaty partners really want to use them.

He believes that fussing about organization charts at this time would be little more than a disguise for inaction, a confession that the treaty partners were not doing their job. In somewhat the same category would be declarations of unity that were not backed up by solid agreements.

There may be a few declarations for propaganda purposes at the end of the London meeting, but unless the unexpected happens they will be of little importance. The present signs point to little concrete action which the world will be allowed to know.

Still, these discussions can be a postwar turning point if the participants give them boldness, resourcefulness and a sense of urgency. The talks will be a success in American eyes if they start the North Atlantic countries, on both sides of the ocean, toward common policies to meet a common danger.

District Affairs

Time Is Fleeting—Daylight Time

By Harry N. Stull

WASHINGTON has again been thrown into confusion over daylight saving time. The final settlement of the matter came with haste.

This annual squabble could be easily ended by passage of the Senate legislation which would give the District Commissioners authority to order fast time simultaneously with nearby communities. House leaders, however, for reasons best known to themselves, would consent only to a year-by-year authorization. The same proceedings will have to be repeated next year.

STULL

Representative Klein of New York summed it all up by remarking: "Well, here we go again."

There is no reason why the matter should have been delayed. Congress has been in session some five months. The delay caused much confusion, not only in the District but in nearby counties of Maryland and Virginia which were waiting to follow the District's lead.

Senator O'Conor of Maryland told the Senate that it was ridiculous that Congress should have to take time each spring to determine a question that ought to be left to the discretion of District authorities.

Pastel Paint-Up

THE CITIZENS of Southeast Washington, in order to publicize their plan to beautify that section of the city, inaugurated their campaign with a paint job on six houses in the 1200 block of G st. se. While some of the residents seemed a bit startled to find the houses painted gray, blue, yellow and green, the general opinion was that the art students of Eastern High School had done a good job of brightening and improving the neighborhood.

The Southeast Businessmen's Association and affiliated groups intend to continue the project until Labor Day. The views of a prominent city architect were solicited, and he advised that remodeling can be achieved by taking off porches where they conceal charming front doorways; using large picture windows to let in light and air; keeping the fronts of the houses plain and well painted in colors that give dignity to the homes; arranging small gardens at the rear or combining several back yards into one by means of iron fences with gates between, and reconditioning the front plots, steps and fencing.

40-Hour Police

A MAJORITY of the neighborhood citizens' associations have indorsed the movement to put the Police Department on a 40-hour week. The arguments advanced for this change have been convincing, but there still remains the very important question of money. It is estimated that the program would cost $900,000 the first year and more in succeeding years.

There is also the question of how the 300 additional men could be obtained in view of the difficulty in filling existing vacancies. Police officials believe, however, that enactment of the legislation would make the positions more attractive and thus enable the department to sign up the necessary qualified applicants.

A Gulf Bridged

THE CITY received with pleasure the announcement that an agreement had been reached on location of the new bridge over the Anacostia River on a line with East Capitol st., although there still remains a difference of opinion over the approaches.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, by its continued opposition to the East Capitol st. site, has delayed the project for many months. As previously pointed out in this column, it is the general opinion of civic leaders that the location of a bridge entirely in the District of Columbia should be left to the engineers of the local government.

The City's Loss

CIVIC WASHINGTON will regret the retirement for physical reasons of Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, executive officer of the Police Department. A man of splendid character, he was thoroughly familiar with all phases of the work of the department, and he retires with an excellent record, both as a law enforcement official and as an administrator. His four years' service in Naval Intelligence in the last war was notable. During his entire career he exhibited a keen interest in all civic movements in the District. His retirement is a distinct loss to the people of this District.

Robeson Stole Home as Machine Napped

By Benjamin Muse

THE First District elected a new Congressman last Tuesday for only the third time in 62 years. The late Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, whose unexpired term is to be filled, had served for 32 years. The new Congressman, of course, is Edgar J. Robeson, Newport News shipbuilder.

MUSE

What happened in the recent contest, which the politically minded are still rehashing with considerable concern, was fairly simple. The Byrd machine just suspended operation, and a strong man from outside of the political enclosure came along and got the votes. Robeson wasn't antiorganization; he was just nonorganization. But he obviously received the bulk of the antimachine vote, plus a substantial fraction of the vote that is usually counted on by the organization.

The organization vote was light anyway. Aside from the fact that there had been no organization "call to arms," the organization thrives mainly in the rural districts, and the election fell on a miserably rainy day. What was left of the organization vote, after Robeson got his bit, had to be divided between two candidates.

Both William A. Wright and Blake T. Newton had long been members of the organization fraternity. Wright especially had the kind of record that is supposed to establish a machine obligation. Billy Wright had been doing organization chores all of his political life, and he launched into this campaign with confidence that the organization would furnish the money and round up the votes.

Saved Their Money

BUT it didn't. With no designated machine choice, many of the usual contributors to organization campaign funds just held back and saved their money, and local organization bosses wandered off in every direction, except toward the GOP. Even Robeson had the stalwarts of his neighborhood, and they included no less than G. Alvin Massenburg. But Robeson didn't ask for machine help, and the well-heeled shipbuilder had all the money that he needed.

It is not meant to imply that the contest was all a matter of funds and calculations or miscalculations. It is just that there is a story behind every election, and the story in this case is less disturbing than usual. The sovereign people have spoken, and, from every indication, they have chosen a very good man.

The No. 1 question now is: Will Robeson enter the Byrd machine fold (where an undoubted welcome awaits him), will he pursue an independent course, or will wind up in the antiorganization camp? The No. 2 question is: Will Wright or Newton now step aside and their followers combine against Robeson in the August primary? (Together they polled 2000 more votes than Robeson.)

Out on a Limb

THE No. 3 question is: What is going to happen to Massenburg? Massenburg, hardboiled machine stalwart and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, got himself out on a limb by rooting for the candidate farthest removed from the organization. It wouldn't have been so bad if Robeson had lost and Massenburg had slipped quietly back into line after helping his neighbor.

But Robeson had to go and win. Massenburg won the enmity of many stalwarts all over the State who in their hearts regarded Wright as the orthodox machine man. If Robeson turns out to be an awful antimachine liberal, it will be bad news for Massenburg.

The chances are that Robeson will turn out at any rate to be a valuable member of the House of Representatives. He has never been in big-time politics before but he has managed the personnel of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. since 1929 without a single strike. When the vice president of a great corporation, who is also president of the Virginia Manufacturers Association, receives labor's enthusiastic support in an election (he got over 80 percent of the vote in Newport News), he must have something.

Maryland Affairs

The Ober Act Gets Into Politics

By James P. Connolly

THE OBER ACT, Maryland's antisubversive statute, appears to be headed for a second court test—if it ever had a first one.

The State Court of Appeals refused last February to rule on the act's constitutionality on the ground that it was not in question, although the question had been raised. Now the Maryland Progressive Party has given notice that it intends to challenge the act in the coming election on the ground that its oath requirement for political candidates is in direct conflict with the State constitution and the constitution's declaration of rights—which it appears at least, to be.

CONNOLLY

The declaration of rights states that the Legislature shall not prescribe any oath of office except that prescribed in the constitution. The Ober Act demands that candidates for public office make affidavit, along with their candidacies, that they are not subversive or members of any subversive organizations.

Some legal minds, even some in the State government—think privately that the Progressives have put their finger on the weakest spot in the Ober Act. A similar oath requirement recently was ruled out of New Jersey's antisubversive law on substantially the same ground—and New Jersey's ban on any but its constitutional oath is not as clear cut as the Free State's.

War Is No Excuse

FROM the language of the Maryland constitution and its declaration of rights, a layman might think the ban on any other oath refers to any other religious oath or oath form. But on that there is room for a court case. Let every reader be his own lawyer. Here is the full and exact language of the oath provisions in the Maryland constitution and declaration of rights. Article 37 of the declaration says that:

"No religious test ought ever to be required as a qualification for any office of profit or trust in this State, other than a declaration of belief in the existence of God; nor shall the Legislature prescribe any other oath of office than the oath prescribed in this constitution."

Elsewhere the declaration states that neither war nor any other emergency (not even cold war) should be used to circumvent this provision.

The provision was written after the Civil War, when efforts were being made by Union sympathizers to force anti-Confederacy oaths on unreconstructed rebels running for office. The constitution and the declaration of rights, which precedes it, were adopted in 1867.

Article 39 of the Declaration allows Quakers, who object to any and all oaths on religious grounds, the privilege of making affirmations instead. Incidentally, the "bag" under the Ober Act still stands at three Quaker women forced out of their city or State jobs because they couldn't, in conscience, swallow the Ober Act and its oath for jobholders.

Attacking the Whole

EVEN if the Progressives should succeed in having the Ober oath requirement ruled out, the rest of the statute probably still would stand, because it has the usual severability provision, meaning that invalidation of one section need not invalidate the rest.

Nevertheless, the Progressives intend to attack the entire law. They expect to enter at last four candidates in the coming election and Harold Buchman, executive director of the party in Maryland, said its entries will not subscribe to the oath requirement.

"We are not going to be a party to enforcing this act," said Buchman. "It is unconstitutional and we will prove it in court."

If the Progressives do not accept the oath requirement, their candidacies will not be accepted. It their candidacies are not accepted, then the court fight will begin. Buchman said it probably will take the form of a mandamus suit or suits to compel acceptance of the candidacies.

The Progressives' action followed a ruling by Attorney General Hall Hammond last week that the Ober Act and its requirements mean just what they say—that all candidates have to make antisubversive affidavits before their candidacies can become bona fide.

The attorney general directed that sample affidavits be printed and circulated among the city and county election boards. Candidates filing from now on will have to file affidavits with their candidacies. Candidates who already have filed—and there are quite a few—will have to catch up.

In the uncertainty and confusion that marked the beginning of Ober law enforcement, the elections boards either forgot or ignored the oath requirement. Enforcement began a month or two ago with the Supreme Court's refusal to review last February's decision by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The appeals court had overruled Judge Sherbow in the Baltimore Circuit Court. In turn, Judge Sherbow, in separate injunction suits brought by Communists and college professors, had declared the Ober Act unconstitutional. The appeals court's reinstatement of the act and its refusal to pass on its constitutionality was based on the ground that the complainants had not been arrested and had no real grievance against it.

Jefferson's 'Silly' Girl Friend

By Sterling North

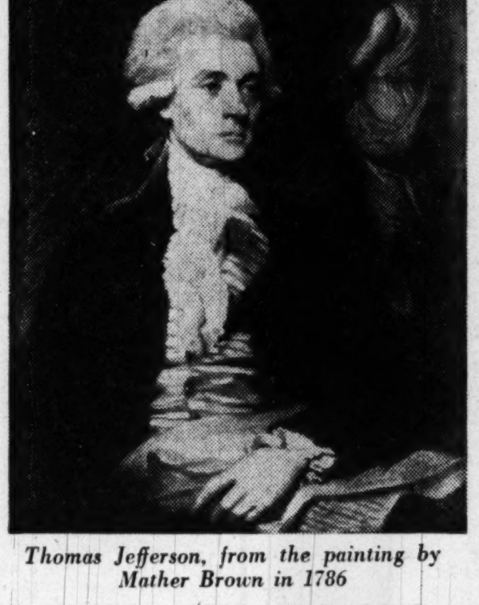
JEFFERSON: The Scene of Europe, 1784-1789. By Marie Kimball. Coward-McCann. 416 pp. $6.

THE PUBLISHERS say that Marie Kimball is the first biographer to explore "Jefferson's romantic attachment with the beautiful and passionate Maria Cosway." Actually, whole books have been written on the affair, and Claude G. Bowers in "The Young Jefferson" devotes 15 fascinating pages to the romance which was "more than friendship" between the great liberal, then in his early forties, and the "pretty, slender girl . . . with great expressive soft blue eyes . . . whose conversation sparkled with wit and glowed with humor."

Is it possible that Marie is jealous of Maria? Amy Lowell, as you may remember, fell in love with Keats.

How else can the reader explain Mrs. Kimball's evident desire to portray Maria Cosway as a scatter-brained, not-particularly-intelligent, little blond flirt?

The facts, as far as we can judge at such a distance, are quite to the contrary. The wife of the foppish Richard Cosgrave, the foremost miniaturist of his time, was an accomplished painter in her own right who had exhibited at the Royal Academy, an excellent musician, the center of London's brightest society and one of the prettiest and wittiest young women of her era.



Thomas Jefferson, from the painting by Mather Brown in 1786

She so impressed the cynical Gouverneur Morris that he wrote a poem to her. Trumbull, who introduced her to Jefferson in Paris, found her excellent company. And she was the recipient of the amazing "Head and Heart" dialogue written to her by Jefferson after her husband dragged her back to England—as beautiful and passionate a love letter as you will find in the English language.

Unto Old Age

MARIE KIMBALL does her hero Jefferson scant service by suggesting that a man who was so rarely moved to sentiment should fall so completely for a silly girl. The author insists that Jefferson was attractive to women and that he in turn was attracted by them. Maybe so, but there is little evidence that women threw themselves at Jefferson the way they did at Aaron Burr or John Paul Jones, for instance.

And proof that neither Jefferson nor Maria forgot their affair in Paris is to be found in letters between them which continued until Jefferson was in his eighties and Maria in her sixties.

This third book on Jefferson by Marie Kimball has its virtues as well as its limitations.

Obviously the author knows France, knows much about art and architecture and has combed the files for material on Jefferson's years abroad, first as a minister plenipotentiary (with John Adams and Franklin), then from 1785 to October, 1789, as American Minister to France.

There is much factual material here, but very little concerning Jefferson the traveler not contained in Edward Dumbauld's recent (1946) "Thomas Jefferson, American Tourist." Strangely enough in a book principally made up of quotations, Mrs. Kimball seldom shows what Jefferson himself thought of what he saw. Instead, she relies heavily on letters written by John and Abigail Adams and their children.

Probably all Jefferson biographers should call a moratorium on studies of the man until Julian Boyd at Princeton finishes editing what will probably be 50 or more great volumes of Jefferson's papers.

Architectural Bent

EVIDENTLY the author is sometimes aware of the paucity of Jefferson's (available) travel notes and the casualness of his reaction. She seems annoyed, for instance, when her hero's only response to the lovely Chateau of Menars was that he paid three francs for "seeing chateau of Madame de Pompadour."

Jefferson's chief delight in London was Mrs. Siddons. In Paris he knew most of the literati and the painter David. And Mrs. Kimball is doubtless right to concentrate upon his love of art and architecture rather than his concern over his country's commercial problems, war debts and treaties with Portugal and the North African states.

What Jefferson was assimilating of architecture in England, France, Italy and Germany was eventually of at least as great value to his country as his diplomatic negotiations as a minister.

Jefferson was an ardent patriot: "We all pant for America, as does every American who comes to Europe."

Again: "I am happy nowhere else, and in no other society; all my wishes end where I hope my days will end, at Monticello."

He predicted to Monroe how that latter's trip to Europe would affect him: "It will make you adore your own country, its soil, its climate, its equality, liberty, laws, people and manners. My God! how little do my countrymen know what precious blessings they are in possession of, and which no other people on earth enjoy. I confess I had no idea of it myself."

Jefferson's audience with George III must always remain a mystery. Just 10 years after writing the Declaration of Independence, and after castigating the monarch in the most searing terms, he met the King. All he ever wrote of that encounter was a notation in his account book: "Pd Porters at St. James on my being presented, 42 (shillings)."

He always inquired the number of servants necessary to attend the great gardens. Two hundred at Blenheim; he was aware of money.

Mrs. Kimball states that "In serving his country as a Minister to France, he laid the cornerstone to the debts that were eventually to ruin him."

This is a good but not inspired biographical segment of a multivolumed Jefferson. The definitive biography cannot be written until the appearance of the complete Jefferson papers.

Nutshell Reviews of Recent Books

VISIT TO AMERICA. By Jawaharlal Nehru. John Day. $2.50.

THE speeches and informal talks which Prime Minister Nehru of India made on his recent visit to the United States and Canada have been collected, edited and published in this little volumn. Nehru's dispassionate view of men and nations is fresh, alive and sensitive. The mind of Mahatma Gandhi haunts these pages, and the long aching struggle for Indian independence is never far below the surface. If these words accomplish nothing else, they will open American minds to an awareness of the renascence of Asia. Photographs.

HOMEWARD BORNE. By Ruth Chatterton. Simon & Schuster. $3.

RUTH CHATTERTON has a double surprise for you. She has written an absorbing novel—and it's not about the theater.

"Homeward Borne" is the story of a Vermont college town woman who cannot bring herself to accept the Jewish parents of Jake, her first love. Feelings of guilt after Jake's death in the war cause her to bring a Jewish refugee lad into her home. When her Nazi-indoctrinated husband returns from postwar duty in Germany, she is forced to choose between the child and her husband. With the warmth you'd expect from an actress, Miss Chatterton puts life and dramatic appeal into the characters of Jan, the refugee child, and Pax Lyttleton, the heroine. But she is not convincing in delineating the change in the husband's character, and she also has trouble with her portrayal of Philip Winslow, the protective family friend. Miss Chatterton's first novel should have the leading Hollywood actresses indulging in a no-holds-barred competition for the choice role of the highly emotional Pax, in the inevitable movie version.

INVITATION TO ENGLAND. By Helen Dean Fish. Ives Washburn. $2.50.

FITTINGLY TITLED, here is no guide book in the narrow sense, but rather a pretravel requisite for either the experienced traveler or for one only hoping to make a first trip. Specifically, Miss Fish suggests inviting itineraries in England and numerous interests around which to build such trips. Information is revised to devaluation. She also presents a carefully considered group of titles for preparatory reading. In a general sense, Miss Fish's tried travel suggestions broaden the application of the book even beyond the coasts of England.

A DIPLOMATIC HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES. By Samuel Flagg Bemis. Henry Holt. 994 pp. $7.50.

SAMUEL FLAGG BEMIS has brought up to date his authoritative record of United States foreign diplomacy. In this third edition he has added a chapter on the diplomatic history of World War II, concluding with his interpretation—a historian's guarded view—of the Yalta Conference. A second new chapter, "World Family of Democratic Nations versus World Union of Soviet Socialist Republics," covers 1945-1950. In his epilogue, Bemis defines the world political trends which have caused a "diplomatic revolution" in United States policy. Isolation and neutrality are overturned; ERP, the Rio Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty are in their place. Maps and charts.

The Coffin Corner . . .

THREE DOORS TO DEATH. By Rex Stout. Viking. $2.50.

THESE three short novels, starring the massive Nero Wolfe and his factotum Archie, originally appeared in the American magazine as book-length features. In one of them, Wolfe does his detecting for pure gain; the other two are labors of love. With his customary petulance and sagacity, the armchair sleuth rescues from the murder frame-ups "the best sauce man in France" and then an orchid breeder; anyone knowing his propensity for food and flowers will understand his personal interest.

Romance Born of Genius

A Rose Blooms Again In Browning Biography

By John Barkham

THE IMMORTAL LOVERS, by Frances Winwar, Harper. 344 pp. $4.

ON THAT May afternoon in 1845 when Robert Browning entered for the first time the house on Wimpole st. to meet Elizabeth Barrett, neither could have known that they were beginning one of the great love stories of literature.

The world never tires of reading about these idyllic unions, partly because their genius forever sustains them and partly because they come so rarely on our troubled planet. So, while Miss Winwar is here retelling an oft-told tale, the reader will find the story of the Brownings as fresh and tender as anything they themselves ever wrote.

With the truth itself so rewarding, Miss Winwar, sound biographer as she is, attempts no gilding. We are shown the two parallel careers—young Browning making headway as a poet; Elizabeth Barrett writing verses under the stern scrutiny of her father. The romance—born and consummated of common genius—the elopment, the happy years in Florence—these are made to live again. As Elizabeth wrote to her sister on the first anniversary of her marriage: "The only difference is from being loved to being loved more." And Browning? After his wife's death he wrote, in "Asolando": "Others may need new life in Heaven," but for him, "Let earth's old life once more enmesh us."

Miss Winwar has a sure hand with color and character. If her narrative lags at times, remember she is not writing a story of violence but of gentle passion. In these pages a rose is made to bloom again.

Backbone of a Nation

THE ENGLISH MIDDLE CLASSES, by Roy Lewis and Angus Maude Knopf. 360 pp. $3.75.

ONE OF THE unmistakably healthy signs of recovery in western Europe is the vitality of the middle classes. Behind the Iron Curtain they have, of course, been liquidated; but on the free side of the Curtain they have resisted, with varying degrees of success, the embrace of "democratic socialism. In Britain they have even staged a vigorous comeback. For Americans these are heartening signs that the classless Ant Age has not yet dawned.

These thoughts are inspired by a reading of this entertaining and provocative study of the English middle class, a class which recently refused to lie down and die. The authors do a thorough clinical analysis of their subject, following it from birth through the golden age of British capitalism to its present convalescence.

The authors are sympathetic to the class which helped make Britain great, but they question whether, in its present straitened condition, the country can afford so large a middle class. The answer to that depends in large part on the state of the world. Another war would engulf the British middle class. A decade of prosperity would restore it.

Friendly Familiar

DEAR GUEST AND GHOST, by Sylvia Dee. Macmillan. 259 pp. $2.75.

ONE evening Mrs. Helmakobbler opened a window in her Staten Island home and perceived a young man in old-fashioned clothes seated on the window sill. The gentleman was amiable, well-spoken and full of learned literary allusions. He was a ghost, and his name was F. Leiscester. This transparent fellow is the "guest and ghost" of Miss Dee's whimsical tale.

Leiscester was really less of a ghost than a friendly familiar, and he graced the house rather than haunted it. Pretty soon he was helping the Helmakobblers in all kinds of unexpected ways. He raised the debased level of son Stevy's humor ("Is there a Skelton in the closet?"), found a husband for daughter Thelma, provided a sympathetic shoulder for Mrs. Helmakobbler herself, and generally made himself useful around the place.

The line between true whimsy and broad farce is razor thin, but Miss Dee balances herself on it with the dexterity of a circus artist. She sustains her central situation with unflagging zest, making Leiscester and the Helmakobblers so credible and likable that even the skeptical reader finally capitulates.

The Porter Case

Historian Wields Cudgel For Civil War 'Fall Guy'

THE CELEBRATED CASE OF FITZ JOHN PORTER. By Otto Eisenschiml. Bobbs-Merrill. 344 pp. Ill. $3.50.

IN A GASLIT room in a brick building on the southeast corner of 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. on the afternoon of January 10, 1863, the court-martial of Maj. Gen. Fitz John Porter was adjourned. It was the end of the military career of a distinguished officer, and the beginning of a 25-year cause celebre.

In the light of the furore it aroused, the reader of Otto Eisenschiml's book might indignantly wonder how the case has come to be so generally forgotten. Celebrated in its day it was, but so little celebrated now that a historian like Kenneth P. Williams in his recent "Lincoln Finds a General" can still echo Porter's discredited enemies.

Fitz John Porter was a member of a family whose martial exploits since the days of the Revolutionary War had led it to be known as "the fighting Porters." Fitz John Porter was in the family tradition. As a junior lieutenant during the Mexican War, he displayed heroism at the storming of Mexico City that led to his being brevetted major. Porter's record at the beginning of the Civil War showed him to be an able officer, as well as one capable of personal heroism. He distinguished himself as an organizer and trainer of troops as well as in action at Gaines Mill and Malvern Hill.

Found Guilty

HE WAS hardly the person, therefore, that one would expect to find charged with several failures to obey orders at the Second Battle of Manassas, to have fallen back "shamefully" before advancing Southern troops on one day, and the following day to have "fallen on the enemy's lines so feebly as to make little or no impression."

But 11 days after the court-martial adjourned, Porter in an order signed by President Lincoln was found guilty, "cashiered and dismissed from the services of the United States as a major general of volunteers, and as a colonel and brevet brigadier general in the regular service of the United States, and forever disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit under the Government of the United States."

Fitz John of "the fighting Porters" fought the decision as best he could, and in 1879 a board of inquiry, which also heard Confederate officers, came to the conclusion that his conduct had been "faithful and judicious," that it had "saved the Union Army from route," and recommended that the sentence of the court-martial be annulled and set aside and Porter be reinstated.

Then nothing happened until three years later when President Arthur gave Porter a pardon—which neither reinstated him nor cleared his name.

Relief Bill Vetoed

THAT WAS left for Congress to do, and after debates so heated that the case was described as "the Third Battle of Manassas," Congress passed a bill for Porter's relief—and President Arthur vetoed it, alleging that "the decision of a court-martial is irrevocable; neither the President nor Congress can set it aside."

Again the bill was introduced into Congress. After another hot battle, it passed both Houses and went to the White House. It was a year after Arthur had vetoed it; Cleveland was President, and he signed it. The vindication came almost 25 years after Porter had been cashiered. Though he was reinstated, he promptly resigned from the Army.

The story behind these events, as related by Eisenschiml, is a story of Machiavellian politics that begins with Secretary of War Stanton—a man for whom Eisenschiml has no love. Stanton and the radical Republicans wanted to prolong the war to free and enfranchise the slaves, who were viewed as a sizable number of Republican voters.

'Fall Guy'

TO THIS end Stanton and his group conspired to discredit McClellan, whom they feared might bring the war to an end before they wished it, Eisenschiml suggests. They poisoned Lincoln's mind, and Porter, who was close to McClellan and whose capabilities were also feared, became what is known in popular parlance as "a fall guy."

Generals Pope and McDowell, several Presidents, Robert Todd Lincoln, and a number of others stand out in unpleasant light. One of the Presidents, who had sat on the original court-martial while a brigadier general, was Garfield. It was Garfield, together with Pope and McDowell, that Porter never forgave.

Eisenschiml has subtitled his book, "An American Dreyfus Affair." It is not quite that for several reasons, one of which is that there is no racial issue involved, but it is a remarkable and disillusioning story of politics that will arouse the reader's sympathy for a man to whom a great injustice was done.

Hoover, It Says, Plowed Ground For New Deal

HERBERT HOOVER, American Quaker. By David Hinshaw. Farrar, Straus. 469 pp. $5.

AT the rate things are going, Abe Lincoln won't be able to hold a candle to Herbert Hoover in another decade.

Hoover here emerges as a liberal President whose frustrated reforms were adopted successfully by FDR.

The author points to newspaper reappraisals of the former President that "give strong indication that truth, fairness, integrity, selfless service and duty well done still count with men even though they are not glamorous." These, incidentally, are Quaker attributes, which Hinshaw says are the keys to Hoover's achievements and failures.

His career is traced with loving care, his successes praised and his setbacks explained.

To those who might disagree with him, Hinshaw replies with the words of an artist who, while painting the author's portrait, was told by a mutual friend:

"But Mr. Hinshaw doesn't look like this."

The artist replied:

"That's the way he looks to me."—THOMAS SCHLESINGER.

A Remarkable Woman's Analysis

Foreign Affairs for the Layman

By Raymond Walters, Jr.

EUROPE AND THE UNITED STATES. By Vera Micheles Dean. Knopf. 349 pp. $3.50.

ON SEVERAL scores, Vera Micheles Dean is a remarkable woman. A native of Russia and a restless visitor to every corner of Europe, she nevertheless looks upon the world through the lenses used by most citizens of her adopted United States.

MRS. DEAN

She has somehow found the time and energy to double as housewife and mother and as member of the research staff of the Foreign Policy Association. As the editor of that organization's eminently useful Bulletin and Reports, as a prolific writer and indefatigable lecturer on international relations, she has won a preeminent place in a field of journalism that is, with the notable exceptions of Dorothy Thompson and The New York Times' Anne O'Hare McCormick, an exclusively stag affair.

Mrs. Dean has just crowned her career with a book that might well be described as the intelligent American's 1950 guide to foreign affairs. She calls it "Europe and the United States," but what she has to say applies with almost equal cogency to Asia and South America. Easily her most ambitious work to date, it bears the hallmarks that distinguished her earlier volumes: clear exposition based on wide reading and first-hand observation; analysis free of partisanship to an unusual degree, although seldom brilliant. There is little in it to instruct or stir professional students of international relations; but the rest of us, who are haunted by the suspicion that we ought to know more about the contemporary drift of world affairs than our time allows, will find it rewarding and frequently absorbing reading.

A Capsule History

MRS. DEAN'S carefully organized book falls into three parts, the first of which undertakes to explain how the world got the way it is today. If you have read a college textbook on modern history lately, her chapters on the rise of nationalism, the growth of imperialism, the ebbing and waning of capitalism and the arrival of socialism will all seem pretty familiar stuff. If you haven't, you will find her capsule history an eye-opening primer or a lucid refresher.

The central, and to my mind the most successful, section of the book consists of a thoughtful survey of the economic, social, and political forces at work in the world. Its value is enhanced by a country-by-country analysis of Europe based upon Mrs. Dean's observations during a trip last year that took her under the edge of the Iron Curtain, and, of course, upon the research of the Foreign Policy Association staff. Every paragraph of these chapters testifies to Mrs. Dean's ability as a conscientious and objective reporter.

By comparison, the final chapters, in which Mrs. Dean discusses the attempts of the United States and the nations of western Europe to resolve their dilemma through such devices as the Marshall Plan, the North Altantic Treaty and the United Nations, is a disappointing letdown. Here she is writing about things that have been staring at us from newspaper headlines across our breakfast tables every morning for the past five years. Being so close to them, most of us have never troubled ourselves to learn what they really were or thought very much about their significance. If ever simple exposition and fair analysis were needed, it is here. Unfortunately, Mrs. Dean is not notably successful in providing either.

Less Sure Abotu Russia

LIKE most Americans, Mrs. Dean is a relativist, and she has usually taken the middle ground on current questions. During the war she went on record as opposed to the Nazis but in favor of treating the Germans "like other people" once they were defeated. Just three years ago she was writing that "Russia is neither the sinister menace pictured by unrestrained critics nor the Utopian paradise depicted by uncritical admirers." Now she is uncertain about Germany, hazarding only the observation that "it would be no cause for surprise if Germany, like the legendary phoenix, should emerge from the ashes of war the only real victor in Europe."

She is not quite as certain as she was in 1947 that the United States and the USSR can achieve their individual goals without resort to a hot war, although she would undoubtedly insist that we must keep on trying. In this new book, as in the past, she argues that if we are going to preserve the kind of world we cherish, we must not insist that the free nations we seek as allies fashion their political and social systems in the exact image of our own—even if that means playing ball with socialists.

Again, like most of her fellow Americans of the Atomic Age, Mrs. Dean is chastened but still hopeful. We are, she believes, in the midst of a period of great change somewhat resembling the fifteenth to seventeenth centuries, and we sorely need faith to carry us through.

"It is not in periods when men have faith that they turn to witch-hunting," she writes, as if she had been reading about Senator McCarthy, "but in periods when, their faith profoundly shaken, they seek scapegoats for their inner unrest and anxiety . . . Soon, we must hope, we shall emerge from the dark tunnel through which we have been arduously digging our way into an 'enlightenment' period of the twentieth century. We may then find that all peoples, like sandhogs working from different places of departure toward the same end, will meet at approximately the same point."

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

WITH the editor of "Love Poems of Six Centuries" and the author of "The Celebrated Case of Fitz John Porter" both on the local scene this week, a question of precedence is involved.

Gallantry suggests l'amour should precede war, so—to Mrs. Helen Husted of 3107 South st. nw., wife of Ellery Husted, architectural adviser to the Air Force.

Mrs. Husted, when "challenged" as to what she knew about love and poetry, said that the query had once made her "perfectly furious," because she had always considered love and poetry the things most worth thinking about.

It turns out that she taught poetry for several years and has lectured on the subject in schools across the country. She also wrote in 1941 "Timothy Taylor," a story in verse about an English boy refugee in America during World War II.

She has three daughters—Priscilla, 15; Helen, 17, and Caroline, 19. One of them, Mrs. Husted said, with the twinkle of a woman whose maiden name was McLanahan, is veritable "catnip."

It also turns out that Mrs. Husted is a graduate of Oxford University and a former special editor for Reader's Digest.

Civil War Fan

DR. OTTO EISENSCHIML, a cousin of Representative Adolph Sabath of Illinois and author of "The Celebrated Case of Fitz John Porter," was in from Chicago to star as narrator and portrayer of John Wilkes Booth in a reenactment of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln at the Library of Congress.

Dr. Eisenschiml looks like a kindly old German music teacher. Actually, he said, his father was of Czechoslovakian origin and came to this country at the time of the 1848 revolutions. The father fought with the Thirteenth Illinois in the Civil War, and became a captain at Shiloh.

The son, who was born in Vienna, where his father was representing an American commercial house, became a Civil War fan at his father's knee—at the age of 5. "The Civil War was my father's favorite subject," said Dr. Otto.

Dr. Otto, a chemist by profession and the author of 10 books on the Civil War period notable for their fresh approach and attitude of let-the-chips-fall-where-they-may, is now working on another. But he says that is getting ahead of the story.

Property Loan

IN THE reenactment of the tragedy at Ford's Theater, Dr. Otto needed a soft black hat to wear while playing the part of Booth. It seemed like a simple property to find, but when at the last minute Helen Ann Hilker and Stacia Ganas of the Library of Congress staff tried to run one down, they found they were looking for an apparently scarce article.

In a mood of frustration they went to lunch—and Miss Hilker saw one on a hat rack. She soon decided that it belonged to a priest at one of the tables, and, emboldened by anxiety, the two girls asked him—a Father Lombardo—if they could borrow it.

Yes, he said. He was reading at the library and wouldn't need it until 10 p. m. He needed it then to wear across town.

And that is why, as the sound-effects hooves of Booth's horse, galloping away from the murder, were dying away off stage, there was a girl hurrying away, too, a black hat in her hand.

Sturdy Roots Of a Keystone First Family

THE MUHLENBERGS OF PENNSYLVANIA. By Paul A. W. Wallace. University of Pennsylvania. 358 pp. $4.

IN "The Muhlenbergs of Pennsylvania," Paul Wallace, consultant to the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, has presented a history of the first generations of one of the State's "first families."

Progenitor of the American line was Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, a Lutheran pastor, native of Einbeck in Hanover, who received the call to Pennsylvania on his thirtieth birthday in 1741.

Henry Melchoir's son Peter became a major general in the Revolutionary army, was highly regarded by Washington, and was later a member of Congress. Son Henry Ernest's botanical studies led to his becoming known as "the American Linnaeus," and son Frederick Augustus became a local and national political leader and served as Speaker in the First and Third Congresses.

Wallace ably describes the religious background of Henry Melchior—patriarch of the Lutheran Church in America—in the old country and the ecclesiastical anarchy he found upon his arrival here. The careers of the sons, who overshadow the daughters, are also reported at some length. That the Muhlenbergs were a more solemn than romantic family is not the biographer's fault.

"The Muhlenbergs" is a history that should have interest chiefly for Pennsylvanians and students of early America.—L. G.

An illustration for Anna Perrott Rose's "Room for One More"

Scorns 'Suitable' Children

A Big-Hearted Mother And Her Problem Kids

ROOM FOR ONE MORE. By Anna Perrott Rose. Houghton Mifflin. 272 pp. $2.75.

IN A world full of whining neurotics, many of whom seem to be writing books, it is a rare privilege to discover a wholesome, courageous, big-hearted individual like Anna Perrott Rose who always could find room for one more homeless youngster.

Mrs. Rose had three healthy and happy offspring of her own. But six sounded to her like a "nicely balanced family."

So, quite casually, she picked up three of the most impossible problem children who ever managed to find loving foster parents.

Jane was the pampered but unloved product of a broken home. She had tantrums if asked to do the slightest task around the busy Rose household.

Joey was the dirty, illiterate, adenoidal son of a poverty-stricken mining family.

Jimmy John was a tiny paralytic who kicked and bit. He had spent all his young life in orphanages and hospitals. As the Rose children said, he was a "queer one" who didn't seem to have "all his buttons."

Each, under strange circumstances, came to visit for a couple of weeks. And at the end of that time each tearfully insisted upon staying.

The Rose family was not rich. And Mrs. Rose already had her hands full with children, housekeeping, lecturing and writing. But three times she and her husband decided that they had "Room For One More."

Likes Challenge

LUCKILY, Mrs. Rose seems to be a woman full of human warmth and understanding. She must also be a woman without nerves.

She scorns the idea of adopting "suitable" children. Such children, if indeed any exist, are no challenge.

Rolling up her sleeves, she took on each new problem foundling with amused tolerance which soon became deep affection.

Laughter and love and good food and good medical care soon began working wonders. Joey's adenoids and tonsils came out. He was kept clean and well-dressed. He was taught to speak decent English and not to eat like a small beast and hide his food under the pillow of his bed. The vapid expression left his face and he started to become a good-looking, normal and lovable small boy.

Jimmy John went through countless operations to help him regain the use of his arms and legs. Trot, Teensie and particularly Tim (the three Rose children by blood), took pride in Jimmy John's sturdy fight to regain his health, a struggle which was so successful that the crippled boy, using grim determination, actually managed to become an Eagle Scout, fulfilling the heroic requirement of hiking 14 miles in a day.

Even Jane became a cooperative member of the household, helping Jimmy John with his lessons and Mrs. Ross with the housework.

Literal Life Saver

AMONG her other accomplishments, the mother of this brood is a strong swimmer who has to her credit the saving of 23 lives in the Atlantic Ocean off the Jersey shore where the family has a summer cottage.

She insisted that all her children, including Jimmy John, pass their life-saving tests. Jane helped in one of the most dramatic of the rescues; Mrs. Rose might otherwise have lost her own life while dragging a large man out of the stormy sea.

It is a highly significant fact that along with the rest of her good sense, Mrs. Rose (a Vassar graduate and an accomplished writer) has no patience with most of the theories of the progressive educators and "liberal" child psychologists.

She hesitated to spank only in the case of little Jimmy John, who thereby felt excluded and slighted. Once when he had become much stronger and had been very bad, she did spank him. She found it hard to restrain her tears when later she heard him bragging about it.

The live-and-let-live, rough-and-ready, all-for-one-and-one-for-all spirit of this family should be a lesson for selfish, bickering households. The struggle to give the children every possible advantage a low budget could provide and send all six on to college, shows what can be done if a father and mother pull together and teach their youngsters to also put their small shoulders to the wheel.

When her husband died, Mrs. Rose carried on the battle alone, and this book is dedicated to the man who helped her make a home for her "nicely balanced family."

"Room For One More" is a book you will keep and remember long after you have thrown away dozens of the shabby, arty, frightened little volumes currently being acclaimed as "literature."

200 Poets Sing Iliad Of Love

LOVE POEMS OF SIX CENTURIES. Edited by Helen Husted. Coward-McCann. 287 pp. Gift edition, $3.50. Library edition, $4.

LOVE, said Sir Richard Burton in the "Anatomy," is the "sole subject almost of poetry, all our invention tends to it, all our songs."

Sir Richard's sweeping statement was not quite exact, but just as he was carried away by his rhetoric, so will the reader of Helen Husted's anthology be happily swept along.

Though the reader will smilingly disallow Sir Richard's statement that the Italians of his day were good poets and painters "because every man of fashion amongst them hath his mistress," he will allow that more poets of genius and talent have given of their best to the persistent passion than to anything else.

From this immense swelling of voices Mrs. Husted has chosen some 250 selections by approximately 200 poets. Many of the poems are familiar. The reader would feel cheated if he did not find some of his old favorites, such as Marlowe's "Was this the face that launched a thousand ships," Dowson's "Ad Manus Puellae," Landor's "Rose Aylmer," Byron's "We'll go no more a-roving," or Edna Millay's "Pity Me Not" from "The Harp-Weaver and Other Poems."

Other poems are unfamiliar—the anthology that doesn't have some surprises isn't worth its salt. In this connection, the editor has really pulled one out of her bonnet. It is a lyric with the simplicity and directness of an air by Thomas Campion, fit to be sung to Elizabethan lute and viol, and it is by her architect husband, Ellery Husted. Few are the anthologists who can begin at home.

The word "anthology" too often connotes a miscellaneous scrapbook. Mrs. Husted has gone about it more effectively. Her chorus of voices is chosen with a discriminating taste and arranged to give the book a unity and the reader an experience.

Innocence, Desire, Fulfillment, Pain and Parting, Maturity, Love's Immortality—the sections follow each other in logical order and the poems flow into each other to make an iliad of love.

Middleground Holds On to Win Derby

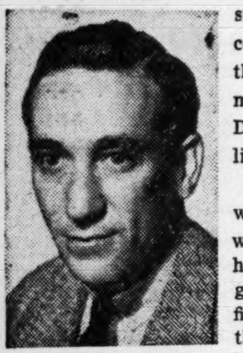
This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Louisville, Ky., May 6.—Lightning struck Louisville today but it was not in animal form, lest you're thinking Hallieboy won the Derby. The early-morning rains converted the track from fast to good, and the Derby results made some converts, too.

The race track is one place of business where the customers are not always right. But at Louisville, for a buck, you can win a mint in your julep, at least.

Bill Corum, who used to be an old newspaperman himself, is superintending the works here as the successor to the late Matt Winn. Corum took the job when he discovered there was more money as general manager of Churchill Downs than there was in old newspapers, like the N. Y. Journal-American.



POVICH

In the clubhouse there was some doubt whether this was the Derby or a Hollywood premier. Your Host, the California horse, brought its own cheering section of glamour gals and hunks of men from the film capital. He is owned by the boss of the Universal International Studios, William (them as has) Goetz.

The boys with the best mounts in Louisville today were the taxicab jockeys. They'd pick you up at the hotel and wait for you at the track for $45. All who engaged 'em were immediately suspected of being Texans or Oklahomans with li'l old oil wells working for them.

FOR THE IMPATIENT Derby bettor, the track offered the utmost in convenience, opening the betting windows at 9:30 a.m., for the big race. After the rain and bourbon content of the night before, the track and the customers had one thing in common: they were both drying out nicely.

Trainer Maxie Hirsch who is saddling Middleground for King Ranch, hasn't brought the horse along any more carefully than he has Bill Boland, the boy who has the mount. Hirsch didn't break his horse to a saddle until two years ago, but he nursed Boland through five years as an exercise boy before giving him the Derby mount.

Eddie Arcaro and Johnny Longden, who were due to ride the two favorites, Hill Prince and Your Host, reported early and decided to improve each shining hour by accepting $40 riding fees in the earlier races. They were warming up for the shot at the $10,000 fee that goes with the Derby victory.

Hill Prince, the Virginia hope, is out of a mare called Hildene which like many another Virginia gentlewoman, is long on pedigree but short on cash earnings. A daughter of Bubbling Over, the 1926 Derby winner, Hildene won exactly $100 in her own racing career.

Louisville drafted scores of its pretty girls as auxiliary police, complete with uniforms, during the two-day traffic rush of the Derby, which prompted a happy celebrant to beat off his pals downtown this morning with the admonition: "Leave me alone, I'm trying to get accosted by a cop."

TODAY'S crowd again was estimated at 100,000. It always is, in the absence of any official attendance report. The track is willing to maintain the polite fiction that there are always 100,000 here on Derby Day despite only 38,000 seats.

Man O'War, which never won the Derby, was represented in today's race until an hour before posttime when the Brookmeade Stable scratched Big Red's grandson, Greek Ship. It was a form of retrenchment by Brookmeade, which thus saved the $1000 starting fee.

Hallieboy, fresh off the bush tracks and hailed as the poor man's Your Host, drew some support in the early betting. He dropped from 50 to 1, to 45 to 1, and it was suspected that some of the folks here were betting with their hearts instead of their heads.

Just to show you how Kentuckians feel about it, Old Glory was given into the keeping of a lone soldier in the infield while a four-man Marine guard was deemed necessary to the dignity of the Kentucky State flag.

There would be no privacy for the Derby field until after it had run more than a half mile. The crowd rimmed the entire home stretch, was thickly packed on the rail all around the first turn and didn't begin to thin out until the start of the backstretch.

THAT LAST is a the same point where Your Host's competition would also begin to thin out, the Californians were betting. Most everybody was admitting that Your Host is "the horse to catch," and among those reserving the belief he would be caught were the folks who took Hill Price at 5 to 2.

AT THE BUGLE, the fourteen 3-year-olds started the parade to the post, nose to tail and tail to nose. The most prominent tail belonged to Lotowhite, son of Devil Diver. The most prominent nose belonged to Eddie Arcaro, astride Hill Prince.

MIDDLEGROUND (a-entry) $17.80, $5.40, $3.80; HILL PRINCE, $3.80, $3.20; MR. TROUBLE (b-entry) $3.60.

MIDDLEGROUND, never far back and saving ground under a steady ride, moved up boldly at the stretch turn and, after taking command held HILL PRINCE safe. The latter, on the inside from the start, was in close quarters at the upper turn, continued willingly when clear and after suffering some interference from the tiring YOUR HOST, closed resolutely but could not overtake MIDDLEGROUND. MR. TROUBLE, sharp factor from the start was much used engaging YOUR HOST until inside the stretch turn, then failed to rally when set down in the drive. SUNGLOW began fast, dropped back after the start, then recovered and moved up steadily but could not better his position when hard ridden during the final furlong. OIL CAPITOL began fast, raced well after the break and made a good bid approaching the stretch, then tired but deadheated with HAWLEY for fifth. HAWLEY tired after showing early speed but finished on equal terms with OIL CAPITOL. LOTOWHITE was outrun. YOUR HOST began alertly, gave way to MR. TROUBLE after three-quarters mile, then came again to assume command but tired badly during the stretch run. ON THE MARK was never dangerous. HALLIEBOY showed nothing. DOOLY was through early. TRUMPET KING could not keep up. STRANDED was never a serious factor. BLACK GEORGE failed to stay after showing early speed.

Gussie Wins, Gains Finals

Wiesbaden, Germany, May 6 (AP). Gertrude Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., romped to a decisive 6—3, 6—3 semifinal victory over Inge Pohmann of Germany today to gain the finals of the Wiesbaden International Tennis Tournament. She will meet Barbara Scofield of San Francisco, who defeated Alice Von Tarnay of Germany, 6—3, 5—7, 6—1.

Pirates Turn Gumbert Loose

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates today handed an unconditional release to Harry Gumbert, veteran righthanded hurler.

The rangy flinger compiled a record of 143 victories against 113 defeats during his 14 years of major league pitching. He spent seven years with the New York Giants and played in four World Series.

HOW FIRST SEVEN HORSES FINISHED IN KENTUCKY DERBY YESTERDAY WITH MIDDLEGROUND WINNING

Mr. Trouble? That Was Hill Prince Yesterday

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 6.—Mr. Trouble was a well-respected entry in today's Kentucky Derby, but it was Hill Prince that deserves the name.

Trouble dogged the hoofbeats of the gallant Virginian from the start, overtook him again on the backstretch and then cruelly impeded Hill Prince on the home-stretch in the $100,000 run for the roses.

The Virginia colt that finished second to the winning Middleground, was off sluggishly in ninth place with a confident Eddie Arcaro biding his time in the second flight, sure of Hill Prince's stretch running qualities.

And then when Arcaro attempted to move on the backstretch, after saving ground on the rail, he could find no hole, couldn't get to the leaders until the far turn.

In the clear and running fourth to Your Host, Middleground and Mr. Trouble as the field turned for home, Hill Prince appeared ready to take it all from only three lengths back. Then, more trouble.

The fast-tiring favorite, Your Host, already headed by Middleground, drifted out as Arcaro moved with Hill Prince. Your Host was taking Hill Prince with him to the outside, and Arcaro took the only gamble left. He veered sharply to the inside.

But now Hill Prince had run in too many place on the track. And he had in front of him a steady-going Middleground who wouldn't chuck it. Under Arcaro's whip, Hill Prince did move on Mr. Trouble and head that colt by a length but under the wire he was a frustrated second to Middleground.

In the jockey's room after the race, Arcaro was philosophie, made no great point of his poor racing luck. "I thought I could catch Middleground," he said. "My horse ran a good race, but he didn't seem to have enough left at the finish."

Other observers were just as certain that bad racing luck cost Arcaro and Hill Prince the race—that he was beaten as much by Your Host, the favorite that finished ninth, as he was by Middleground the winner.

Bosox Slam 6 Homers, Win 11-1; Tribe, Yanks Split; Easter Star

Boston, May 6 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox set off a six-home run barrage to crush the Chicago White Sox, 11-1, today behind the four-hit pitching of bonus south-paw Chuck Stobbs.

Catcher Birdie Tebbetts bashed two of the circuit blows and thereby accounted for four runs. Ted Williams lofted his sixth four-bagger into the left field screen with two aboard in the first inning to decide matters early.

Junior Stephens and Bobby Doerr homered with the bases empty and Dom DiMaggio's four-base blow found Stobbs aboard in the eighth inning.

Stobbs had little trouble gaining his second win in two starts. After setting down the first three Chisox, Gus Zernial banged him for a homer as he opened the second inning.

Then the Chisox filled the bases on a single and two walks but Stobbs bailed himself out by fanning Pitcher Ken Holcombe, the first Chicago right-handed starter this season, for the third out.

Luis Aloma and Johnny Perkovich, also right-handers, were the other victims of the 13-hit Boston attack.

New York, May 6 (AP).—Big Luke Easter smashed two home runs—his first ones in major league competition—as the Cleveland Indians divided a doubleheader with the New York Yankees today. The Tribe took the opener, 5-4, but lost the nightcap, 7-4.

Easter's first blast, a terrific line drive off loser Allie Reynolds, came in the third inning of the opener with two men on. It gave Cleveland a 3 to 1 lead which it never lost. Early Wynn was credited with the victory.

Tommy Henrich's two doubles and two-run homer paced New York's 11-hit attack off five Cleveland hurlers in the second game. Easter's second homer had given the Indians a 2-0 edge in the first inning. But the Yanks came back with a pair in their half, one on Cliff Mapes' homer.

Fred Sanford, relieved by Joe Page in the seventh, chalked up his first victory. Sam Zoldak suffered his initial setback.

Joe DiMaggio went hitless in eight tries and now has only one

Groth Pulls 'Babe Herman' To Give Nats Two Runs

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats needed a two-run homer off the bat of Irv Noren to tie the Detroit Tigers in the ninth inning yesterday, but what they got was a strikeout and a second straight licking by the league-leaders, 8-6.

This unhappy denouement not only busted up a last-stand rally by the Nats, but also extended their first serious losing streak of the baby season to three straight.

The Tigers, who swept the two-game series, had no soft touch. On paper, that is. Manager Bucky Harris sent Ray Scarborough, his pitching ace, against the Bengals and he was trumped decisively if not quickly.

Aaron Robinson Homers

The hawk-nosed righthander pitched 11-hit ball and yielded six runs before he was permitted to retire and listen to the broadcast of the Kentucky Derby with nobody out except himself in the sixth inning.

Joe Haynes relieved and gave the Tigers their final two runs on four more hits, one of them a homer by Catcher Aaron Robinson, a left-hand swinger, into the left-centerfield stands.

Freddie Hutchinson essayed the Detroit pitching chores and got credit for the victory, his first of the campaign, but Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who almost became a Nat last winter, had to bail Hutchinson out in the somewhat hectic ninth.

With any luck, Hutchinson would have easily completed the game and registered an 8-3 decision, but his defense deserted him at two vital moments and staked the Nats to three unearned runs.

Groth Pulls "Beaut"

Johnny Groth, Detroit's prize sophomore center fielder, pulled the prize error of the day, a miscue that was easily a throwback to the days of the daffy Dodgers and Babe Herman, the daffiest of 'em all.

With two on and two away in the Nats' fifth and Detroit winging, 4-1, Groth came up with his beaut.

He dropped back a few feet in centerfield to haul in Noren's high fly. The ball plopped into his glove, found an opening there and proceeded to crash through and hit young Mr. Groth on the forehead, then dropped to the ground for a three-base, two-run error. Noren scored the third Nats' run of that inning on the next pitch as Hutchinson's first serve to Robinson got away from Cather Robinson.

The next time the Nats scored was in the ninth and the pair of markers they registered were legitimate enough. Al Evans singled and Eddie Yost doubled him to third. Whereupon Gil Coan swatted a triple against the right-field wall. That finished Hutchinson and it also finished the Nats,

About the Celebrities

CELEBRITIES TIME with the fourth annual National Celebrities golf tournament coming up June 3-4 at the Army Navy Country Club—

Bob Hope had a 71 the other day at Lakeside in Hollywood. But the shoulder he injured in a car wreck months ago still pains him. "I'll have to oil it up for the Celebs," he said.

Arthur Godfrey and Walter Winchell will meet at the first hole with putters drawn. Walter has spent the past few weeks in Florida sharpening his putting blade for his duel with Arthur. Godfrey planned to play nine holes at the Purcellville (Va.) course this weekend but the rains interferred.

Willie Hoppe, a world's champion longer than any other man in the history of sports (since 1906), not only will play in the Celebs but he bought $30 worth of tickets to the tournament and the companion show at the Armory while in town the past week.

More members of Washington's official family will take part in the Celebs than ever before—six from Cabinet, including Secretary of Defense Johnson, a right good golfer; two from Supreme Court, a dozen from Congress and most of the ranking officers from the services.

ARTHUR COOK, Washington's Olympic rifle champion, in the Celebs for the first time, says he can shoot a golf ball 500 yards off the first tee. This we must see.

Jimmy Nichols, one-armed golfer whose exhibition on the first tee was so well received last year, will be on hand again. Nichols, with only the left arm, gets 250 yards off the tee.

Among new faces this year: Earl Blaik of West Point; Eddie Eagan, New York's Boxing Commission chairman, and Don Otten and George Mikan, pro basketball's Paul Bunyans, 7 feet and 6-10, respectively. They say that Otten and Mikan can outdrive Jimmy Thomson, longest hitter among the golf pros.

The Redskins' Harry Gilmer and the Philly Eagles' Tommy Thompson may be the best golfers among pro footballers. Harry and Tommy will shoot it out in the Celebs.

Nat Holman, an original of the famed Celtics in basketball, and coach of the CCNY team that won both the NCAA and Madison Square Garden invitational titles last season, will take time off from his summer camp in New England to play in the Celebs.

Tickets for both the golf tournament and the Armory show (another gee-whizzer to be announced soon) will go on sale shortly after the middle of this month.

Shower Halts Terps, Hoyas

A thundershower forced the postponement of the Maryland-Georgetown baseball game at College Park yesterday.

The Hoyas got to Terp Pitcher Norm Geatz for two runs in the first and led, 2-0, when the storm broke. Frank Mattingly set the Terps down in the first frame.

The game is tentatively scheduled to be played either Wednesday or Thursday.

Hill Prince Finishes 2d; Your Host Out of Money

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Louisville, Ky., May 6.—Middleground refused to give ground in the stretch and put the field and most of the experts in the middle in the Seventy-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby today.

King Ranch's Texas-bred colt, ridden by the Texas apprentice, Willie Boland, drove into the finish line a length and a quarter in front of a luckless Hill Prince. A half length back came Mr. Trouble to be third, 2¾ lengths in advance of Sunglow.

Your Host, the toast of the West Coast before the race, was as unpopular as burned toast to the favorite players when he surrendered the lead and finished a floundering ninth.

Middleground Pays $17.80

Middleground, a chip off Derby winner Bold Venture, who also sired Assault for King Ranch, was coupled in the betting with On The Mark, and paid $17.80 to win, $5.40 to place and $3.80 to show. Hill Prince returned $3.80 and $3.20, while Mr. Trouble, of the C. V. Whitney entry, paid $3.60 to show.

Running over a fast track and under cloudy skies, Middleground showed the 100,000 crowd time of 2:01 3/5, the second fastest time in Derby history and only a fifth of a second off Whirlaway's record performance.

It took that kind of time, plus a rough trip, to beat Hill Prince in the Derby. While Middleground had no mishaps, the Virginia hope found trouble along the rail through the backstretch and again in the final straightaway.

Middleground was never farther back than fifth, ran over horses to get his lead and was a courageous finisher if there ever was one.

Boland 2d Apprentice to Win

Young Boland, the second apprentice jockey to win a Derby—Ira Hanford was the first aboard Middleground's sire—proved a well of help to the colt, once thought to be second best among the King Ranch's 3-year-olds.

Middleground brought new Derby glory to Trainer Max Hirsch, the veteran conditioner becoming the first to saddle two father-son winning combinations. With Ben Jones on the sidelines, many of the oldtimers swung onto the winner by stringing along with Max Hirsch. Like Middleground and Boland, Hirsch is a Texan who began as a trainer in 1898.

Along with Your Host, Oil Capitol left his backers limp as the proverbial rag. The son of Mahmound made one mild move and then faded into a dull-finishing fifth in the field reduced to 14 with the scratching of Greek Ship.

The Midas touch failed to come to Walter Fugate's Hallieboy although the rags-to-riches hope did not finish last. In tenth position he had four horses behind him and failed by only four lengths of catching Your Host at the end. Incidentally, Hallieboy wasn't the longest shot in the field,

Alexander 7 Back, 3 Up On Snead

By Charles R. Lewis

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 6 (AP).—Ben Hogan finished the first 54 holes of the Greenbrier Open Golf Tournament today with a phenomenal 17-under-par 193.

Bantam Ben picked up a five-under par 65 to go with two previous 64's in stretching his lead over second-place Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., to seven strokes with a single round remaining.

Alexander Slips

Never has the historic, 6368-yard old White course taken such a sustained beating as that handed out by the plucky Texan in his drive for the first title of his determined comeback campaign.

Alexander, with his 132-68—200, slipped four strokes off his own brilliant 6-under-par 64 of yesterday because he was unable to hole any putts of longer than 5 feet.

Host Pro Sammy Snead and Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., with 134-69—203 and 137-66—203, respectively, were tied for third and fourth.

Then came Ed Furgol of Royal Oak, Mich., and Norman Von Nida of Sidney, Australia, with 205's.

Hogan needs a four-under-par 66 tomorrow to equal Byron Nelson's all-time PGA-recognized total of 259 for 72 holes of competitive play. The record was set at Broadmoor in Seattle in 1945.

Hogan insists "I'm not staging a comeback; I just had a little rest and am picking up where I left off."

The little fellow whose career almost was ended by an auto wreck in February of 1949 could have had a course-tying 63. He muffed a 2-foot birdie putt in the sixteenth hole after dropping a 240-foot approach shot that far from the pin.

He started out with a birdie and picked up four more in the 18 holes.

Haefner Has 66

He made a gallery of several hundred gasp when he dropped a 260-foot second shot on the 356-yard fourteenth just 4 inches from the hole.

Heafner's 66 was the second best round of the day and Chick Harbert's 67 was next as nine of the pros broke par. Snead was troubled with three putts on one green and he overshot another for his 69.

Lynchburg Whips Catholic U. Twice

Lynchburg College clinched a Mason-Dixon Conference playoff berth by sweeping both ends of a double-header, 4-2 and 8-0, over Catholic University yesterday at Brookland.

Lynchburg won its tenth straight game in the opener when Ralph Moon bested Ted Rudel, yielding four hits to Rudel's eight. It was Rudel's first defeat in four starts.

The visitors got off winging in the nightcap, pulling a triple play in the first inning. The Cardinals, still in the running for a spot in the playoffs, have a 5-5 Conference mark.

Terps Frosh Beat Montgomery, 5-2

Maryland's freshman baseball team came from behind after two were out in the ninth inning to tally five runs and beat Montgomery 5-2 at Bethesda.

Ernie Clifford had shut out the Terp frosh with three hits until a double, triple, three singles and an error nailed up the game for Maryland.

Tar Heels Hang on to Top GW, 8-5

North Carolina's Tar Heels scored four runs in the fourth inning and then withstood a ninth-inning rally by George Washington to register an 8-5 Southern Conference triumph yesterday at the Alexandria Municipal Stadium.

John Senter and Joe Brookshire walked to start the winning rally for North Carolina. Bill McGinn's single scored Senter and Joe Eldridge brought in Brookshire and McGinn with another single.

GW Rally Falls Short

The final run of the inning came after Charlie Overman walked and Ed Lamb singled to score Eldridge.

George Washington stirred up two runs in the ninth. Don Druckenmiller walked and advanced to second on Lou Ciarocca's grounder to first.

GW's Third Loop Loss

Frank Cavallo singled, Druckenmiller scoring, Jack Tivnan walked and Cavallo came in when Art Kennedy reached first base on an error.

George Washington has won six games and lost three in the Southern Conference.

Motorcycle Races At Piney Grove

Motorcycle racing will resume today at Piney Grove Speedway with time trials beginning at 1:00 o'clock. Nine events are on the card.

Joe Weatherly, Norfolk, Va., Pa., both national champions are slated to appear. Weatherby holds the 100-mile road race title, and Miller holds the 45-cubic-inch crown.

Too Free, Loose, Long?

Marlene Bauer's Swing Like Those of Jones, Locke—and Child Sensation Is Here to Stay

(Editor's Note: Frank Walsh, veteran professional of the Red Run Country Club, Royal Oak, Mich., noted for his study of the swing in golf, has watched Marlene Bauer, latest sensation. He has written the accompanying article on Marlene's provocative style. It first appeared in the PGA magazine and appears in The Washington Post by special permission.)

By Frank Walsh

AND NOW along comes a young lady named Marlene Bauer. I watched Marlene play this winter in the Florida tournaments. Marlene Bauer has the same method of playing golf, or handling a golf club, that Jones and Locke have and the golfing public hasn't changed a bit.

They're saying the same about Marlene's swing that the others said about Jones and Locke. That her swing is too full, too free, too loose, too long.

Marlene nevertheless kept on performing in championship style through the Florida circuit. I was present several times with Marlene's father when the enthusiastic galleryites would say to Pop Bauer: "Why don't you shorten up her swing before she goes to pieces?"

When the Australian crawl was first brought to this country as the best means of moving through the water, it was nearly laughed out of America because it was unnatural, difficult to learn—yet today it is the stroke that is winning all of the swimming events.

In 1920 Chick Evans, wearing a short, compact, secure golf stroke was looked upon, by nearly all, as the owner of a perfect swing.

At the same time a youngster named Bob Jones was looked upon as a mere flash. Because the Jones swing was free and full, to the average mind it did not have the solid security that was necessary in their minds for consistency in golf.

Harry Vardon, the great English golfer, visiting our country at that time said: "This fellow Evans will never win another National Championship and Bob Jones will win many, many National Golf Championships."

For this opinion Vardon was given a good going over by the writers and the millions of Chick's fans.

In 1947 I was at Augusta for the Masters Golf Tournament. A new entry had arrived named Bobby Locke. All present were interested in having a look at this Locke fellow because he had beaten Sam Snead 13 out of 16 matches in South Africa.

The majority had a look at Locke's way of swinging a club and the conversation went. "Snead must have been playing lousy golf to let that kind of a swing beat him"—or—"This Locke must have holed all 50 footers in order to break 80 with that type golf stroke."

The boys laid the dough on the line—that Locke would go home broke unless he shortened up his swing and stopped sweeping that club around behind himself in the backswing.

Well, Locke did not change his swing. He stuck to his round, full, free, easy way of handling the club—and tournament after tournament Bobby Locke's name kept showing up at the top of the list. I don't have to tell you. Jones and Locke did all right.

But do you know that many still think that good golf can't be played with their type swings and defend their belief by saying: "Jones won because he always had either a 1:00 o'clock or 2:00 o'clock starting time" and that, "Locke is just lucky, he can putt eyes out of the ball or he wouldn't get around."

Yep, people, especially golfers, are funny. Jones and Locke had the two most delightful ways of playing golf of any golfers I have even seen. Watching them play it looked like a game—not work. They employed "feel" not force.

Marlene Bauer is here to stay—Pop Bauer is a wise head. There'll be no change in her swing. Marlene will capture many championships. What changing will have to be done is in the minds of the golfers—It is they and we that must make the change. Golf is not a natural game. Marlene plays it naturally but Marlene is left handed, playing right handed golf. Her ball in the air has a lovely light flight and tends toward a draw, slight right to left, curve.

This too is similar to the Jones-Locke way of sending the ball away. This type shot has proven very difficult for a natural right handed player to produce.

It is a proven fact that the majority of right handed people playing right handed golf, tend to slice the ball. And the overwhelming majority of left handed people playing right handed golf tend to hook the ball.

Plays in Celebs

Marlene Bauer and her sister, Alice, will play in the National Celebrities golf tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club, June 3-4.

Louise Suggs Takes Lead in Weathervane

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—While 50-mile-an hour winds nearly blew other competitors off the course, 115-pound Louise Suggs of Atlanta, Ga., reeled a two-over par 76 today to grab the lead in the $17,000 transcontinental Weathervane Open Golf Meet.

Babe Zaharias, playing on her home course, required 43-42..85 for the 6093-yard distance. The long-hitting pro had taken the lead at the start of 144-hole cross-country jaunt when it opened at Peeble Beach, Calif., last week with a double-round of 158.

Today's trip gave the Babe a 54-hole mark of 243, while Miss Suggs, the 1949 National Open champion, totaled 237 for a six-stroke margin in three rounds. The meet then moves to Cleveland and winds up in White Plains, N. Y., two weeks hence.

Caps Acquire Lloyd, Hunter and Await Schnittker

Bob Foster, Uline Arena general manager, last night disclosed that Earl Lloyd and Harold Hunter, Negro basketball players recently acquired by the Caps at the NBA's collegiate draft meeting in Chicago, have signed their contracts for the 1950-51 season.

Meanwhile, both Foster and Coach Horace (Bones) McKinney, are awaiting the arrival of Dick Schnittker, Ohio State's All America basketball forward, and Washington's No. 1 choice, who will report here Wednesday to discuss contract.

Coe, Goldwater Gain Finals of Western Amateur

Dallas, Tex., May 6 (AP).—Charlie Coe, the national champion from Oklahoma City, and Bob Goldwater of Phoenix, Ariz., entered the finals of the Western Amateur Golf Tournament today after hectic battles that were decided on the 36 greens.

Coe had to fight off a Garrison finish by youthful Mac Hunter of Los Angeles to win two-up and he had to shoot two-under-par 70 on the 6470-yard Dallas Country Club course to do it.

Terps Shade Army, 8 to 7, In Lacrosse

Refusing to fold in the last period as it had on two previous Saturdays, the University of Maryland lacrosse team came from behind to score an 8-7 victory over Army at College Park yesterday.

A 10-yard bounce shot by Pat Walker with three minutes remaining broke a 7-7 tie and clinched the win, Maryland's fifth in eight collegiate starts.

Army absorbed its second loss in five college contests.

Army took the lead in the second half, when Bob Lorenzen put the ball past Terp Goalie Bill Larash to break the 4-4 halftime tie.

Catholic Trackmen Win Over Mounts

Catholic University's track team defeated Mount St. Mary's, 63-36, yesterday at Central High in a tuneup for the Mason-Dixon Conference next Friday and Saturday at Catholic.

Only double winner of the meet was Cardinal Sal Consolo, who placed first in the shotput and discus. C. U. has won two dual meets and lost one.

Ivan Walnes Hurls 1-Hitter

Ivan Walnes, Tony Kearney and Bunky Kolley had their arms in shape yesterday as they pitched their respective teams to victories in Catholic Youth Organization baseball competition.

Ivan allowed only one hit as his St. Bernadette's team defeated Blessed Sacrament, 10-0, and Tony gave up only three safeties as St. James defeated Campus School, 5-0, in Junior Division play. Bunky hurled St. Anthony's to a 5-1 Intermediate Division win by giving up only two hits and striking out 12 men.

Grays Beat Blues, 19-13 at Georgetown

Georgetown University picked the hottest day of the spring to hold its annual intrasquad Blue-Gray game yesterday, and the Gray came out ahead, 19-13, at the Hilltop.

End Dick Losh grabbed a short pass from Chuck Gagliano and ran 35 yards for the Gray's winning touchdown in the third quarter.

Jack Mahoney scored both Blue touchdowns, rushing over from the two-yard line in the first quarter, and snagging a 30-yard pass from Quarterback Chuck Rieger in the second.

The Gray pulled up to a 6-6 tie in the first quarter on Ed Makofske's four-yard plunge, and pulled ahead temporarily in the second when Center Jim Slovay recovered teammate Dick Barba's fumble in the end zone.

Harvard Beats Navy, 7-2, on 12-Hit Attack

Cambridge, Mass., May 6 (AP).—Lefty Barry Turner gave up eight hits today while pitching Harvard to a 7-2 victory over Navy. The Midshipmen put a single and Pat Corrigan's homer together in the third inning for both of their runs.

Harvard pushed over a run in the first inning and then clinched matters by scoring thrice on four singles and a base on balls in the second session.

Leftfielder Bernie Akillian led Harvard's 12-hit attack by dashing two singles and a triple and stealing home in the third inning.

Auerbach Turns Down Caps' Offer

ALTHOUGH HE underwent a tonsilectomy only Friday, Coach Red Auerbach of the Boston Celtics pro basketball team, regained his voice quickly yesterday and uttered a husky, but definite "no" to a proposal by the Washington Caps which would have sent Dick O'Keefe and Johnny Norlander to Boston for Sonny Hertzberg . . . spring finally arrived in Lonaconing, Md., and the first to welcome it was Lefty Grove, who seized the occasion to break out his golf clubs and practice for the National Celebrities Tournament at Army-Navy June 3-4 . . . it was his first game of golf since shooting a snappy—for him—109 in last year's event . . . the error originally charged to Catcher Mickey Grasso for his throw to second base Friday night has been changed and given to Sam Dente, who failed to cover the base and catch Grasso's perfect toss to nab Tiger Shortstop Johnny Lipon, who proceeded to third as a result of Dente's omission . . .

MAJ. BOZE BERGER, former Maryland University baseball and basketball great, will leave Bolling Field shortly for a tour of duty in Hawaii . . . patients at Walter Reed and Quantico Navy Hospital are among the Nats' biggest boosters. They received 10,000 cigarettes from the sponsors of the Nats broadcasts when the Nats pulled a triple play against the Yankees and two days later another 10,000 was sent their way when Gil Coan rapped his grand slam homer against the Browns . . . Paul Calvert, a Nat last year, is not the winningest pitcher in the American League, but he's certainly the busiest. He appeared in seven of Detroit's first 10 games .

WHEN CHARLIE JUSTICE decided not to play pro football, he left the Washington Redskins holding the bag with six "All the Way Choo-Choo" records they had hoped to play at their home games next fall . . . Young Chuck Ruggo is a member of the Sevarb softball team at Georgetown. Spelled backwards, Sevarb becomes Braves, of which baseball club Ruggo's father is vice president . . . Two Maryland track coaches saw Billy Johnson run a 9.8 mile recently, but refused to believe what the watch showed them and arbitrarily announced Johnson's time as 9.9 .

Harvard Tops Penn, Navy In Adams Cup

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—Coming from behind, the Harvard crew beat Pennsylvania and Navy today for its ninth straight Adams Cup victory.

Harvard's oarsmen overtook Penn 50 yards from the finish and went on to win by about 12 feet. Navy faded after a lung-busting sprint at the start and finished third, about three lengths back.

Rowing with a solid stroke, Harvard completed the 1¾ miles downstream course on the Severn River in 9 minutes 9.8 seconds. Penn was timed two seconds slower.

The last dozen strokes told the story as the heavy 185-pound Harvard boat forged ahead after trailing by nearly a third of a length through most of the race.

Sophomore Lou McCagg of Boston stroked the Crimson to its third straight victory of 1950. It was the first defeat for Penn in four outings and Navy's second defeat in three starts.

Harvard won the junior varsity event, downstream in the rain, beating Navy by a length and half in 9:14.8. Penn was third by three lengths.

Navy, King's Point Lead Dinghy Race

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—The Merchant Marine Academy's defending champions and Navy were tied for the lead after the opening races for the America Trophy on the Severn River today.

Crews of the Kings Point and Annapolis institutions accumulated 38 points each in seven races.

Midshipmen and merchant marines led dinghy masters from six other Eastern schools into the concluding round of races for the Middle Atlantic championship on the Severn tomorrow.

John (Red) Smith of Kings Point was the outstanding skipper on the tributary course. He sailed his 14-foot tempest dinghy first across the line in each of his three races. Closest to Smith's 27-point performance was Tim Barclay of Princeton with 19.

Bruins Slam 3 Homers In Sixth

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Preston Ward singled home Phil Cavarretta from third in the tenth inning today to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was the Cubs' second straight 10 inning triumph over the Brooks.

Cavarretta singled with two out in the extra inning and when Duke Snyder let the ball go through him for an error, Cavarretta raced to third. Ward, a former Dodger, then singled to right to win the game.

Fourth-inning home runs by Wayne Terwilliger, Ward and Andy Pafko accounted for the other Chicago runs. George Shuba and Snider homered for the Dodgers.

Hansen Saves Giants' Win After Kiner Grand Slams

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP). — Andy Hansen turned in a great relief job today as the New York Giants won an uphill 9-8 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hansen entered the game in the ninth inning with one run in, none out. He walked Wally Westlake to load the bases and then retired the next two hitters on pop flys and struck out rookie Earl Turner to end the game.

Bobby Thompson homered off rookie bonus Pitcher Bill McDonald in the eighth inning with the bases loaded to give the Giants a 9-7 lead. Ralph Kiner belted a grand-slam homer for the Pirates in the fifth off starter Clint Hartung.

Tigers Hit Scarborough Hard, Win, 8 to 6

as it turned out, as Trout ambled in and struck out Noren on four pitches.

Detroit's 15-hit attack was festooned with three doubles and a triple in addition to Aaron Robinson's second homer of the year.

Every man in the lineup got at least one hit, with ex-Nat Gerry Priddy getting three, a double and two singles. Catcher Robinson, however swung the most damaging stick, driving in four runs with his homer, single and outfield fly.

Johnny Lipon and Priddy opened the game with doubles to give Hutchinson a 1-0 lead, but the Nats tied it in the second when Eddie Stewart rammed a triple to right center and scored when Priddy's relay sailed into the Tiger dugout. The Tigers got that one back and added two more in the fifth on three singles and a walk.

With Groth chucking in a big assist, the Nats managed to tie it up in their half of the fifth, but shortly afterward the teams ceased to battle on even terms.

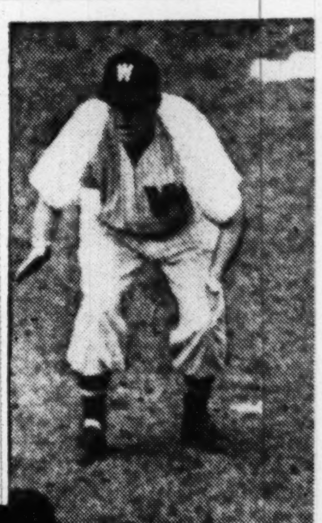
Manager Harris, who had been threatening to relieve Scarborough of his troubles earlier, was finally driven to it in the sixth inning when consecutive singles by Groth, Dick Kryhoski and Robinson, coupled with Stewart's error, moved the Detroits into a 6-4 lead.

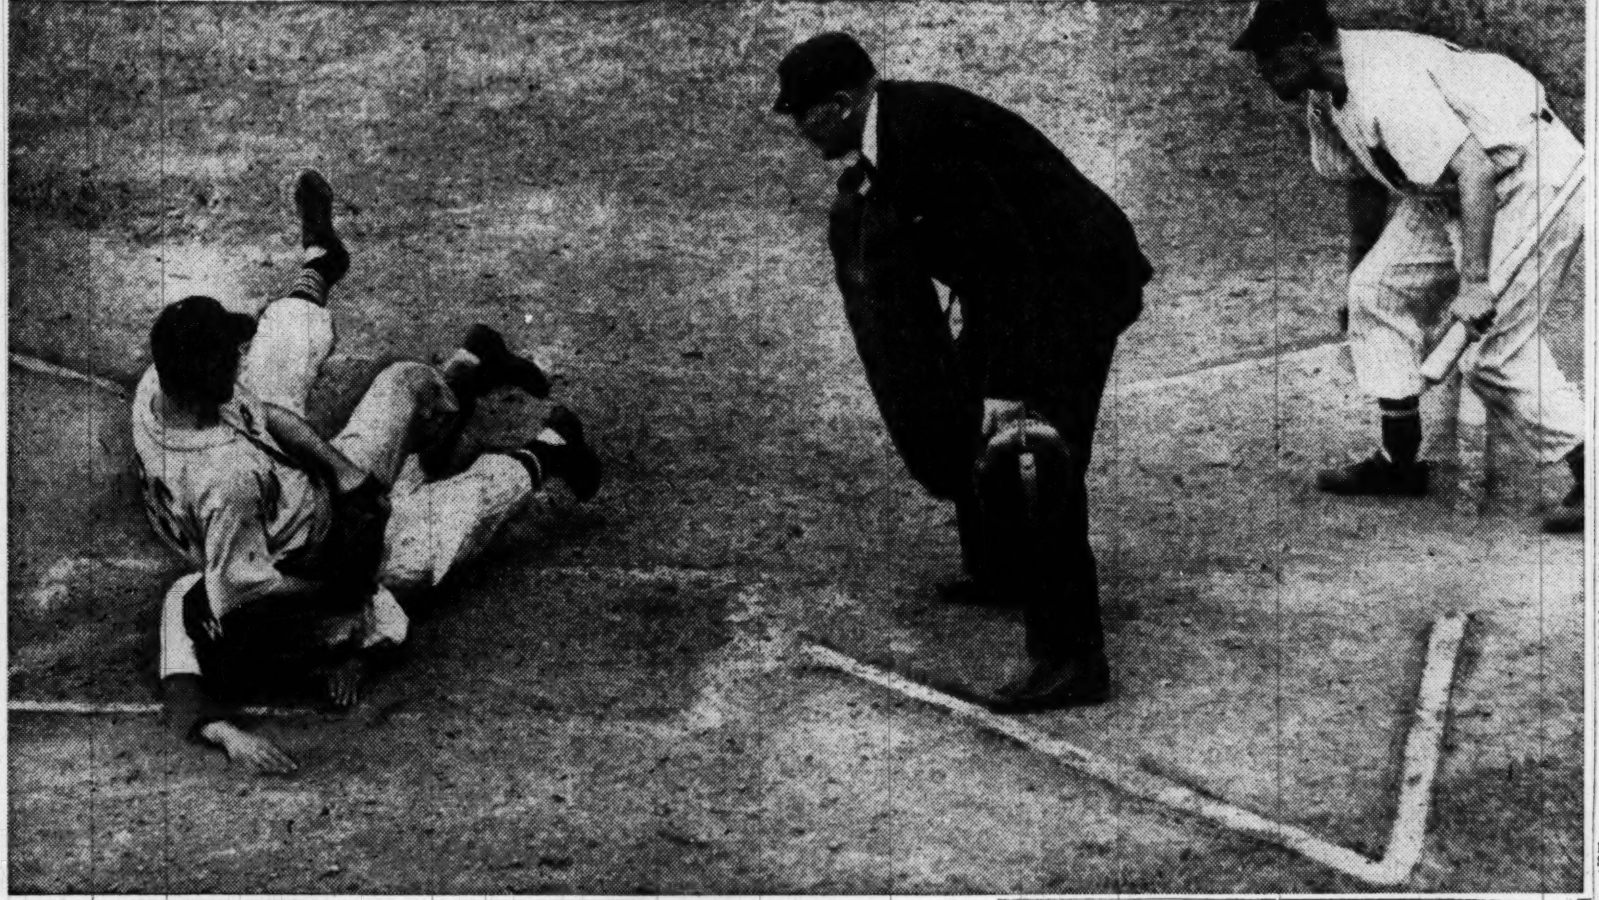
Detroit made no more errors after that and the Nats didn't catch up.

IN SHORT — yesterday was the first time in 11 straight games the Tigers haven't faced a left-handed pitcher, either as a starter or in relief . . . Scarborough got himself out of what threatened to be a bigger inning than it was when he pitched Hutchinson off second in the fifth. Scarborough collaborated with Robertson to execute the play much in the manner of the Cleveland Indians, who have it down to perfection.

Manager Red Rolfe had several run-ins with Umpire Cal Hubbard, claiming Scarborough was not coming to a full stop with men on bases. Rolfe lost each discussion, as he figured to do . . . most damaging hit of the day was not Aaron Robinson's home run, but a foul tip by Dick Kryhoski which hit a teen-aged spectator sitting in the upper stands right on the nost. His nose bled profusely. He didn't even get the ball . . .

Cleveland opens a two-game series starting at 2:30 today. For the Indian's first appearance here, Manager Bucky Harris is undraping Connie Marrero as a starting pitcher . . . the barrel-chested Cuban blanked the Athletics on four hits in a 7-hit relief job two weeks ago in his only previous outing.





Irv Noren Safe, 'Hutch' Takes Ride

Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Irv Noren of the Nats is safe at home on a close play in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with Detroit at Griffith Stadium. On a short passed ball, Noren sprinted in from third. Freddie Hutchinson, Detroit pitcher, retrieved the ball. In a race to the plate, Noren slid in safely, knocking Hutchinson's feet from under him. They ended in a pile, Hutch on top. Umpire Cal Hubbard calls the play. Eddie Robinson of the Nats watches closely while Eddie Stewart of the Nats, upper right, does a little rooting on his own.

Phils Slam 7 Cardinal Hurlers, 11-7

St. Louis, May 6 (AP). — One Cardinal hurler looked as good as another to the Philadelphia Phillies today as they pounded seven of the St. Louis pitchers for an 11 to 7 victory.

The show started with three runs against Max Lanier in the first inning. It ended with four tallies in the ninth, including three of them on a single by Stan Lopata that Harry Walker fumbled allowing Lopota to get home behind two base runners.

Dick Sisler walked twice and singled once, batting in two runs with the single.

Bob Miller started on the hill for the Phils but he was replaced by Hank Borowy and later Jim Konstanty as St. Louis picked up a few runs and threatened the Phils' lead.

Homer Against Browns

Fain, Lehner Lead A's to 12-4 Victory

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics broke a four-game losing streak before 2592 today by defeating the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 4, in a home run battle.

First Baseman Ferris Fain poled out a three-run homer in the first inning and Paul Lehner hit a four-bagger in the sixth with Eddie Joost aboard for the A's. Fain and Lehner drove in eight of the A's 12 runs. It was Fain's fourth home run of the season, one more than his total for all of last year.

The Browns' Kenny Wood and Sherman Lollar also hit for the circuit, each with one aboard.

Alex Kellner scattered six hits to take his eighth consecutive decision over the Browns in two seasons.

GW High Loses In Track Meet

Richmond, Va., May 6.—One record was set and a 15-year-old mark was tied today as the John Marshall High School track team defeated George Washington of Alexandria, 74 to 39.

Granville Grant sailed the discus 139 feet 4 inches to beat by 15 inches his own mark for the event set a week ago.

Allen Barbee, junior speed star, won the 100-yard dash in record-tieing time of 9.9 seconds.

Pittsburgh, May 6 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates tonight optioned Pitcher Frank Papish to Indianapolis subject to 24-hour recall.

Hit 13 in 3 Days

Braves Slug 5 Homers, Trample Cincy, 15-11

Cincinnati, May 6 (AP).—Setting a new National League record for the number of home runs in three consecutive games, the Boston Braves continued their murderous march through the West today with a 15-11 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Braves pounded Cincinnati pitchers for five homers today to run their total to 13 for the three-game series here. The old record of 12 was set by the New York Giants on July 1, 2 and 3, 1947.

The Braves' pulverizing attack now has produced 55 runs in their last four contests—three here and one in Pittsburgh. They have 15 homers in that collection.

Sid Gordon, Earl Torgeson, Bob Elliott, Willard Marshall and Luis Olmo hit the homers today for the Braves. In the three games here Torgeson got three, Sam Jethroe, Marshall, Elliott and Gordon two each and Connie Ryan and Olmo one each. It was Olmo's ninth inning blow that broke the record.

Against that kind of slugging the Reds never had a chance. Scoring in each of the first five innings, the Braves piled up a huge 13 to 3 lead before the Hapless Reds started fighting back.

They got a couple of circuit blows for themselves, too, with Grady Hatton and Ron Northey providing the big wallops.

The Braves clubbed five Cincinnati pitchers for 19 hits and gave Ken Raffensberger his fourth straight defeat of the season. Boston had to call on three hurlers to keep the Reds under submission

Morgan Wins CIAA Track

Led by Bob Tyler and George Rhoden, Morgan State won the C. I. A. A. Northern section track meet yesterday, winning handily over Howard, Lincoln and Delaware at Howard Stadium.

Tyler, national 100 and 200-meter junior titlist, was the standout of the meet with his 9.6 century, 21.8 two-twenty and beautiful third-leg on the sprint medley relay to account for 11¼ points.

Another national champion, George Rhoden, stepped off a 47.9 quarter and a 20.9 two-twenty on the medley team. The Morgan coach withdrew his Penn Relay championship mile team in favor of his "B" team which won by over 100 yards in 3:26.2.

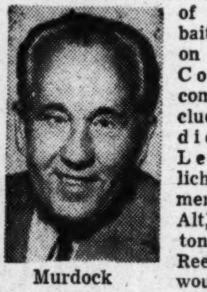
Old-Timers Casting Tourney Lists Best On East Coast Today at Lincoln Memorial

By Ralph Murdock

THE NATIONAL Capital Casting Club will hold the "Old Timers Tournament" today at the Lincoln Memorial Pool. Most of the best bait casters on the East Coast will compete including Freddie Gooch, Len Gramlich, Ben Dement, sr., Ben Alt, Dr. Hotton and Jay Reed. If you would like to see some fancy plug casting, make it a point to be there.



Murdock

While on the subject of casting, we would like to introduce to our readers the newly formed Rocky Hill Casting Club of Martinsburg, Va. The club has just elected its officers, Douglas Stewart, president; Lawrence Smith, jr., secretary-treasurer and Henry Rice, captain.

It is the first casting club ever organized in Martinsburg and is now making plans for several registered tournaments. It will be affiliated with the National Association of Angling and Casting Clubs.

CAPT. BERT LAMB is back in harness again. Bert spent the winter commercial fishing for kingfish at Fort Pierce, Fla. It only took him one day to locate the rockfish off Holland Point. Point. With Capt. Ralph Brannon and his wife they picked up five stripers, the largest weighing 5 pounds. The successful bait was a size 3-0 Lusby yellow head bucktail.

Henry Rice, Douglas Stewart, Lawrence Smith
Officers of Rocky Hill Casting Club at Martinsburg, W. Va.

UNDOUBTEDLY, innumerable local anglers have made useless trips to the Chesapeake Bay area only to find that the bay was too rough for good fishing. Here's one way to overcome this situation. Call Barnett's Knotty Food Shop—West River 6123. An hourly tide report, wind direction and velocity and a barometer reading will be yours for the asking. The "info" will cover the bay from Hooper's Light below Solomon's Island to Baltimore.

THE SUPERINTENDENT of Shenandoah National Park has announced that Fishery Research Biologist J. K. Chamberlain of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service is now engaged in a comprehensive study of streams within the park to determine what is necessary to accomplish the park's objective of providing "good sport fishing" throughout the season, in keeping with National Park Service policies.

Mr. Chamberlain, who has been on the assignment since April 14, is well qualified in this work and has had considerable experience in fresh-water fisheries management. He was detailed in 1936 to work with the United States Forest Service on Pisgah National Forest in the development of a trout fishing policy for the Southern Appalachian National Forests.

Other studies in 1941 includes trout streams and warm water ponds in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Florida, Colorado and Oklahoma. The streams in Shenandoah National Park which already have been studied contain natural fish food in abundance.

The next column you will read will come from Oregon Inlet, at Nag's Head, N. C. where Herb Goodman, of Remington Rand, and yours truly "except" to nab a few channel bass.

Brewers Defend

Six Sandlot Leagues Will Open Monday

Tomorrow is a big day for Washington's sandlot baseball faithful with the six major unlimited weekday leagues opening their season at 5:30 p.m.

The big game is the Heurich-Cameo meeting in The Washington Post-Industrial League inaugural on the West Ellipse. The Brewers, the "old pros" of amateur ball hereabouts, are defending their league and city titles.

Oldest of the leagues, the Departmental, begins its 50th year with Federal Bureau of Investigation tangling with Naval Gun Factory on the South Ellipse. Nats Veep Calvin Griffith will toss out the first ball.

Four Recreation Games

The Recreation Department's four unlimited league curtain raisers round out the slate. In the Western Ellipse League, defending champ Fire Department meets Naval Receiving Station. In the Northern Ellipse circuit, Government Employes' Insurance Corporation plays the Philippine Club.

Metropolitan Police opens defense of the Anacostia No. 1 league title against Naval Air Station, and Marine Corps Institute, Anacostia No. 2 champ, tackles Jack Pry Motors.

As 1949 All-America Tournament champions, the Heurich Brewers automatically qualify for the tournament to be held here in August under sponsorship of the Board of Trade. If Heurich doesn't repeat in the city playoffs, the new champ and Heurich will both represent D. C. in the 16-team All-America tourney.

Delayed by two Sundays of bad weather, five weekend leagues finally open up in the suburban area today.

Here's the schedule:

Navy Golfers Win EIGA Meet

Charlottesville, Va., May 6 (AP).—Navy golfers went through the sectional Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association tournament undefeated today by adding Virginia and Georgetown to their conquest yesterday of Pennsylvania.

The Midshipmen barely finished ahead of the Cavaliers in today's first round, 4-3, but completed the sweep by thrashing the Georgetown Hoyas, 7-0.

In the other round-robin matches, Pennsylvania defeated Georgetown, 4-3, and Virginia topped Pennsylvania by the same score.

Navy's Al Williams won his No. 1 match from Virginia's Nick Miller on the nineteenth hole.

Pennsylvania 4, Georgetown 3.

Al Weisberg, Georgetown, defeated Ray McCabe, 1 up, 20th hole; Herman Bodx, Pennsylvania, defeated Charlie McCarthy, 7 and 5; Allan Sussel, Pennsylvania, defeated Tom Mahan, 2 and 1; John Powers, Georgetown, defeated Tom Liebo, 2 up; Dick Neuber, Pennsylvania, defeated Art McGovern, 2 and 1; Dick Lipsey, Pennsylvania, defeated Jim Farley, 2 and 1; Tony Alberton, Georgetown, defeated Bill Pequignot, 2 and 1.

Navy 4, Virginia 3.

Al Williams, Navy, defeated Nick Miller, 1 up, 19th hole; Dennis Sullivan, Navy, defeated Fred Phillips, 4 and 2; Dick Wells, Virginia, defeated Dick Fontaine, 1 up, 19th hole; Dick Wiseman, Navy, defeated Jack Hendrickson, 6 and 4; Lee Baggett, Navy, defeated Sonny King, 2 and 1; Joe Johnson, Virginia, defeated John Inman, 2 and 1; John Gravely, Virginia, defeated Si Hart, 3 and 2.

Navy 7, Georgetown 0.

Williams, Navy, defeated Weisberg, 1 up, 19th hole; Sullivan, Navy, defeated McCarthy, 4 and 3; Fontaine, Navy, defeated Mahan, 7 and 5; Wiseman, Navy, defeated Marchesion, 5 and 3; Baggett, Navy, defeated Powers, 5 and 4; Inman, Navy, defeated McGovern, 2 up; Hart, Navy, defeated Alberton, 1 up.

W-L High Wins Team Title Again

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Pat Boyle, one of the best freestyle swimmers on the Takoma team, was right at home in the water and slop at College Park yesterday.

The husky 16-year-old junior from Roosevelt High won the discus, javelin and shot put, and was awarded a gold watch as the top individual performer of the 29th annual University of Maryland field day track meet.

As mighty as his efforts were, Roosevelt could only tack down third place in the interscholastic division with 16 1-5 points.

W-L High Team Winner

Team championships were won by Washington-Lee of Arlington for the second straight year in the interscholastic division with 35 1-5 points, Montgomery-Blair in the Maryland County division with 39½, and Mount St. Joseph's of Baltimore in the prep-private school division with 94 points.

The Mounts, coached by Ed Matthews, last year's University of Maryland quarter-mile ace, swept first place in all 14 prep-private events. Their opposition was provided by schools like St. John's, Gonzaga, and Landon, which fielded only informal teams until this year.

No records were broken, because of the horrible conditions of the track and field. The meet, begun under sunny skies, was interrupted for 45 minutes by a terrific rainstorm which put most of the track under two inches of water, and turned the infield grass and jumping pits into squishy muck.

Except for his javelin toss of 153 feet 3½ inches, Boyle's distances in the weights were only fair. However, his mark in that event was very good considering he has had no time to practice. The Washington Interhighs do not permit the javelin throw in their events.

Byrd Paces W-L High

Boyle's discus heave was 119 feet 1½ inches, and for the shot it was 45 feet 5 inches.

Spearheading Washington-Lee to its championship was sprinter Mac Byrd, three-time Virginia 100-yard dash titlist. Byrd won the 100 in 10.2, wading through the water, and he spun off the 220 in 23.3.

Gold watches were awarded James Downs of Blair and Henry Strempek of Mount St. Joseph's for pacing scorers in the county and prep-private divisions.

Downs won the 220 and broad jump, and Strempek won the 440 and 220 and took second place in the 100.

One of the hottest races of the day occurred in the interscholastic mile with the Interhigh champions of Baltimore and Washington battling it out. Pete Theide of McKinley Tech, the D. C. hopeful, took the lead into the bell lap, but lost it to Poly's Don Manger at the last turn, and the Baltimore boy won by six yards in good 4:39.9 time.

D. C. Jets Host To Jersey Team In Roller Derby

The Roller Derby returns to Washington Wednesday night at Uline Arena when the Washington Jets meet the New Jersey Jolters in the first match of a series extending through May 17.

The local skaters play host to the Brooklyn Red Devils May 18-28.

Bill Reynolds, Jimmy Calder, Capt. Bob Lewis, Don Durnado, Len Chenault, Paul Pierce, Jack Keller, Glen Martin and Jack Wilson skate with the Washington men.

Terp Netmen Down V. M. I.

Winning its fourth match in as many days, the University of Maryland tennis team defeated Virginia Military Institute, 6-3, at College Park yesterday.

The Terps now have an overall season's record of seven wins in nine starts against college competition. An exhibition triumph over Quantico is not counted in the official records.

BROTHER, IT POURED—A sudden, heavy rain flooded the track for the interscholastic track meet yesterday at Maryland University, but the schoolboy athletes went right ahead. Running in the 100-yard dash with the track under water, M. Boyd of Washington & Lee High, crosses the finish line in a heat. Following him are W. Krukowski, Coolidge; D. Assums, of Baltimore City; G. Hegle, of Central; B. Wilson, of McKinley Tech, and R. Gebrman, of Roosevelt

Princeton Flails Navy In Lacrosse

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—Off to a fast start, Princeton's well-balanced lacrosse team dealt Navy its second straight defeat, 11-6.

The Tigers, who have lost only to Johns Hopkins in intercollegiate play this season, blanked Navy and scored four goals in the opening period.

Left that far behind, the Midshipmen recovered as the game advanced but could never catch up.

The triumph was Princeton's third against one intercollegiate loss and a tie. Mount Washington's club team also beat the Tigers in an exhibition tilt.

Undefeated until they bowed to Yale last Saturday, the Middies have won five.

Princeton	4	3	2	2—11
Navy	0	3	2	1— 6

Goals: Princeton—Hill (6), Giblert (2), Miller (2), Griffith. Navy—McDonough (2), Burch (2), D. Arnold, Schoen.

Navy Crews Beat Merchant Marines

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—Its four crews taking a slight edge in the fourth and last race, Navy outsailed Merchant Marine Academy in a dual meet on the Severn today, 90-86.

Despite a three-way tie for sixth place, the Midshipmen outscored Kings Point's dinghy crews, 24-20, to break a stalemate after the first three brushes.

Winning skipper in the decisive race was Charlie Robertson of Navy.

Metz Hurls Plebes To Win Over Hoya Frosh

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—Don Metz pitched Navy's Plebes to a 6-2 win over Georgetown freshmen today. Georgetown's hurler, Ray Liccinin, fanned eight, but yielded nine hits before retiring in the seventh inning. Rightfielder Ted Kukowski put the Plebes ahead in the second inning with a home run.

Georgetown	001	000	001—2	7	2
Navy Plebes	010	020	30x—6	10	2

Luccini, Garret, Hogan; Metz and Moretti.

Longwood Loses To Navy JVs

Annapolis, Md., May 6 (AP).—Two runs on one hit, an error, a walk and a man hit by a pitched ball were enough for Navy's junior varsity to defeat Longwood School of Olney, Md., today, 2-1.

Longwood outhit the Plebes five to four, but could tally only in the sixth when a relay from second base got by Catcher Joe Dailey, allowing Bill Hepwotrh to slide home.

Middleground Wins, Hill Prince Second in Kentucky Derby

Your Host Runs Out of Money either. He was 69-1 with three horses — Hawley, Stranded and Trumped King—carrying more lucrative odds.

Arcaro Unlucky Again

Jockey Arcaro again proved an unlucky mount selector although, in all fairness, Hill Prince could have been a better colt—minus ill luck—than Middleground. However, Eddie did pass up Middleground in favor of Hill Prince just as he picked Devil Diver and then followed Shut Out, the 1942 winner, to the wire.

The Derby began according to the Hollywood script. Your Host, behind Oil Capitol, directly after the break, forged to the front in the opening eighth of a mile.

Passing the stands the first time, Your Host, head cocked on the side as usual, sported a length lead over Black George with Mr. Trouble third and Hawley, flattering his backers, in fourth position.

At this stage, Middleground was fifth with Hill Prince, Arcaro having a steady drag on the colt, in the eighth spot.

Your Host, going along in smooth fashion under Johnny Longden's guiding, continued to set the pace at the half pole. Black George, with the fast track that was not supposed to suit him, was a surprising second with Mr. Trouble third and Hawley still fourth ahead of Middleground and Oil Capitol. For the first time, Hill Prince was beginning to show signs of going forward at this point.

At the far turn things began to happen that were to straighten the hair of the Californians. Mr. Trouble, medium of some late betting that made him a shade over 6-1, moved to Your Host. The two hung together for a few strides and then Mr. Trouble drew out to a half-length lead.

Middleground was on the move at this time and banged his way into third position. Hawley was hanging on to fourth with Oil Capitol fifth and Hill Prince sixth. But Hill Prince, a confirmed come-from-behind horse, was having his troubles.

3 Writers Pick Derby 1-2-3

Louisville, May 6 (AP).—Three newspapermen are in line to receive cotton-flannel horseshoes for having picked in exact order the first three finishers in today's seventy-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby.

They are Earl Ruby of the Louisville Courier-Journal, W. W. (Red) Smith of the New York Herald-Tribune and Arthur Daley of the New York Times who picked Middleground, Hill Prince and Mr. Trouble in that order.

The luck of Arcaro when he slipped through on the inside to win the Wood Memorial failed to be with him today. He spotted a hole along the rail, but the opening closed like the snap of a turtle, and he had his choice of taking up or going over the fence. He took up.

But the Hollywood hopes, at low ebb when Mr. Trouble took the lead, were revived a moment later when Your Host rallied and once again went to the front of the Whitneyite. This move came approaching the stretch but proved of only brief importance, for Middleground was on the move.

Robert Kleberg's colt swept into second position as Mr. Trouble developed an equine headache and dropped back to third. Oil Capitol gave his supporters a fleeting moment of hope as he moved, and determinedly, into fourth.

Hill Prince, by this time, had wiggled into free running space and was fifth, Arcaro riding as if he had dead aim in the main prize.

At the stretch turn it was, that Your Host threw up the ghost. If ever a Derby favorite went to pieces it was the Santa Anita Derby winner. To say he folded like an accordion would be putting it mildly. He simply looked as if Longden had tossed out an anchor and was going to start fishing.

Winner Just Shy Of Track Record

Middleground Moves

Middleground was on the move. His effort took him right smack into the lead by a half length and hold your breath because Mr. Trouble, thought to be a beaten colt, was going at full steam in second position.

And in the stretch, the colt going the fastest was Hill Prince. It appeared that the Chris Chenery-owned colt was headed for "all the money" but on the outside Sunglow, Brookmead's Chesapeake Stakes winner, suddenly shot into contention.

In midstretch, Middleground, with Boland working like a little demon, was clinging to the lead over Mr. Trouble. Arcaro, behind Sunglow, shot to the outside but Sunglow, apparently through and staggering, bore out. Arcaro had to think quickly. He swung to the inside of Sunglow, but the maneuver cost him precious seconds.

In the final drive, Boland, whose father must have invented ice—the kid's that cool—pounded away, apparently with no thought of any horse behind him.

No Dice for Arcaro

Arcaro put everything that won him four Derbies into the final punch on Hill Prince but it was no dice. Middleground held on like a bulldog on the mailman's pants. Hill Prince did bull his way ahead of Mr. Trouble but at the wire it was Middleground the winner with a slight patch of daylight behind him and Hill Prince.

Thus the Derby Trial again became the barometer for Derby winners. Middleground was the fifth horse to be second in the Trial who went on to win the run for the roses. The others were Lawren, Gallahadion, Whirlaway and Ponder.

Except for the fact that the weather was terrible in all points but here, today's crowd might have set a record for Bill Corum's first—in command—Derby. The likeable Irishman believes the various storms cost the track 20,000 customers.

The betting, however, was sensational. The Derby broke a cash outlay of $1,248,026, second only by $5017 to the record set when Jet Pilot won in 1927. The day's total was $3,559,382.

In closing, Middleground, Hill Prince, Mr. Trouble and Sunglow, who finished in the order named, are Preakness eligibles.

—Quite a Week for Willie—

Boland Sees His First Derby, Wins It

By Red Smith

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 6 (NYHT).—The bawling of the crowd still thundered up into the gray skies when the jockeys came striding through the alley from the track to the riders' quarters beside the Churchill Downs paddock. The seventy-sixth Kentucky Dreby was over and the losers walked swiftly, as though in a hurry.

JOCKEY WILLIE BOLAND
(With Bouquet of Roses)

Little Willie Boland, the 18-year-old apprentice who never won a stakes race before last Saturday, never visited Churchill Downs before this week and never saw a Derby before this afternoon, wasn't with them. He was sitting on his horse, Middleground, in the big horseshoe of carnations growing in front of the tote board, fingering the blanket of roses they had hung over his lap while the King Ranch Trainer, Max Hirsch, accepted congratulations and the owner, Robert Kleberg, got $92,650 and a $5000 gold cup.

In the second swiftest and perhaps the prettiest and most exciting of Derbies, Boland had brought Middleground around the rushing Mr. Trouble and punctured California bubble, Your Host, to take command at the top of the stretch. He had run away from the powerful Hill Prince and swept under the wire the winner by a length and a quarter.

NOW AS THE losers hustled away, Eddie Arcaro and Johnny Longden walked side by side. They'd been up on the two favorites—Longden on Your Host, which was 8 to 5, and Arcaro on Hill Prince, which was 5 to 2. Hill Prince had earned $10,000 in second money. Your Host had got there ninth, four lengths ahead of the bush league rookie, Hallieboy, which made sordid company for a Hollywood immortal.

"I was lucky, too," Arcaro was telling Longden. "I got the breaks." He stepped along, lashing abstractedly at a boot with his whip.

"You never had any trouble anywhere?" Eddie was asked.

"Not anywhere," he said. "The only horses I had to come around were the leaders. I was lapped on the winner at the quarter-pole. But he opened up two lengths on me."

Longden, an expressionless gnome, said he'd want Your Host to have another chance before he would be convinced the colt couldn't go a mile and a quarter.

"I didn't worry when Mr. Trouble went past me the first time," he said. "I was pretty sure we could take him again. But I can't understand Your Host. He tossed it up coming into the stretch. Yeh, I'm a little disappointed. I thought he'd do better."

NEWSPAPERMEN and photographers glamoured through the jockey's quarters.

While they waited for Boland, Doug Dodson, who had ridden Mr. Trouble, explained that he was forced to make his move earlier than he'd wanted. Your Host's pursuers began to crowd up going to the far turn, he said, and he feared that if he waited he'd find himself with no place to go. So he took the lead from Your Host and finished him, but the battle finished Mr. Trouble, too.

Boland is an immature kid with a lean, unsmiling face, ice-blue eyes and wavy blond hair. The cameramen hollered to him and turned him this way and that and he complied reluctantly, never relaxing. They kept calling for a great big smile and he'd give them the faintest twisted grin, showing widely spaced teeth out of one corner of his mouth. He was in a hurry to get it over with. And you couldn't tell whether he was scared or bewildered or utterly indifferent.

HE WORE THE same dead pan that had been on his face two days ago when he sat in front of the King Ranch barn beyond the backstretch. Staring straight ahead while a horseman came up and said to Max Hirsch:

"Can I ride your boy on my filly in the stake tomorrow?"

"Is she a kind filly," Max had asked. "Gentle" like a father solicitous of his small son.

"All right," Max had said, and the man had gone away. He hadn't looked at Willie. Willie hadn't looked at him. But yesterday Willie won the Kentucky Oaks with the man's filly, Ari's Mona, earning $2100 for himself. Last Saturday, getting his first stakes victory with Better Self in the Gallant Fox handicap, he'd picked up something more than $4000. And the jockey's 10 percent of today's purse was $9265.

It's been a fair week for Willie.

A few minutes after the jockey room was cleared of its Derby confusion, four people were seen walking down the track toward the backstretch stables. Hiking along just inside the clubhouse rail was a kid in a peaked cloth cap and leather windbreaker, with blue jeans clinging tightly to bowed legs. He carried one red rose from Middleground's blanket.

The thousands who saw him pass didn't recognize the kid who'd just won the Derby.

Bundy Captures Junior Olympics

Bundy Elementary School piled up a total of 65½ points to win the sixth annual Junior Olympic Track Meet held at Banneker Recreation Field yesterday.

Van Ness was second with 19 points and Monroe grabbed third with 16 points.

C. U. Wins in Tennis

Catholic University rang up its ninth straight Mason-Dixon Conference tennis match, defeating Lynchburg, 8-1, yesterday at C. U.

A Practice Spin For Today's Races

$1,413.30 Minus Pool Develops

Baltimore, Md., May 6 (AP)—Golden Bull, owned by Mrs. Samuel Pistorio of Baltimore, beat Sylvester W. Labrot's Arcave in a photo finish to win the featured $5,000 Gittings Purse at Pimlico today.

Arcave, part of the Labrot entry with Taran, was favored at 4-5 odds.

Beverly Broun's Magna Charta earned the show with Taran fourth among the six starters. Golden Bull was second choice and paid $6 straight. A minus show pool developed and the Maryland Jockey Club was forced to pay out $1,413.30 to make up the minimum show payoffs of $2.20.

Golden Bull, with Jockey Willie Downs up, led throughout the mile and sixteenth but was hard pressed in the last three-sixteenths, by Arcave. Taran was expected to do most of the running for the entry backers but the big 4-year-old colt loafed and never threatened seriously.

Instead his 3-year-old running mate, a Preakness hopeful, turned in a fine effort and nearly saved the big money riding on the entry. Golden Bull was timed in 1:45 over the track termed "good."

In the fifth race, the crowd of 16,523 established Brazen Brat, a 2-year-old filly which had won her only two races, a 3-5 choice. She broke a bit slowly and wound up third behind the winning Questor at $52.60. Cedar Farm's Manie was second in the three-way photo finish. Downs was also aboard Questor.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: At Pimlico.

The Preakness Stakes, second jewel in the triple crown, will be decided a week from next Saturday. This is a distinct departure from the procedure of recent years when the fixture was run exactly one week from the Derby. The additional time should work well for the horses which will ship here from Derby Town enabling the youngsters to gain some rest before going right back to the wars. Eleven of the 15 horses entered overnight for the Derby are eligible for the Preakness. All but the extreme outsiders in the Kentucky test will probably entrain for Baltimore some time tomorrow. Black George, Hawley, Stranded and Hallieboy are the quarter not named for the local race. See you on the rail.—Bill

3 Horse Shows Listed Today

The Washington Bridle Trails Association's Member Show, The McLean Junior Horse Show and the Laurel Pony and Junior Show are today's busy offerings for metropolitan area exhibitors.

The first member show of a spring and fall series of the Washington Bridle Trails Association will start at 10 a. m. at Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park.

Many of the association's members will make the short six-class program their first stop for the day in order to start accumulating points toward the postseason championship. The show is free to both exhibitors and spectators and affords an opportunity to the everyday riders on Washington bridle paths to participate in the competition on public stable horses.

The McLean show at 10 a. m. on Smooth Field, McLean, Va., with a 20-class program and the Laurel show starting at 9:30 a. m. at J. L. Aitcheson's Farm, Burtonsville, Md., should have an abundance of exhibitors.

Sears, Roebuck Leads In Retail Advertising

Chicago, May 5 (AP).—Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade journal, said today Sears, Roebuck and Company topped all retail advertisers last year for the fourth year in a row.

The company, with 647 retail stores located in all states except Wyoming, spent $25,238,000 for newspaper advertising, up 2.7 per cent from the previous record of $24,571,024 in 1948.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Soybean futures advanced as much as 8⅛ cents a bushel today, far more than offsetting losses of the previous session.

Grains were firm with soybeans. Wheat climbed as much as 3 cents and corn and oats more than a cent.

Wheat closed 1⅜ to 3 cents higher than the previous finish, corn up 1 to 1⅜, oats ⅞ to 1⅜ higher, rye ahead 2 to 2¼, soybeans up 4½ to 8½ and lard 10 to 20 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Soybeans were helped by strength in cottonseed oil futures. Also, traders believe that despite the Government report of large supplies of soybeans on hand throughout the country April 1, stocks will be low by the time the new crop is harvested.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Loans Reflect Enhanced Optimism

The hey-nonny-no springtime optimism which now graces all statements about busines, of which those of the National City Bank of New York and the National Association of Purchasing Agents are two of the latest, is traceable directly and simply to plenty of do-re-mi. Money is around in abundance and flowing easily.

Livingston

The contrast with last year is dramatic. Then production was declining. Business men were laying low on inventories. Bankers were cautioning against easy loans. In the first four months of 1949, business loans of weekly reporting banks dropped 7.9%. Part of that was seasonal—paying off loans after the Christmas rush. But part was playing cosy in case of a depression.

This year, business men have not been nearly so anxious to get out of debt. Commercial, industrial, and agricultural loans have dropped less than 3%.

A Billion-Dollar Swing

Right straight down the line, there's greater freedom in borrowing and lending on securities, on real estate, and for "all other" purposes. You can see it in the following table, which compares the changes in bank loans during the first four months this year with the changes during the first four months last year in millions of dollars and in percent:

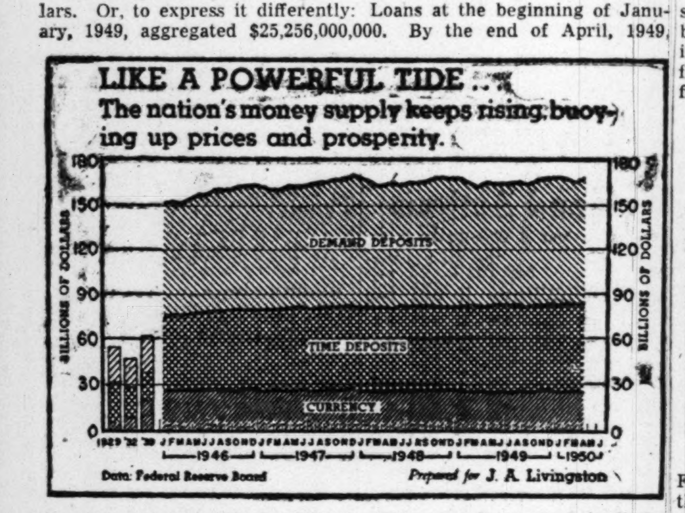
	Dollars		Per Cent
	1950	1949	1950	1949
Business*	—$377	—$1,212	— 2.7%	— 7.9%
Brokers' loans	+ 292	+ 270	+ 19.1	+25.5
Other loans on securities	+ 7	— 53	+ 1.2	— 7.9
Real estate loans	+ 165	+ 12	+ 3.8	+ 0.3
Loans to banks	— 5	+ 99	— 1.8	+ 60.4
"Other" loans	+ 169	— 61	+ 3.8	— 1.6
Net Change	+ $251	—$ 945	+ 1.0%	— 3.7%

* Commercial, industrial, and agricultural loans.

That's a year-to year swing in sentiment of nearly 1.2 billion dollars. Or, to express it differently: Loans at the beginning of January, 1949, aggregated $25,256,000,000. By the end of April, 1949, they'd decreased to $24,311,000,000. This year, loans started off the year at $25,043,000,000 and by April 26, were up to $25,294,000,000.

LIKE A POWERFUL TIDE . . .

The nation's money supply keeps rising, buoying up prices and prosperity.



Data: Federal Reserve Board

Prepared for J. A. Livingston

3-5 Billions More Money

Investments of banks have also expanded. Holdings of corporate bonds are up about 600 million dollars since the first of the year—13%—and $1,300,000,000 since last April. In lieu of loans to corporations, banks have brought their bonds. But it's all the same—bank credit. Result: A $3,400,000,000 increase in the money supply in a year—from $165,400,000,000 to $168,800,000,000. That's the highest total on record for this time of the year, though not quite so high as the 170 billion dollar totals of December 1947 and 1949 (see chart). December is the month of seasonal peak.

The expansion in the money supply so far this year has been without benefit of a Government deficit. In the first four months the Treasury ran a budgetary surplus of 700 million dollars.

Prosperity Phenomena

From now on, the expected increase in the Federal deficit should boost the money supply. Presumably, banks will buy Government bonds. Then, as the Federal Government spends, the newly created deposit money will go into circulation. Demand deposits ought to rise as a consequence. And you can expect to hear increasing talk of inflationary tendencies—and steps the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury should take to check it.

The enlarged money supply shows up in what have now come to be regarded as everyday prosperity phenomena—bumper sales of new homes, automobiles, television sets, furniture and household appliances; in the spurt in machinery sales; and in the level of department store sales, despite the poor apparel market. True, department store sales were 1% below a year ago in the week nded April 29, but prices are down much more. The volume of goods sold is higher than last year.

The striking feature of the period is the strong finacial position of business. Net working capital of United States corporations, at $67,700,000,000 at the end of December, was up $2,900,000,000 in a year. The SEC notes the "marked improvement in liquidity." Inventories were down nearly five billion dollars, but cash and Government securities were up almost three billion dollars. Small wonder that business men, seeing business prospects good, are willing to undertake new ventures in building plant and installing equipment.

New York Cotton

New York, May 6 (AP).—Cotton futures closed strong today with gains of 50 cents to $1.75 a bale. New-crop months were the strongest. Commission house replacement demand and short covering were attracted to the market by a continuation of unfavorable crop and weather reports from the Western part of the Cotton Belt. Senate approval of the foreign aid bill was a stimulating influence as traders visualized heavy foreign cotton needs for some time to come.

Trade buying was a supporting influence in nearby deliveries which were based on the strong demand for cotton for exports.

D. C. Gas Firm To Issue New Senior Stock

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday revealed plans to raise more that three million dollars of new capital.

In a letter to holders of common stock, the gas company proposes to issue 30,600 additional shares of preferred tock. Present stockholders will be entitled to subscribe for the new issue on the basis of one new preferred share for each 20 shares of common stock held on May 31. Price per share will be set later.

The proposed new stock will be entitled to annual dividends of $4.25 a share and will rate equally with 40,000 shares of the same class of stock now outstanding and listed on the Washington Stock Exchange.

Proceeds of the new financing, the letter stated, will be used to finance main extensions and other facilities to serve new gas customers in the Metropolitan Washington area.

The new issue, is was expected, will be underwritten by a group of investment bankers headed by Johnston, Lemon & Co. Included will be Alex Brown & Sons; Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath; Folger, Nolan, Inc.; Goodwyn & Olds; Mackall & Coe; Ferris & Co.; Robinson & Lukens, and Robert C. Jones & Co.

A spokesman for the company said a registration statement will be filed Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission for approval of the proposed financing.

Corporate Earnings Rise 6% Over 1949

New York, May 6 (AP).—Profits of American corporations in the first quarter of this year show a strong upward trend from a year ago.

A compilation made today by the Associated Press of 508 corporations in all fields of business and industry show first quarter profits were 6 percent ahead of the first quarter of 1949.

That earnings power came despite cutbacks in postwar expansion programs, general price reductions, and strikes.

It was due in great part to the wide demand for automobiles and television sets by the public and to industry's need for chemicals, the raw materials that go into a long list of products.

In this year's first quarter profits of the 508 companies amounted to $1,402,783,143 as compared with $1,326,501,330 a year ago.

Significant advances were made by automobiles, air transport and aircraft, chemicals, drugs and cosmetics, food products, pulp and paper products, utilities, radio and television, and building.

Auto Issues Lead Stocks To New Highs

New York, May 6 (AP).—The stock market drove through heavy opposition this week and finished at a new high for the current rise.

Radio-Television issues, which staged a brilliant advance earlier this year, were notable exceptions. All or most showed sizable losses from a week ago.

In Saturday' two-hour session automobile stocks were in heavy demand with Chrysler an outstanding favorite. TV issues made a try at higher price levels but there was not enough buying power to sustain the advance.

The market functioned against a background of highly encouraging news. Almost the only unfavorable estimates came from the radio-television and textile industries.

The prevailing sentiment in the business community was expressed time and again at scores of annual stockholder meetings: business is prosperous now and will continue prosperous for an indefinite period.

Strength in auto tocks revolved around settlement of the 100-day strike against Chrysler, that company's quarterly earnings statement and dividend, and General Motors' record-smashing profits for the first quarter.

REMINGTON ARMS

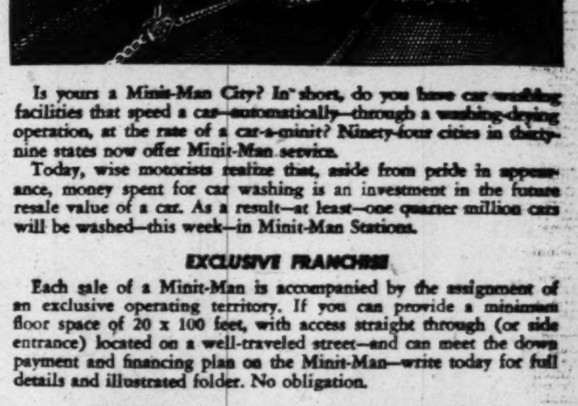
VALUABLE AUTOMATIC CAR WASHER FRANCHISE AVAILABLE



Is yours a Minit-Man City? In short, do you have car washing facilities that speed a car—automatically—through a washing-drying operation, at the rate of a car-a-minit? Ninety-four cities in thirty-nine states now offer Minit-Man service.

Today, wise motorists realize that, aside from pride in appearance, money spent for car washing is an investment in the future resale value of a car. As a result—at least—one quarter million cars will be washed—this week—in Minit-Man Stations.

EXCLUSIVE FRANCHISE

Each sale of a Minit-Man is accompanied by the assignment of an exclusive operating territory. If you can provide a minimum floor space of 20 x 100 feet, with access straight through (or side entrance) located on a well-traveled street—and can meet the down payment and financing plan on the Minit-Man—write today for full details and illustrated folder. No obligation.

Top Boys Clubs Boatmen Receive Awards

The Washington Post

Al Bozzi, 10, Adds Boating Title To His Kite-Flying Laurels

Watching Al Bozzi operate yesterday in the boating competition at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool was like reading a textbook on success.

The 10-year-old member of Police Boys Club No. 5 came away with the workmanship and sailboat racing awards in the midget class of the Police Boys Club competitions.

Laurels are getting to be matter-of-course for Al, a pupil at St. Peter's School, who lives at 651 I st. se. A week ago Saturday he took top honors in kite workmanship and second place in kite flying in a club competition.

Al Bozzi is eager. So eager was he to get to his winning sailboat at the far end of the pool that he took an accidental short cut through the water. But he also can swim.

John A. Remon, past president of the Police Boys Clubs and honorary president of the President's Cup Regatta, judged yesterday's competition.

The winners:

MIDGET CLASS — Workmanship—Al Bozzi, No. 5; Joe Hayes, No. 4: Bill Miller, No. 12.

Sailboat racing—Al Bozzi, No. 5; Joe Clark, No. 4; George Snyder, No. 4.

Mechanical boat racing—Mike Divger, No. 10; Don Tull, No. 12; Richie Crawford, No. 4.

JUNIOR CLASS—Workmanship—Vic Rosenberg, No. 10; Earl Letts, No. 5; Kenny Talbert, No. 11.

Sailboat racing — Henry Ruby, No. 11; Kenny Talbert, No. 11; Russell Riggs, No. 5.

Mechanical boat racing—Arvin Vandergrift, No. 5; George Miller, No. 10; Paul Bignola, No. 10.

E. Capitol Bridge Bill May Reach Senate This Week

The measure to fix the proposed Anacostia bridge in the vicinity of East Capitol, may reach the Senate floor early this week.

A Senate District Subcommittee approved the House-passed bill last Wednesday and committee clerks have been polling the full committee membership. No member has thus far raised any opposition to the measure, which has the Commissioners' backing.

Until recently, Federal park officials fought the bill, insisting the new span should be located in line with Massachusetts, se.

ARLINGTONIANS
YOUR ATTENTION, PLEASE

In St. Luke, Chapter 15, fourth verse, it is said: "What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness and go after that which is lost until he find it?"

So, my friends, we are after the sheep which is lost—in this case, the citizen and resident of Arlington who has forgotten to pay his taxes.

This is our third report to you. So let me brief you up to the minute:

First report: As of December 5, 1949, 90% of the County taxes were collected. That left almost $500,000 uncollected.

Second report: As of March 8, 1950, 92% of the County taxes had been collected. That left $400,000 uncollected, or 8% of the taxpayers who have not performed their duties.

This report, the third one, says that 94% of the County taxes have been collected for the year of 1949, leaving $300,000 uncollected. An overwhelming majority of the citizens of Arlington have responded to our appeals to them to pay their taxes. Now I am after the remaining 6%, or 6 taxpayers out of every 100, or 60 taxpayers in every 1000, who have either forgotten to pay their taxes, or have failed to do so for one reason or another.

Let me say that it is not my intention to make anybody mad, and far be it from me to want to make anybody mad in collecting these taxes. I do not assess them, nor do I set the amount of the levy. I believe in low taxes, and do my part to keep them down. I do not believe in wasting public money, and I practice what I preach. If any taxpayer is in doubt about it, he can write me a letter and I will send him a bulletin which will speak for itself. But I am not here to tell you what I have done, but to remind you who are among the remaining 6% that you have failed to pay your taxes.

Remember that the County will shortly be bonded for almost $10,000,000. Practically all of it was voted by the people for schools. The first bond issue was $1,776,000. Practically all of that has been spent. If the School Board completes its elaborate plans, another $1,500,000 of the bond fund of $2,500,000 that was issued last year will be taken to complete 49 class rooms, which cost the taxpayers $61,711.10 per room. In this connection, interest and amortization of these bonds have to be met. The New York bondholders have a trust on your house and your property, and if they are not paid under the law, they can foreclose and sell you out.

Remember, also, the schools are not the only thing in the County which has to be supported by tax collections. Police protection, fire protection, general county government expenses, have to be paid for out of the taxes collected.

When you pull up in front of the school building and let your children out, and you have not paid your taxes, if you are able to pay them, suppose you ask yourself this question: Whether you are treating the other 94 neighbors right who have paid their taxes? Ask yourself the question whether you are treating the teacher right who is teaching your children, when you have not paid your taxes and thereby fail to pay your portion of her salary?

Also, when the police officer drives by your house, and you are under police protection 24 hours a day, and 94 of your neighbors have paid their taxes so that his salary can be paid, ask yourself the question, whether you are doing right by your neighbors and that police officer?

If your house catches on fire, in the dead of winter, and it is freezing and cold, and the firemen respond to protect your property, and you have not paid your taxes, you ask yourself whether you are treating that fireman right who risks his life for your protection?

And the same thing goes when you ride through the streets in the County, and receive other benefits without paying for them. And with it all, remember that 94 of your neighbors out of 100 have paid their taxes, and you are getting the benefit of it.

Now, I am not unmindful of the fact that there are times and occasions when people are willing to pay their taxes, but can't pay, and under such circumstances we are always ready to help them make the necessary adjustment.

So again, friends, the best way to keeps taxes down is for everybody to pay his taxes and see that the public officials don't waste the money.

So I am asking you again to come in and settle up your accounts, as we will be looking for you. We have a mighty nice Sheriff, and we don't want you to have to meet him with a tax process in his hands.

Respectfully,
JOHN LOCKE GREEN,
Treasurer of Arlington County, Va.

NOTHING BUT THE BEST
went into the construction of this charming solid brick Colonial that was planned for gracious living. Situated on a beautifully wooded and shrubbed corner which measures 80x140 in a good N. Arlington location. The first floor is a perfectly charming living room, 30 ft. in length with fireplace and lots of windows. The 14x13 dining room is formal and most attractive. The grand 12x13 kitchen is as modern as tomorrow with scads of custom-built cabinets, stainless steel drainboards, fluorescent lights, exhaust fans, etc. A 13x13 bedroom or library and full tiled bath. There are 4 delightfully sized bedrooms with magnificent closet space and 2 baths on the 2d floor. The 3d floor is practically finished into 2 rooms, one 14x22, the other 13x14. The basement is full and dry with a ½ bath. A few of the details that make this home outstanding 5 telephone connections, 118 electrical outlets, all-copper plumbing, drains and flashing, Buckingham slate roof, attached brick garage, stone barbecue pit, combination screens and storm windows throughout. The list is endless. The home is completely custom built and only 2 years old. It could not possibly be reproduced for under $40,000 and yet the price is only $32,500. 3 BEAUTIFUL HILLS

About a mile frontage on River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Country Club. One of these hills has the more perfect setting for a home than any other property around Greater Washington. The setting for this home is more beautiful than Mr. Truman's White House or George Washington's Mount Vernon home. This homesite has been withdrawn from the market. I'm building my own home on this beautiful setting. Mr. James E. Elgin, among the best builders in Montgomery County, is constructing this home. Ride up on the hill and look at the construction and compare it with anything else you have ever seen around Washington. A 35,000-lb. bulldozer has been pushing down trees that are 2 feet in diameter. When I compare this beautiful setting with many other homes around Washington, where people have murdered their own money because they didn't know how to select a perfect setting for their home, come out and look at this beautiful setting—it won't cost you anything. Two adjoining hills of about 30 acres each can be had at 15c a sq. ft. There is one 5-acre lot where River rd. and Bradley rd. join which can be had at 20c a sq. ft. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers, attention.

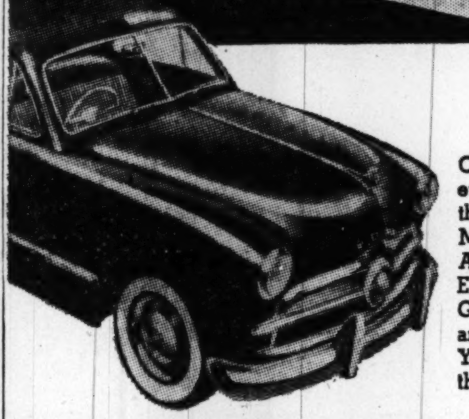
NEXT TO A NEW CAR A CHERNERIZED CAR IS BEST

A difference in performance makes a BIG difference in sales!

The BIGGEST April in the history of CHERNERIZED CARS!



Chernized cars are shattering sales records every month! For wise motorists all want the kind of FINER performance that's put MORE Chernized cars on the road than ANY other name used car . . . the kind of EXTRA quality that's given us the BIGGEST February, the BIGGEST March . . . and now the BIGGEST April in our history! You can be sure that the FIRST choice of thousands is FIRST in quality, too!

Perle Mesta Is Now No. 1 Partygoer

Harris-Ewing Photos

WITH Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, her beau for the evening, Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg, starts off from the Sulgrave Club for Blair House and the dinner in her honor given by President and Mrs. Truman Tuesday evening. Party-giving Perle, who held the title, "Washington's No. 1 Hostess," is now party-going Perle on her visit back home

By Marie McNair

UNFLAGGING energy has always been one of Perle Mesta's chief characteristics. She needs it now to face the rush of parties being given to welcome her back from her post as Minister to Luxembourg.

But this first trip home since she left almost nine months ago, is no holiday. She's here for consultations which usually call back chiefs of mission twice a year.

A Mesta day begins at 9 a. m. when she checks in at her desk in the State Department. There are conferences with department officials with Luxembourg interests; a review of incoming and outgoing communications, and an almost steady stream of visitors. She even became a movie star last week when two Luxembourg hotel executives came to call. Movie cameras recorded the meeting which is to be incorporated in an ECA narrative film to be shown in all participating countries.

Busy Round of Entertainment

IT'S A SLOW day when there aren't at least two parties in her honor on her engagement book. President and Mrs. Truman and Vice President and Mrs. Barkley have entertained for her. In addition there have been embassy dinners, countless luncheons and cocktail parties since she arrived almost a month ago.

Perle Mesta, who gave up the title, "Washington's No. 1 Hostess" to become Minister to Luxembourg, is too dominant a personality to be apathetic about it.

Her friends are loyal. Her enemies don't remain masked—for long. But the dozens of parties in her honor since she returned are proof that her enemies are far outnumbered by her friends.

What has happened to Perle Mesta since she left Washington last fall? "Doesn't she look wonderful! What is it?" her friends are saying.

Stimulated by Responsibilities

WELL, perhaps it's the fact that she loves her job, is stimulated by new surroundings and events and a definite responsibility she feels to her country and her long time friend, Harry Truman.

At any rate, it's a new Perle who has come home. There's an added sparkle in her eyes, a surety of manner, and a seasoned diplomat's poise. Late this month Minister Mesta will leave for New York and sail early in June to return to Luxembourg. Rumors that she won't return to her post, that she'll be of greater value in the coming Democratic campaign, are scotched with typical Mesta forthrightness: "Oh, dear, guess I'll have to issue another statement."

MRS. MESTA'S DAY included a luncheon at the Capitol with the Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle the hosts. Here in Mr. Biffle's private dining room, she's surrounded by diplomats and dignitaries beginning at left with the Chinese Ambassador, Wellington Koo, Vice President Alben Barkley and French Ambassador Henri Bonnet

PERLE MESTA starts her day at the State Department with conferences, reports, discussions and visitors taking up the morning hours. She's back again after luncheon for more work and by late afternoon she's ready to start the party round. On her engagement book are never less than two parties a day, more often three

Mrs. Mesta's Viewpoint

Mme. Minister Sees Job as Challenge To Work for Peace, Aid Women's Cause

This is the first of a series of three Sunday articles on Mrs. Mesta's experiences as United States Minister to Luxembourg.

By Perle Mesta
U. S. Minister to Luxembourg

ON THAT day, July 8, 1949, when I took a solemn oath as the United States Minister to Luxembourg, the responsibilities of the position I had accepted were brought home to me, accompanied by the realization that there was also a challenge to be accepted.

There was a challenge implicit in having officially joined all those who are devoting every effort in order that we may find the way to progress from these uneasy times to full and lasting world peace. In addition it seemed to me there was a secondary challenge to do whatever my part might be in helping prove woman's usefulness in a field rather newly opened to us. Women have tried to the very best of their ability to meet this dual challenge, and my small endeavors in that effort have been most enjoyable.

The country to which I am accredited looks like the setting for a fairy tale with the towers of its medieval castles jutting into the sky. The massive ancient buildings stand as mute but intriguing evidence of the days when knighthood was in flower. Perhaps this accounts in part for the undeniable aura of permanence and tranquillity which seems to pervade the land.

Duchy Is Study of Contrasts

HISTORY has flowed over and around Luxembourg for many centuries, even as the seasons of those centuries have mellowed and smoothed its castle walls. But despite the air of antiquity, Luxembourg actually is quite a study of contrasts. The Luxembourgers are willing to work hard to get a job done, and they have brought the improvements of our modern age right into their storybook land. They were hurt by the war—one third of all Luxembourg's permanent wealth was destroyed—but they have already managed to regain a sound financial balance and are among the most stable of European governments.

This admirable stability, I might add, is political as well as economic, a condition reflected, for example, by the tenure in office of two of Luxembourg's high officials. The Prime Minister has held his office continuously since 1937, while the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Bech, who is one of Europe's elder statesmen, has held that position since 1926.

It was very interesting to me to learn that Luxembourg had long maintained a high degree of provincial autonomy and that the constitution of the Grand Duchy, which was the first concrete manifestation of complete Luxembourg independence, has been in effect since 1841. Today this historic country is ably and wisely led by its own Grand Duchess Charlotte. A kindly, conscientious ruler, she is in close touch and complete accord with her people, by whom she is adored.

Citizens Fond of America

IN MY mind Luxembourg is without doubt one of the most delightful countries in Europe. My duties there have been enjoyable not only because Luxembourg itself is a picturesque and pleasant place, but mainly because its citizens are so like our citizens. I consider becoming personally acquainted with the people of Luxembourg to be an important part of my work. Don't we learn more from talking with a friend who has done something in which we are interested than from reading a newspaper account of the same thing?

Unless I get out and actually meet the Luxembourgers, I cannot know as well as I might what they are thinking about their internal problems and about the problems which confront the whole world today. It is my duty to report the conditions and attitudes of Luxembourg as completely as possible to our Department of State, so I have met as many of its citizens as possible. I have visited the miners, the farmers, the townspeople, and I have talked with them. When I return to my post, I shall talk to more of them, at their homes and places of work.

I soon discovered that the similarity between our two peoples is truly striking; the average Luxembourger sees eye to eye with the average American on so many things. He is industrious, honest, friendly and cooperative, and has an intense pride of possession centering on his own home and land.

Tributes Paid to War Dead

OUR RELATIONS with Luxembourg have always been excellent. Perhaps because of the basic similarity of characteristics, and perhaps also because of our help in the liberation of their country, Luxembourgers are extremely friendly toward us. This is an intangible but unmistakable quality you feel anywhere you go in Luxembourg. But one manifestation of it is the gift by the Luxembourg government of 50 acres of land, just outside the city of Luxembourg, to be used for the burial of American dead in World War II. This is Hamm Cemetery where Gen. George S. Patton and thousands of his troops are buried. During the summer months there are from 12,000 to 15,000 visitors at Hamm and almost any day you visit the cemetery you will find fresh flowers on all the graves. Each one is cared for by a Luxembourg family, and the people of Luxembourg have not forgotten.

I am glad that many more Americans this year will have the opportunity of stopping off in Luxembourg and learning at first hand of this country about which I am so enthusiastic. A good many tourists visit the Legation and we are doubly glad to see them and do what we can to help them. When you are out of the United States, it's only natural that there is a special pleasure in meeting a fellow American. Also, I firmly believe that the more we can see of our European neighbors, now that modern transportation has made the world so much smaller, the better understanding we as Americans will have of their problems in relation to our own country. Understanding between people and nations is always desirable and important. In these days, as we work and pray for true peace, it is vital.

Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Michigan Senator, and Mrs. Howard A. Coffin, national committeewoman for the District of Columbia, today were named joint chairmen of the Republican Women Speakers "Task Force."

The appointments were announced by Mrs. Gilford Mayes, assistant chairman of the Republican National Committee in charge of women's activities.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Sometimes Wishes Change From Husband, Yet Loves Him and Doesn't Want to Leave Him; He Is Kind When She Is Upset; What's Wrong?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When I was 4 years old my first father died. Thereafter, until my mother married again when I was 10, my sister and I boarded out most of the time, sometimes together, sometimes separately.

Even after her second marriage, my mother, a restless person, continued to move every year; but the family was together, at least. I never made any true friends because we didn't stay in one place long enough. I tell you this because it may help you to understand my problem.

When I started dating I preferred to go steady and after going with a boy for a few months I would just get tired of him and break up. Each time I would feel terrible but I continued doing this up until the time I got married.

She Condemns Self Severely

I LOVE my husband and I most certainly don't want to leave him, but sometimes I find myself wishing I could go out with someone else. Then at other times I get almost violent with him. I hit him with my fist, then run from the house. One day I even ran out in the snow without shoes on. I always come right back, and I am always sorry, too; but this doesn't excuse my outbursts, and each time the damage is already done.

My husband is patient and good about this, but I am so disgusted with myself that I just don't know which way to turn. Sometimes I try to analyze my actions and I think maybe I am just trying to get attention; then other times I think I am just plain crazy. I hope this letter isn't too confusing to you, as I really need an outsider's view; and as you can see, I wouldn't dare speak to anyone I know about it.

K. S.

She Is Blocked Psychologically

DEAR K. S.: It seems to me that your problem behavior stems from a chronic sense of psychological frustration. Without knowing what's wrong, you suffer continually an undertow feeling of being denied satisfactory use of yourself, and that is because of the pattern of your rearing.

In general, the child who is "boarded out" finds himself up against administrative influences that are emotionally indifferent to him for the most part; and at the same time actively restrictive and thwarting in their effect on his movements. This tends to discourage his natural spontaneity, engendering a condition of psychological impotence.

Ordinarily the main endeavor in the boarding situation is to keep the child fed, clothed and out of mischief. Little if any consideration is given to warming his growth with real love, a form of nurture that is very necessary to help him develop faith in and capacity to have close relationships.

Latent Capacity to Live Largely

MOREOVER, the farmed-out child, or one whose parents are always on the move, doesn't get much opportunity or encouragement to hatch new interests and test his skill in respect to them, so as to hit on feasible and useful ways of occupying himself to his heart's content. It is this kind of creative puttering in a stable, helpful environment that leads to joy-in-work in later life.

Because you were deprived along these lines in formative years, your existence seems to have no depth, no meaning, no purpose. Or that's how you feel about it, without being able to define your slant. Lacking a significant program of expression, and not knowing why you are blocked or fettered, nor how to liberate yourself, your vital energies are backed up inside you in a bitter ferment that makes you bored, restless, moody, tempestuous, etc., by turns.

The intensity of your distress suggests that you are well endowed by nature to live abundantly; because to the extent that an individual fights frustration, to that extent he demonstrates capacity to live largely, given the chance. You are a long way from being "just plain crazy." You are struggling for growth, but don't know where to turn to find a gleam of light or helping hand to lead you on. For a start in the right direction, read "Peace of Mind," by Dr. Joshua Loth Liebman (Simon & Schuster, publishers).

Seminary Fair Has Lost Its Friendly Pony

By Capt. Walter Karig

One beloved feature of the Seminary Fair will be missing this year, and forever after. Cherry Dumpling, the tiny red Shetland who for 15 years had literally been the wheel-horse of the pony ride, has gone to where the pastures are eternally green.

Fifteen years ago the Seminary Fair was only a neighborhood affair. Members of women's auxiliary of Immanuel Church-on-the-Hill, then the chapel of the Virginia Episcopal Theological Seminary, were their own best patrons. In those days, Fairlington's site was pasture and woodland; foxes and 'possum roamed where thousands of people now live. Cherry Dumpling, then a mere junior pony-matron of 20 years, charged a nickel for what she was accustomed to do for free the other 364 days in the year—riding the neighborhood children on her broad back.

Annual Fair Expands

The years passed and the neighborhood grew. The quick back water of Seminary Hill became an oasis of greenery surrounded by new homes, and as it grew, so did the fair. From a few trestle-tables on which the women of the parish displayed — and sold to each other—needlework and plants from their own gardens, homemade foodstuffs and attic scourings elegantly renamed "white elephants," the fair expanded into entertainment for thousands, with sideshows, turtle races, pet shows, puppet shows and all. But still Dumpling performed her annual chore, patiently plodding around a ring.

Youngsters who had enjoyed their first horseback ride on Dumpling grew up, married, and came back to the fair to initiate their children in equestrianism on placid Dumpling. It would be impossible to compute how many hundreds of dollars "Dumps," as the generations of children affectionately called her, earned for the charities of the women's auxiliary of Immanuel-on-the-Hill.

Harris & Ewing

CHERRY DUMPLING is gone, but a pony cart is still a must at the annual Seminary Fair, and there will be one this Saturday for the sixteenth year of the benefit event. Trying the pony out in advance are (left to right) Miles Scull, Jay and Jimmy Hernley, Andrew Lloyd and Joel Javdon. The fair will be held at the Virginia Theological Seminary on Quaker Lane in Alexandria.

Last summer Dumpling was retired by her owner, Miss Keating V. Karig, when she went to England to practice over Kentish steeplechase courses the equitation in which she had had her first lessons astride Dumpling as a third-grader in St. Agnes' School. Dumpling was sent to the farm of Keating's sister, Patty Archer, near Fairfax, to initiate 6-year-old Robin Keating Archer in horsemanship.

One day, a few weeks ago, Dumpling did not wake up to nicker at the door of her box stall for the bran-mash breakfast. Her stout heart had stopped beating.

There will be other ponies at this Saturday's Seminary Fair. Ever since the fair outgrew its neighborhood character, Dumpling's duties were shared by an ever-increasing string of ponies and horses, for what outdoor Virginian frolic would be complete and in character without horseflesh prominently in the foreground? But Dumpling was, in all the years of her service to the Episcopal diocese, a little bit more than a pony. She was one of the neighbors, and it is as such that she will be missed, even though there may be a dozen chunky red Shetlands with creamy manes and tails ready to give the boys and girls the unmatched thrill of a "horseback ride."

'Green Book' Plans Changes

Mrs. Carolyn Hagner Shaw, editor of the Social List of Washington, is sending out the usual questionnaires to subscribers this weekend.

The green suede covered book which is in its twentieth year of publication, keeps up to date with a "key" list, in which changes of addresses are recorded.

Mrs. Shaw hopes that her subscribers will return the information blanks early in order that the publication date of the book will not be delayed in the autumn. This year some 600 names will disappear from the book, through marriages, deaths and departures from the city; another 1200 will be submitted to the board of governors.

Col. and Mrs. Thomas Everett Harwood of Minor Hill, Falls Church, Va., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sally Irene Harwood, to Midshipman William Jennings Hardy, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Hardy of Ravenwood, Falls Church.

Miss Harwood was graduated from Western High School in 1946 and attended Hood College, Frederick, Md. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederic M. Thomas of Washington, and the late Judge and Mrs. Thomas Everett Harwood of Trenton, Tenn.

Midshipman Hardy was graduated from Western High School and attended the Haverford School and Sullivan's Preparatory School prior to entering the United States Naval Academy. He is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Rahner of St. Augustine, Fla., and Mrs. James L. Hardy and the late Mr. Hardy of Savannah, Ga.

The wedding will take place in Washington, in early June following Midshipman Hardy's graduation from the Naval Academy.

Marshall—McCahill

Capt. and Mrs. Leslie Bert Marshall, MC, USN, announce the engagement of their daughter, Pamela, to Lieut. John Francis Patrick McCahill, USNR, son of Dr. James McCahill of Boston.

Miss Marshall attended Chevy Chase Junior College in Washington, and was graduated from Stephens College, Columbia, Mo. Lieutenant McCahill is on active duty in Washington and is a graduate of Harvard University.

The wedding is being planned for June at the United States Naval Hospital, Beaufort, S. C.

Groat—MacArthur

Mr. and Mrs. Carl D. Groat of Cincinnati, formerly of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Helen, to Bruce Morgan MacArthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy I. MacArthur of Flint, Mich.

Miss Groat, a graduate of Miss Doherty's College preparatory school, Cincinnati, attended Chevy Chase Junior College and was graduated from George Washington University.

Mr. MacArthur attended Culver Military Academy and is a graduate of Michigan State College where he was affiliated with Psi Upsilon fraternity. During World War II he served in the Army for three and a half years, including a year in Japan.

The wedding will take place in the autumn.

Corbett—Matthews

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Corbett of this city announce the engagement of their daughter, Jeanne Frances, to Robert E. Matthews, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Matthews of Elizabeth, N.J.

Miss Corbett attended Sacred Heart Academy and is now completing her senior year at Trinity College.

Mr. Matthews, who served with the Army Air Force during the war, will be graduated from the Catholic University of America in June. He is a member of Sigma Beta Kappa fraternity.

Garriques—Warwick

Mr. and Mrs. William Barriffe Garriques of Clearwater, Fla., formerly of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances Aileen, to Harvey Hodgen Warwick, jr., son of Mrs. Griffith Warwick, and Harvey Warwick, sr., both of this city.

Both Miss Garriques and Mr. Warwick attended George Washington University. Mr. Warwick served in the South Pacific with the Navy.

The wedding is planned for the fall.

Callaway—Jeanson

Mrs. Blanche Smith Callaway of Washington and Adelbert Sebastian Callaway of Park Fairfax, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jeanne Callaway, to Norman Edward Jeanson, son of the late Edward Axel Jeanson of Springfield, Mo., and Mrs. Edward Axel Jeanson, now of New York City.

Miss Callaway, who is a third generation Washingtonian, was graduated last June from Woodrow Wilson High School, and is now with the Federal Housing Administration.

Mr. Jeanson, who served four years with the Merchant Marine, after graduating in 1945 from Fork Union Military Academy, Fork Union, Va., is now with the Federal Government.

The wedding will take place May 26.

Blomquist—Rice

Mrs. Arvid Blomquist of New Albany, Ind., announces the engagement of her daughter, Jean Frances, to Donald W. Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis W. Rice, of Silver Spring, Md. The bride-elect is employed by the Department of Agriculture.

The wedding will take place in August.

Straw Shoes for Summer

Shoes made of air-cooled Panama straw are summer's newest fashion note.

Local debut of these newcomers took place Thursday at the Dupont Plaza Hotel, when J. & J. Slater presented a fashion show featuring 24 shoe styles. Included also were such accessory items as handbags, scatter pins and cummerbunds, all made of the neutral toned, flexible straw that heretofore has been associated primarily with hats.

The idea of using Panama in footwear originated with Larry Horan, owner and president of J. & J. Slater. It took him two years, and five plane trips to South America, before he got the idea into operation.

It was also necessary to revolutionize the native straw industry of Ecuador. But once he got the Ecuadorean natives around to weaving straw in long, workable strips instead of round hat blocks, Mr. Horan didn't stop with shoes. His Panamania for summer includes everything from a straw cigarette case to a straw flower for a lapel.

There is a wide variety of shoe styles in the collection. Some are simple and untrimmed, others are piped with black velvet. Another, for evening wear, has ankle chains of 14-karat gold. Matching handbags are used with each style. Little head-hugging caps of the same straw are also in the line-up.

For play clothes, the new Panama collection provides sandals with interlocking straps. Pixy and slouchy are both in the play division and give you a choice of where you like your open look—toe, heel or all-around.

Two or three Panama sandals are built on lightweight cork wedges and platforms. For dress-up occasions there are classic pumps with high or low heels.

A handy feature of these soft, cool straws is that they may be cleaned with soap and water.

Navy Sponsors To Open Session

The annual convention of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy will open today at the Mayflower.

Highlights of the three-day meeting will include the reception Monday given by Mrs. Truman at Blair House, and the luncheon, 1 p. m. Tuesday at the Mayflower Hotel where Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews will speak.

The Society of Sponsors is composed of women who have christened Navy combat ships.

Agnes Dunn Engaged

Citizenship Conference Set May 22-24

Women from many sections of the United States and its Territories will take a leading part in the Fifth National Conference on Citizenship at Hotel Statler May 22 to 24 under the joint sponsorship of the National Education Association and the Department of Justice.

Miss Laurentine Collins, director of the Department of School-Community Relations of the Detroit Board of Education, will lead the youth section of the conference.

Mrs. Stanley G. Cook, chairman of the Committee on Legislation of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, heads the committee of hostesses for the dinner which will be held on Tuesday, May 23. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and Dr. Andrew D. Holt, president of the National Education Association, will be the speakers.

Mrs. Charles Fitzwater of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development of the National Education Association is chairman of hostesses for the coffee hours that will precede the opening session of the conference each day.

Other women working actively for the conference and participating in it include: Miss Vivian Simpson, secretary of state for Maryland; Emma Mae Brotze, principal of the Marshall Junior High School, Marshall, Tex.; Joanna Z. Connell, assistant director, Department of Practice and Training, Boston Public Schools; Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, joint organizer of the Army-Navy Guild, New York; Charlotte DeMonte, member of the eastern area council, Junior Red Cross, Glen Ridge, N. J.

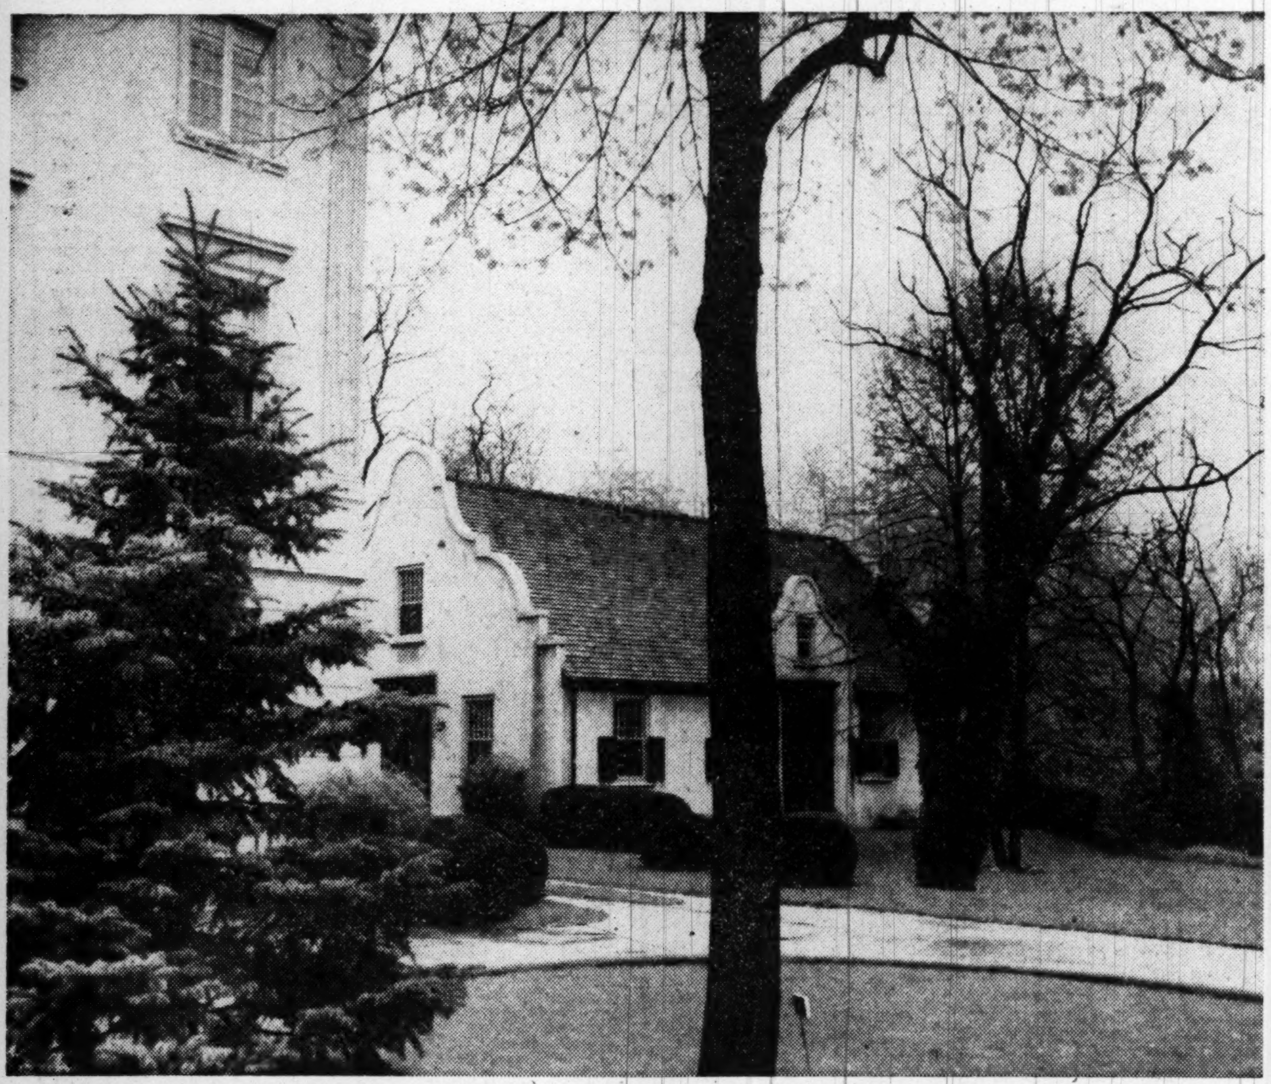
No Watchdog He

South Africa's Usher Is a Wag

By Elizabeth Maguire

This is the twenty-seventh in a series of articles on embassy homes, hosts and hostesses.



Hessler Studios

THE embassy of the Union of South Africa has the distinction of being the only embassy in town with a building on its grounds designed like a native house. The chancery pictured above is a replica of a Dutch style farm house found near Capetown in South Africa. A corner of the South African Embassy can be seen on the left. Both buildings face the British Embassy across Massachusetts ave.

NOT a tea hound, Rags prefers a lump of sugar on the side. He is seated here in the embassy library with the new Ambassador of South Africa, Gerhardt Jooste, and Mrs. Jooste.

ONE RING on the door of the Embassy of South Africa brings the most enthusiastic welcome in Washington. The door is opened by the butler, but it's Rags who ushers in the guests.

Rags is a black cocker with plenty of room to grow in a loose coat of shiny fur. No watch dog he, his affection for each new face knows no bounds. There's not the slightest discernment in his first glance—just immediate allegiance.

"You've got us on a very soft spot," admits the Ambassador, Gerhardt Jooste, in speaking of his pup. "But the children spoil him," he adds, referring to his son, Tim, age 13, and his daughter Helma, age 8.

Mme. Jooste, wife of the Ambassador, reasons that dogs are meant to be spoiled if they can't hunt or perform some useful function like saving lives.

The Jooste family have been in Washington since the fall of 1949. Their name, they pronounce as if it were spelled "Yoosta."

Long Career in the Corps

AMBASSADOR JOOSTE is a career diplomat. He has served in the Department of External Affairs, first as head of the economic division and later as head of the political division. From 1936 to 1940 he was Charge d'Affaires in Brussels, Belgium. At the time of the invasion, he and Mrs. Jooste went to Paris and later to London.

Both the Ambassador and his wife are South Africans with a mixture of Dutch, Flemish, French Huguenot and British blood. They are bilingual, speaking African or English with equal ease. "South Africa is almost entirely bilingual," explains the Ambassador, "And, therefore, to hold any public position, one has to speak both languages."

The Ambassador attended the University of Pretoria. As a boy he spent a great deal of time on a sheep farm in the interior. "Farms in South Africa range from 1000 to 50,000 acres," he says.

Objects Tell a Story

MANY interesting articles in the embassy tell the story of his distant country. Handsome pieces of furniture are made of native stinkwood. "The word is not a very good advertisement for the tree," says the Ambassador regretfully, "but when the natives cut it they say it stinks." Nevertheless, the wood is very beautiful.

The head of a Zulu chieftain cast in bronze rests on a library table. Umbrella trees and giraffes are painted on china displayed in a handsome Dutch cabinet in the drawing room. Other china has a chain motif design which the Ambassador explains commemorates the great trek of 1838, when the old farmers trekked, in ox wagons, from the south up to the free state in the Transvaal.

The South African embassy has the distinction of being the only embassy in town with a building on its grounds which is an authentic copy of a native house. The chancery, immediately adjacent to the embassy, is an exact copy of a Dutch farm house in the south of the Union. A pretty little building, it stands out in the midst of all the imposing embassies along Massachusetts ave.

Hobbies of the Ambassador and Mrs. Jooste include golf and tennis. The Ambassador sketches, mostly caricatures, and the Ambassadress enjoys doing needlepoint-work. Just now she is working on a fire screen, designed with a protea flower, the emblem of the Union of South Africa.

Tobé Says...

The new sheer fabric dresses and separates immediately raise the question of what to wear underneath. Some dresses come with slips but most of the cottons do not, and practically none of the separates.

What to Wear Under New Sheer Dresses

My first choice is a strapless bra-top cotton slip—strapless because smooth white shoulders look so pretty under sheer dresses, cotton because cottons are more shadowproof than nylon or silk. I think it is smartest to match your dress—particularly print backgrounds; although often a light color like pink or white or yellow looks pretty under thin dark transparencies.

A more conservative choice is the cover-bra neckline slip, in a good 50-50 nylon and rayon fabric that is opaque but retains most of the special washing qualities of nylon.

HISTORIC box-hedge borders the path from Gunston Hall down to the Potomac. The box, said to be the highest of its variety, was planted by George Mason, Virginia statesman and patriot, when he built Gunston in 1755

Gunston Hall to Join U. S. Shrines Friday

THE 500-acre estate of Gunston Hall, just 25 miles south of Washington in Virginia, will be dedicated as a national shrine on Friday at 4 p. m.

Vice President Alben Barkley is expected to deliver the dedicatory address, and Virginia's Gov. John S. Battle will also speak. The Marine Corps Band from Quantico will play.

Gunston Hall was built in 1755 by George Mason, Virginia planter and patriot. It was here that Mr. Mason drafted the Virginia Declaration of Rights, commonly known as the forerunner of the Bill of Rights for the Constitution.

Louis Hertle, who bought the estate in 1912, willed it 18 years ago to the State of Virginia, as a memorial to his wife, Eleanor Daughaday Hertle and to George Mason. The National Society of Colonial Dames of America was appointed custodian of the place.

Today the gardens of Gunston Hall contain some of the highest box-hedge in the country. The hedge, the Suffruticosa variety which was planted by George Mason during construction of the house, is 11 feet high in some places.

Susan Oulahan Is Married to J. W. Bishop, Jr.

Miss Susan Carroll Oulahan, daughter of Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, was married yesterday at 4 p. m. in the Little Sanctuary of the Washington Cathedral, to Joseph Warren Bishop, jr. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. J. W. Bishop and the late Mr. Bishop of Washington.

Canon Charles Curtis officiated at the ceremony and Courts Oulahan gave his sister in marriage.

The bride wore a starched white organdy gown made with long sleeves and a white bandeau held her tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses with an orchid center.

To Sail for Europe

Mrs. Robert S. Marshall of Bowie, Md., was her only attendant and John L. Saltonstall, jr., of Cambridge, Mass., was Mr. Bishop's best man.

A small reception for the immediate families and friends of the couple at the home of the bride's mother followed the ceremony.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Bishop will sail for Europe where the bridegroom will serve as special assistant to the General Counsel of the United States High Commission for Occupied Germany.

The bride's father, the late Richard Oulahan, was for many years Washington correspondent of the New York Times. Mr. Bishop's father was former managing editor of Nation's Business.

Your Baby

Tears, Idle Tears? Not on Your Tintype

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

NO MATTER how much the young mother thinks she knows about the actual physical care of a baby, she is bound, when the baby is new, to be confused about controversial questions.

One of the moot questions has to do with whether a baby should be picked up when he cries. Older relatives will say no, you'll spoil him. Modern pediatricians (bolstered by psychiatrists) say yes. Pick him up, sooth him, make him comfortable, walk or rock him, if necessary, but let him know you are there to protect him.

Babies profit by being given the physical sense of warmth that comes from a human body. They have been accustomed to this for nine long months. An infant likes to snuggle and this can't be done when he is put alone into a bed, however artfully he may be wrapped or however comfortably he may be fed. He has to adjust to a new environment and he does this the more quickly if he isn't divorced too abruptly from the warmth and cradling which he got all during his gestation period.

Needs To Feel Loved

BABIES need oxygen for the development of their brains and they soon deplete their supply of oxygen if they cry long and loudly. Emotionally the baby is filled with anxiety when no one heeds his anguished cries. This is his only method of communication with his protectors and if they are deaf to it, then to whom can he turn? For good personality development the baby needs to feel loved and protected, even in these early days —in fact particularly in these early days of his existence.

Every mother who has practiced soothing her baby's cries and making him comfortable discovers that when the baby's reason for crying is removed or ended, he no longer cries for attention. He has not been spoiled by cuddling.

We used to think, mercy me, that babies cried for exercise and so should have a prescribed amount of it. We used to think that crying was good discipline for the baby. Then he learned who was boss and that he wouldn't get any response when he cried.

Happily for babies, and for parents, too, this era of hard-headedness and hard-heartedness has passed. Now, we know that when the baby cries he needs attention and we give it to him with no feeling of guilt or any fear that he will be ruined by it.

All-Woman U. N. Agency To Attack Bias Against Sex

By A. I. Goldberg

Lake Success, May 6 (AP).—An all-woman session of United Nations delegates will be held here May 8-19 to argue about the bad deal women still get in many parts of the world—just because they are women.

The group is the Commission on the Status of Women. This will be the fourth time it has met. There is a delegate for each of the 15 countries represented on the Economic and Social Council. There's not a man in the lot.

Legal Bias Disclosed

In addition to political discrimination, the women's group keeps an eye on sex discrimination in the criminal field. Under French law, a United Nations survey shows, if a husband finds his wife and her lover in adultery in his home and kills them, his act is considered excusable.

But if the little woman catches hubby and his girl friend and pumps them full of bullets, she has no such excuse.

Chile gives the wife and her lover some small consolation. If the husband shoots, he is exempt from criminal responsibility only "provided that his general behavior was not such as to make wife's fault excusable."

The wife is punished more severely for adultery in Belgium, Greece, Haiti, France, Italy and Syria, the survey shows.

On the other hand, a United Nations survey indicates rights for women are spreading, politically at least. Women now have equal legal rights with men in the political field in 52 countries.

But 22 countries—18 of them members of the United Nations—still have legislation that discriminates against women.

The delegates spend their time ripping into practices that limit educational opportunities for women, that restrict women's rights to citizenship because of the husband's nationality, and that affect their right to hold property in their own name.

The commission is jealous about the right of women to collect the same amount of pay when they do the same work as men.

Foresee Russ Walkout

The commission is braced for another Russian walkout over the Chinese question. Mrs. E. A. Popova, of Russia, is fully expected to act like her male Russian counterparts in objecting to the presence of Miss Cecilia Sieu-Ling Zung of Nationalist China.

There is to be an election of officers with a president named to succeed Madame Marie-Helene Lefaucheux, France, elected at last year's session at Beirut, Lebanon.

Mrs. Amalia C. De Castillo Ledon, Mexico, has been vice-chairman, and Mrs. Mihri Pektas, Turkey, executive secretary.

A new United States delegate will be seated at this session, succeeding Miss Dorothy Kenyon, New York lawyer.

The new delegate is Mrs. Olive Remington Goldman, a native of Newark, N. J., who has been active for more than 20 years in Illinois education and politics.

Cooking Cue

Orange frosting for a layer cake is easy to make: cream a three-ounce package of cream cheese well, blend in the grated rind of an orange and a teaspoon of orange juice. Add about two cups of confectioners' sugar, beating well after each addition.

Plan Installation Dinner

Business and Professional Women of B'nai B'rith will attend an installation dinner at the Lee Sheraton Hotel on May 14 at 7 p. m.

Her Napoleon Room Is Pride of Capitalite

By Ellen Buell Parry

IT WAS 30 years ago that Mrs. Edward M. Day, who divides her time between her hometown of Louisville, Ky., and Washington (when she's not in Europe) started collecting everything she could find pertaining to Napoleon.

It all started in Paris one day when Mrs. Day bought some bronze eagles being torn down from lamp-posts. She says:

"I knew that Napoleon had had those eagles placed on the lamp-posts to add to the beauty of the city." "Napoleon adored everything beautiful, everything he had was beautiful. He wore exquisite clothes. I adore everything beautiful. That is why I have always been drawn to him!"

Mrs. Day has the upstairs living-room of her attractive house on 19th st., near Dupont Circle, completely furnished with Napoleon souvenirs and objets d'art she has accumulated during her 21 trips to Europe. She appropriately calls this room "the Napoleon room."

Two walls are lined with shelves of Napoleonic literature. The other walls have pictures and prints of Napoleon (one signed by him), of Josephine, his son, and his mother, Letizia Bonaparte.

Notably missing are pictures of his second wife, Marie Louise of Austria. Mrs. Day has a deep dislike for Marie Louise. On the other hand, she likes to talk about Josephine and how much Napoleon loved her.

Mrs. Day's collection includes furniture, tapestries, statues, miniatures, jewel boxes, copper jelly molds. Particularly valuable are two medals Napoleon wore, many medals he gave to his men, and a beautiful pair of porcelain doorknobs, with a symbol of a bee on them, from his palace at Fontainebleau.

SEVERAL members of the "younger married set" have recently bought country property and are making plans to build.

Ben and Jane Dulaney—he's a young lawyer—have acquired 7 acres at Langley. Their property adjoins the 40 acres on which the new Potomac School is now being constructed.

The Edward Zimmermans (Ted and Cynthia), after looking at all available Virginia property from Chain Bridge to Dranesville, settled on 10 acres near Forestville. Ted is a lawyer with the Department of Justice. Cynthia's big interest is politics—at present, she is working with the Republican Senatorial Committee at the Capitol.

Cynthia, as well as her husband, holds a law degree from the University of Virginia. It was there that she and Ted met. They hope to start building their new modern house soon.

The Charles Bairds 3d, at present living in Alexandria, have purchased 11 acres adjoining the Zimmermans. They hope to have their new house ready for occupancy this fall.

Ted Zimmerman and Charlie Baird knew each other at Harvard. However, it was just a happy coincidence that they happened to buy adjoining property.

Ed Stettinius 3d (son of the late Secretary of State), now engaged in real estate business in Washington, has bought a place near Middleburg. He will go back and forth to Washington.

MISS MARY MERRICK
. . . organized the Christ Child Society

ONE of Washington's greatest women is Miss Mary Virginia Merrick.

In spite of having been an invalid, in bed or in a wheelchair, since her early teens, she has spent her long life helping people she has considered less fortunate than herself.

Although unable to raise her head or back from her bed, she started back in 1886 to make layettes for the poverty-stricken children of Washington. She organized, was first president, and, until a couple years ago, was national president of the Christ Child Society, which today has branches in 37 cities. She is in her sixty-second-year as head of the Washington chapter.

Today Miss Merrick lives at 2 East Melrose st., Chevy Chase. She is in her middle 80s, weighs only about 80 pounds, her legs are paralyzed, her back and head have to be supported, but she is still actively engaged in working for the Christ Child Society.

MAJ. GEN. THOMAS H. GREEN has retired as Judge Advocate General of the Army, but he doesn't have to worry about finding a job.

On a recent trip through the West, General and Mrs. Green stopped for 10 days at a dude ranch outside of Phoenix, Ariz. Being an old cavalry officer, the general was enthusiastic about the ranch and particularly enjoyed being able to ride horseback many hours every day.

At the end of their stay, the general was asked if he would become the manager of the ranch. He didn't feel he could accept, but he was more than flattered by the offer.

These Prize-Winning Babies Are Bright—So Are Their Parents

DAVID ALAN EMORY, startled at the prospect of being a witness in Senator Johnson's threatened investigation of Hollywood morals (since abandoned) takes first prize in this week's "Bright Babies" contest.

So many excellent pictures and clever captions have poured in, The Washington Post will continue the competition for several weeks. Many of the entries already received are still in the running.

If you have a photograph of your youngster in an amusing or winsome pose, there is still time to submit it for next Sunday's competition. For the picture judged the best each week, this newspaper will pay $25. It will pay $5 each for all other pictures used.

A caption must accompany the photo, and the more amusing it is, the better. Pictures may be years old or brand new, but must be of children who were under 18 months of age when photographed. Photos must come directly from parents or guardians with written authorization for their publication. Write your name and address and the baby's name on the back of the photo, along with the caption. Send postage if you wish the picture returned.

Employes of this newspaper and their families are excluded from participation. Mail entries to: "Babies Are Bright," The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Ask Anne

It's a Dog's Life When You Travel With One, Reader Fears; But Anne Offers Some Reassuring Suggestions

DEAR ANNE:

Everybody has been writing you about traveling with children and I hope you won't laugh at my question. I want to know about traveling with a dog. I am planning to take my wire-haired terrier along when I drive to California this summer. Can you tell me anything about housing problems I may encounter along the way? Any other suggestions will be appreciated, too.

W. W. M., Washington.

The problem of finding lodgings for you with your pet is not nearly as difficult as it once was, I hear. There is, incidentally, a directory of available havens issued by the Gaines Dog Research Center in New York. It's called "Touring with Towser" and you can obtain a copy of the 1950 edition by sending 10 cents to this center at 250 Park ave., New York.

Sixteen hundred individual listings in all States of the Union are included, as well as notes on special conditions under which some hostelries accept dogs and helpful hints that make it pleasanter to have a dog as a traveling companion.

DEAR ANNE:

With the crab season opening before too long, I would like some information on whether I can put crab meat away in my new freezer. Is it good after freezing? And how do you go about it?

W. J. S., Upper Marlboro, Md.

Freezing of crab meat has not proven very successful, either commercially or in home freezers.

However, a fish dealer here who packs various seafood away for the use of his own family tells me they have had good luck freezing crab cakes and stuffed crab at home.

They also freeze soft shell crabs, he says, and 90 percent of the people who eat them later can't tell the difference between them and the fresh ones. He cleans the crabs first, then freezes them raw. He takes them from the freezer 10 to 15 minutes before frying to let them thaw out a little.

PETUNIA!

To find the first May jonquil
Is a mighty lovely thing,
Hooray for Mother Nature,
And Hooray, I say, for Spring!

And remember, Petunia, to gather your flowers either before eight in the morning, or toward dusk, because they'll stay fresh much longer.

DEAR ANNE:

There is spattered cement around the bricks of the new front steps of our home, left there by careless workmen. Can you tell us how to get them off?

P. R., Washington.

Cement spattered on a porous surface such as brick penetrates it, making it more difficult to remove. Use a solution of 1 part muriatic (hydrochloric) acid in 20 parts of water. Allow to act for a few minutes, and flush off with plenty of water. The effect is to soften the cement, which can then be scraped off.

If necessary, the application should be repeated. After the cleaning, the acid remaining in the surface can be neutralized with ammonia, followed by rinsing.

Be very careful in handling the acid. Wear rubber gloves. Old clothes and shoes are also advisable for the task.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me whether it is more expensive to buy canned baby food or prepare the food at home for the baby—such as applesauce, chopped vegetables, and scraped meat. I have a lot of work on my hands with three youngsters and would like to avoid the extra trouble, but am also anxious to save on our grocery bills.

C. J. W., Bethesda.

The only thing I have on this subject is a "cost and time" study prepared by a consumer laboratory for a well-known baby food company about 18 months ago. They employed G. I. wives with infants to keep records for one month on the comparative cost of buying four baby foods canned and preparing the same food at home.

Except for custard, the mothers' reports were distinctly in favor of the commercially prepared foods. Here are some of the figures from the study, which was of course based on food costs at that time. Fuel and the value of the mother's time weren't included in their calculations or the cost of the home-prepared food would have been even higher.

Cost for strained green beans: Prepared at home, 19.3 cents per 4½-ounce serving; 8.2 cents for the same amount commercially packed in tin and 9.4 cents in glass.

Cost for strained peaches: 16 cents for home-prepared serving of 4½ ounces; 8.2 cents commercially prepared in tin and 9.4 cents in glass.

Cost for scraped beef: 60 cents for 3½ ounces prepared at home; 18 to 19 cents for 3½ ounces commercially prepared.

Custard, the food these mothers prepared less expensively at home, cost them 7 cents for a 4½-ounce serving. Canned, it cost them 8.2 cents in tin and 9.4 cents in glass.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Hold Annual Dinner

The Washington Readers Club will hold its annual dinner May 11 at 6:30 p. m. at the Hotel Fairfax. Miss Leila May Taylor, president, will preside.

Miss Hester Beall of the University of Maryland faculty will be guest speaker. Miss Anne Grimes and Mr. Charles Lounsbury will entertain with interpretative dances. Clarence Ruebsam, Ed Mooore of WOL, and Miss Taylor will give readings from Shakespeare.

DELICATE APRICOT PIE

Ingredients: ¾ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2¼ cups whole-fruit apricot nectar, 2 eggs (separated), 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1/3 cup shredded coconut, 1 baked 8-inch pastry shell.

Method: Mix ½ cup of the sugar, cornstarch and salt together thoroughly, in top part of double boiler. Add nectar and cook, stirring constantly, over hot water until thickened. Beat egg yolks slightly; beat in a little of the hot mixture, then stir back into saucepan. Return to heat and cook 3 minutes longer over hot water, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add lemon juice and ½ coconut. Cool. Pour into baked pastry shell. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and gradually beat in remaining sugar. Spread over top of pie, being careful to cover filling completely. Sprinkle with remaining coconut. Bake in moderate (350 degrees F.) oven about 15 minutes or until meringue is lightly browned. Chill before serving. Makes six servings.

THE use of wrought iron furniture indoors is hailed by decorator James Amster. The carpet in this picture is "Repartee," the very modern one mentioned by Clara Dudley in her talk before the Fashion Group last week

Contemporary Decor Blends Old, Modern

By Lucia Brown

IS THERE an old Oriental rug in your parlor? And what are you going to do with it now that your living room is "going modern?"

The advice of James Amster, noted New York decorator who visited here last week, is to keep it if it's a good one. A fine old rug or tapestry will fit in beautifully in a contemporary interior if decorating skill is used, he believes.

With "antiques" of bad design, Mr. Amster has little patience, however. Addressing the Washington Fashion Group at a luncheon meeting, he advised members to toss 'em out. No sense in hanging onto them simply because they're old and you "just love old things," he said. You're only perpetuating ugliness.

Iron Furniture Hailed

The use indoors of wrought-iron garden furniture was hailed by Mr. Amster as a coming trend. New designs are comfortable, he said, and practically indestructible. Walls covered with fabric and tables topped with marble, slate, or mirrors also got an approving nod from the man who created smart Amster Yard from a New York slum.

Clara Dudley, color consultant for the Alexander Smith Carpet Co. spoke on the same "Gracious Living" program with Mr. Amster. She described the newest rugs, such as Edward Wormley's ultramodern "Repartee," and a pure nylon carpet, extremely light in weight and highly durable. Magnolia white velvet was luscious carpet she mentioned as now available at reasonable prices.

MODERN MOTHERHOOD

By Carol Taylor

A series of five articles, Monday through Friday, May 8-12

Carol Taylor has just become a mother and writes about the new medical method of "natural birth" from actual experience. She explains the latest medical and scientific techniques of childbearing in simple, understandable terms. Every parent should read this series!

Starts tomorrow in The Washington Post

Latin Films To Be Shown

Mme. Fernando Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador, will be hostess to the Chevy Chase branch of the National League of American Pen Women at the residence of the Ambassador at 4 p. m. May 13. She will present a program on the "Arts and Cultures of Peru." This will be the last in a series of meetings on Latin-American art which this branch selected as a study course this year.

Mme. Berckemeyer's program will consist of two films—one on "Textiles and Pottery of Peru," the other on the famous Inca ruins of Machu Picchu. Following the films, there will be a performance of Peruvian dances in native costumes. At the conclusion of the program, Mme. Berckemeyer will preside at the tea table.

On May 27, this branch will hold its final meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. R. C. Dorsey in Alexandria, at which time officers for the coming year will be installed.

Style Show Slated

The Young People's Fellowship of St. Alban's Church will have a teen-age fashion and talent show at Satterlee Hall, Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves., nw., on May 19, at 8 p. m. The proceeds from this project will be used toward purchasing organs for churches in Mexico.

I Cherish You

As surely as there is a sky . . . And stars surround the sun I love you dearly and I know . . . . . . You are my only one . . . I love you and I cherish you . . . And hold you in my heart . . . And in the comfort of your arms . . . My fears and doubts depart . . . You are the golden promise that . . . My dreams will all come true . . . And in return I give myself . . . And every thought to you . . . Your happiness means more to me . . . Than any other goal . . . Because when I am at your side . . . This life is sweet and whole . . . And just as long as I may live . . . And I may breathe the air . . . Your joy on earth will be my wish . . . And my unending prayer.

Alumnae to Meet

The Washington Chapter of the Mary Baldwin College Alumnae Association will hold its spring meeting at the national headquarters of the American Association of University Women, 1634 I st. nw., May 13 at 2:30 p. m. Speaker for the occasion will be the national alumnae secretary, Mrs. Dorothy H. Bridges.

Pen Women To Display Art

The annual art exhibit of the District Branch, National League of American Pen Women, will be featured at a tea sponsored by the art group today from 4 to 6 in the branch studio on Columbia rd. Paintings in this exhibit are entries in the annual contest, and voting for the annual "popular award" will take place.

Mrs. Gertrude LeLacheur is chairman for the tea, at which the following will pour: Miss Clara Manderschied, Mrs. Evelyn Booth Moore, Mrs. Mekkin Perkins and Mrs. Evelyn Norcross Sherrill. Members and guests invited. Mrs. Kathryne Dimmitt is art chairman.

Jayncees to Announce Membership Winners

At their meeting May 10, at the American Security and Trust Building, the Jayncees will announce the winners of their membership drive which brought in over 20 new members to the organization, which is the auxiliary of the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce. Under the direction of Mrs. Robert Tomb, the first prize is an oven, second prize a compact, and third prize will be hosiery.

The lucky winners brought in new membership to the Jayncees by calling the wives of Jaycees who had not yet become members of this auxiliary.

February Bride Honored at Tea

Mrs. James Ernest Travis was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Arthur L. Anderson entertained yesterday at a tea at her home in Silver Spring. Mrs. Travis is the former Miss Dorothy Jean Griffis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Griffis of this city, and her husband is the son of Mrs. Anderson. The wedding took place February 25.

Those assisting at the tea yesterday were Mrs. Byron S. Huie, Mrs. William J. Folkes and Mrs. J. O. Davis.

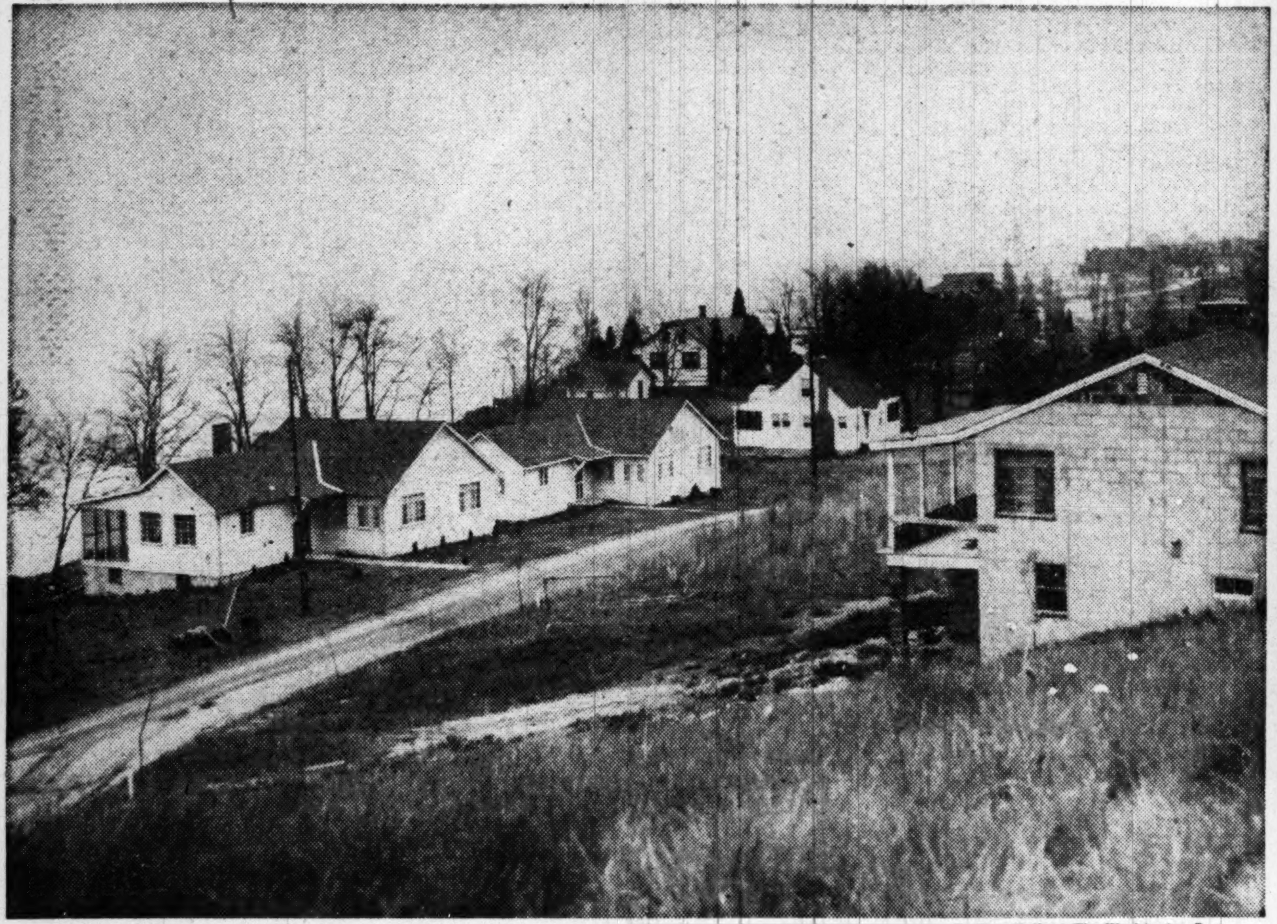
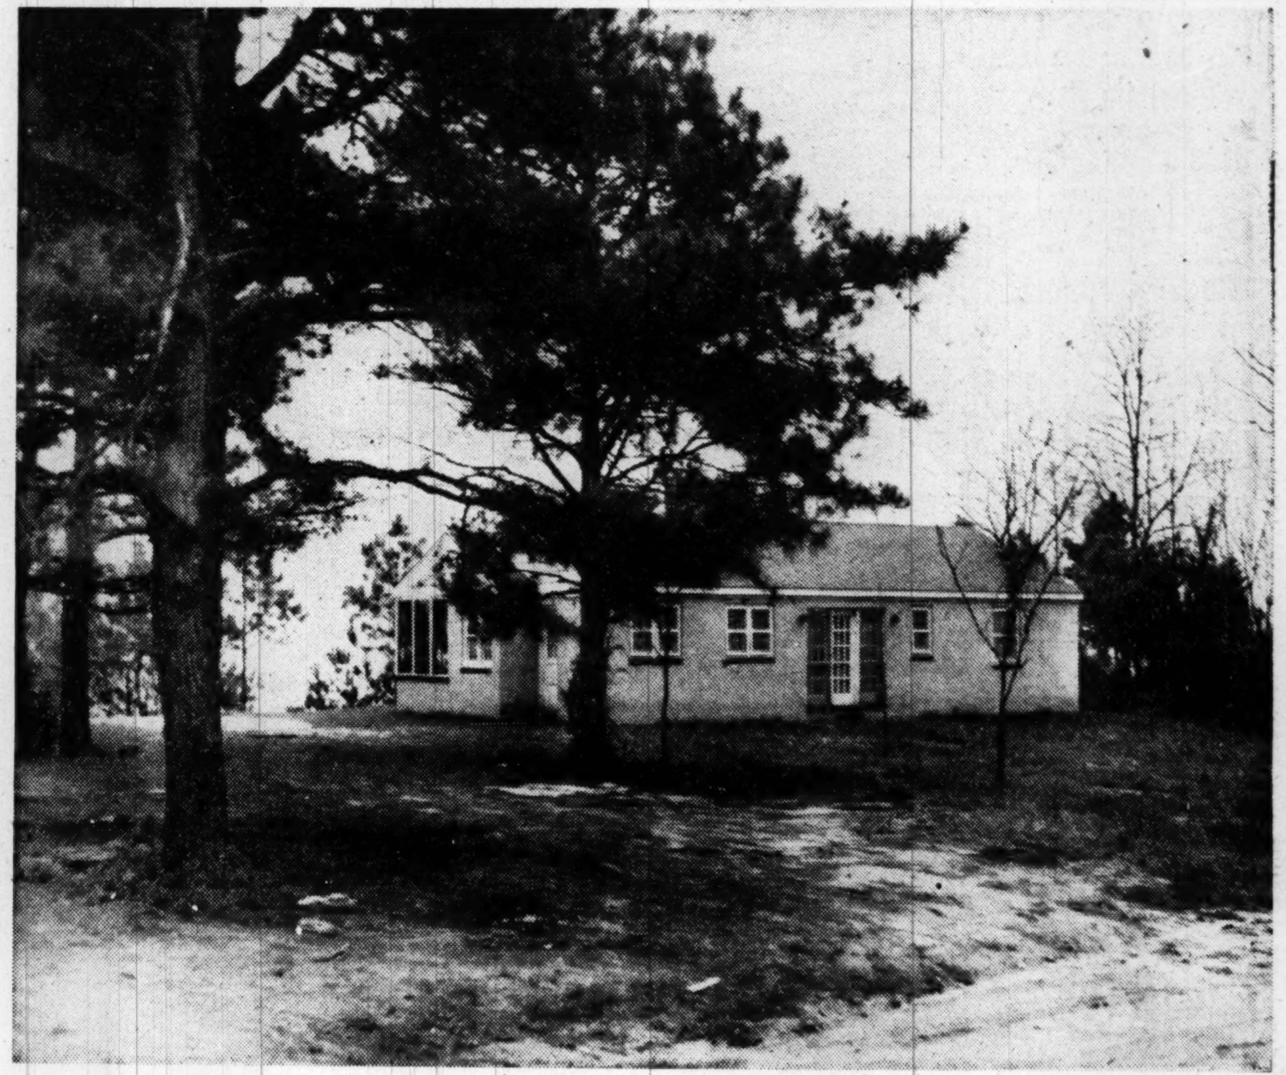
Beach Homes—Big as All Outdoors





By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Residents of Willows Beach Colony, on the bay not far from Prince Frederick, Md., can relax in these sturdy homes with the sound of the surf in their ears. Lots at the colony range in price fron $600 to $2500 and average one-fourth acre in size. Like other beach developments, families generally pass the summer while the man of the house commutes to work daily or lives in town during work days and spends weekends there

Just beyond this pine-nestling rambler at Drum Point Beach the waters of Chesapeake Bay and the Patuxent River flow together. The home is owned by Isaac Eisenberg of Kenilworth, Md., is suitable for year-round occupancy, and is typical of houses going up there. Sites at the huge waterfront development—more than 220 acres—cost from $350 to $2750

City Folk Snapping Up Shore Sites

By Robert P. Jordan

FAR as the eye can see stretches the sandy reach of Ocean Beach, Md. Back of the breaking Atlantic surf and the white sand looms the woodland. Little has disturbed the silence of this natural setting—up to a month ago.

Four weeks ago yesterday a veteran Washington real estate man "opened up" this undeveloped territory 10 miles south of Ocean City, Md. He offered miles of beach sites for sale.

Washingtonians by the hundreds have driven over since then, filled with the dream of owning a home-away-from-home, hopeful of purchasing a homesite as the starter.

And as an indication of the lure of the great outdoors, they—and city dwellers from Maryland municipalities—have bought $500,000 worth of land already.

So reported Leon Ackerman, the developer and a real estate operator here for 27 years. "I've never seen anything like it," he declared.

Sites Sought

THIS is the time of year when waterfront property brokers are getting steam up for the sales season ahead, and when folks who want water at their front door and woodland in back turn out in droves to find if what they seek is on the market.

A survey yesterday of waterfront developers—with property to offer on the Potomac, Patuxent and other rivers, Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic—points to a busy sales season.

Ackerman, for instance, got started comparatively early this year. But those half-acre lots he has sold for $500,000 take up "six solid miles of ocean frontage," he said. And he has plenty more for sale. He has price-tagged the lots at $450.

According to the developer, a number of site buyers plan to erect homes this year. Large commercial building also is in the offing, he reported, but it is to be set apart from the residential areas. Ultimately, he said, Ocean Beach will have a 20-mile frontage.

Probably the largest project under way on Chesapeake Bay is Drum Point Beach. Located at the southern tip of Calvert County, it also fronts on the Patuxent River, Mill Creek, and on four large fresh-water lakes.

Big Season Predicted

WITH more than 2200 acres and 9 miles of waterfront, Drum Point Beach is in for "a very big season," according to Paul D. Kerman, president of the corporation of Washington businessmen which is doing the developing.

For fishing enthusiasts, Kerman cited Drum Point's advantages: salt water angling in the bay and river; fresh water fishing for perch, bass and pike in the lakes.

Lots range from $350 to $2750. Twenty homes have been completed, with around 10 more now going up. Houses range in construction cost from $3000 to $10,000. Utilities are in. Future planning calls for a hotel and yacht basin, Kerman said.

Several hundred persons have

Park the Tots; Shop for Lots

NEXT TIME you meet up with a real estate salesman, treat him kindly. He may be a baby sitter.

That's right. He may work for the Brant Co., Inc., Arlington real estate firm. The company moves into its own building this week at 1704 N. Rhodes st. After that—on weekends only—comes a complete baby-sitting service.

"Complete" not only means plenty of loving care, including diaper changes, but a registered nurse to supervise the tots in their play pens. So reports a company spokesman. Up to 15 toddlers will be taken at a time.

Northwest D.C. Homes

Plans are nearly completed for 12 two-story homes to be built at 9th and Hemlock sts. nw. by Goldman & Green. The dwellings will be constructed of brick and cinder-block, and will be 17 by 35 feet. The builders-owners, located at 7566 8th st. nw., will seek subbids shortly.

17 Homes Slated

Permit has been issued for construction of 17 homes on Ewing dr. and Amiston rd., Bethesda, by Carl M. Freeman, Inc.

To 'Year-Rounders'

Beach Is Home Sweet Home

By Dorothea Andrews

Post Reporter

THERE are the year-rounders and the "summer crowd."

Go to any beach around Washington and you see both kinds when the season is in—the people to whom going to the beach is a two-week-a-year proposition, and those to whom the beach is home.

At Woodland Beach, which is about 5 miles from Beverly in southern Maryland, there are some 630 year-rounder families. The men of these houses work mostly in Washington—a few in Baltimore. They work in and out of Government.

And the women, at least up until recently, tended pretty much to their own home fires. Very few people knew very few other people.

What's in a Name . . .

WHICH was natural, because Woodland Beach isn't a town. It's just a name. The people who

City Dwellers Look for Homes Near Water

bought lots, he reported. More than half, he said, are purchasing with the intention of building year-round homes on them to live in after retirement.

Generally, persons buying waterfront sites have in mind the idea of a permanent home upon retirement—or plan to build summer quarters to serve as a cool, peaceful haven for the wife and children through the hot months and as a weekend respite for the husband.

Because of this, several brokers noted, homes are soundly constructed for the most part. In many subdivisions, covenants have been made to insure housing investments. Shacks, tents, trailers are a rarity.

The subdivisions, in short, are not for the two-week vacationers. Few rental properties are available, and they are usually turned over on that basis in private deals between the owner and friends.

Other Beach Projects

DESCRIPTIONS of other nearby waterfront projects follow:

CALVERT MANOR—on Piscataway Bay, Prince Georges County, about 10 miles from the District on Indian Head hwy. Theodore F. Menk, 29 years a waterfront property agent, said 20 homes are being built—all by individuals who bought lots there.

By building their own homes, he said, they are putting up houses in the $20,000 bracket that will actually cost around $12,000. Lots start at $650. Eighty of 130 lots have been sold. Prospective buyers "are getting more selective, want more value for their money," Menk said.

CAPE LOCH HAVEN—located near the junction of South River and the bay, south of Annapolis. N. C. Hines & Son, developers, announce that financing has been arranged for building of 100 homes for site owners. Homes will cost from $7500 to $12,500.

A well developed project, Cape Loch Haven sports a yacht basin holding 200 boats. A yacht club is being formed. Lots range from $295 to $2500.

ST. MARY'S BEACH—Another N. C. Hines & Son development on the south side of the Patuxent Riven near Oakville, about 45 miles from the District. Lots, 50 by 150 feet, sell from $250 to $1500. Thirty year-round homes have been built, another dozen are under way.

Features include new dock, new beach house, private picnic park. Spring sales have doubled over those of 1949.

WILLOWS BEACH COLONY—Between Chesapeake Beach and Plum Point on the bay. Sixteen homes have been built or are under construction. Lots averaging one fourth acre cost from $600 to $2500.

The homes cost from $8000 to $8500 to build. Community facilities include beach club. F. H. Walker, president of the Willows Beach Development Corp., said that rental cottages are planned for construction.

HALLOWING POINT RIVER ESTATES—on the Potomac in Virgina. The project, for which Frank W. Clarke of Alexandria is agent, is located about four miles by water below Mount Vernon, off Gunston Hall rd.

Lots range from three fourths acre to 2½ acres, and cost from $550 to $5500. Three-bedroom brick ramblers are being built for sale at around $11,650. Another custom-built rambler is being started, with its cost to be around $23,000. A yacht basin is planned.

CAPE LEONARD—on St. Leonard Creek, a large tributary of the Patuxent River, midway between Solomons and Broomes Islands. Cape Leonard Corp., developer, has lots ranging from $390 to $3000. A number of permanent homes have been built. Area offers plenty of sailing and deep water.

President of the corporation is Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District health officer. Electricity and phones are in, streets are built up. A citizens' committee has been formed to promote civic recreation.

SAUNDERS POINT BEACH—on Chesapeake Bay at mouth of South River, where the bay is nearly 10 miles wide. Lots in this restricted community sell from $700.

Owned and developed by Barse Stonebraker, the beach features usual aquatic sports, and good fishing opposite Thomas and Bloody Point lighthouses. Residence can be taken in early spring and extend through fall.

HOME BUILDING

Several attractive all-year-round private homes are in the process of construction. There is ample frontages on these large homesites for ramblers and ranch-type houses. And over 500 beautiful acres to select from. The developers have already started 3-bedroom brick ramblers on some of the unsold sites—so it is possible to purchase an attractive home along with the homesite. These homes all have large living rooms and fireplaces and will be sold under the present GI bill.

Beach Life—for Good

live there pay county and State taxes, no local taxes.

They have something there known as the Property Owners Association, which has bingo parties, etc., to finance road improvements at this South River beach.

The year-rounders have had to get together, too, to organize a fire department, which they financed by benefits. They have a clubhouse, now 19 years old, where whoever needs the benefit holds it. The fire department has a ladies' auxiliary. And the people have gotten together to have a community church, cornerstone for which was laid in 1937. It has since been twice enlarged.

All these things came along in a fairly quiet way. Then, a short time back, Mrs. Dorothea N. Dempsey, a year-rounder, invited a group of women she didn't know to her house. She wanted to point out something to them:

Mothers' Club Started

WOODLAND BEACH had a clubhouse, a church—but nothing for the children. So Mrs. Dempsey and the women she was just meeting agreed to form the Woodland Beach Mothers Club.

It was organized February 7 with 27 charter members. At the last meeting of the club there were six new applications for membership.

What the club wants to do is locate and equip a playground, establish a library, get some youth organization going. Already, they've got a good start.

They got permission from the Property Owners Association to use space in the clubhouse for a library. Bookshelves were built by volunteers. The Annapolis Public Library has agreed to furnish the books on an exchange basis.

Volunteers Trained

THREE women of the beach have volunteered to serve as librarians. They are now being trained to do this. The library is to open next week.

And others are being trained in Girl Scout work. When this phase of the program gets going, they hope to have classes—with volunteer instructors—for music, art, woodcraft and nature study.

And there's the playground. The Property Owners Association agreed to find some space for the playground. The Mothers Club is going to have an auction June 3 to raise funds for equipping the playground. They hope to have it in full operation by summer's end.

They want everybody to know about the auction. Because they are going to get their own business people to help it along—they'll auction off "anything"—and they want the people who pass Woodland Beach on the way to other beaches to come on over and do some buying.

As a kind of government for a community, the way the Property Owners Association and the Mothers Club are going about improving Woodland Beach probably wouldn't pass the standards of the Hoover Commission.

But as a way of getting things done, Woodland Beachers seem to have arrived at a rather unusual governmental pattern: representation with very little taxation.

Increased Use Of Structural Steel Forecast

INCREASED use of structural steel in homes costing from $7500 to $15,000 is predicted by Roy A. Kropp, president of Kropp Forge Company.

According to the Chicago Industrialist, builders of the Nation's low-cost homes are swinging more and more to the use of structural steel. He said that steel supporting columns and beamwork are speedier to erect and more durable than wood or poured concrete.

Kropp also predicted that the use of all-steel prefabricated houses would increase in the next 10 years. Market for steel in the building and construction industries, he asserted, is "virtually untapped."

Atom Bomb Makes Country Residents of City Dwellers

FEAR of atomic attack is adding impetus to the suburban movement of city dwellers.

Many United States cities will find it desirable soon to revamp their city planning and zoning regulations to get in line with atomic requirements.

Much more "ribbon development" or radial dispersion along present major highways is the principal change expected in city pattern because of the pull of atom bomb possibilities.

Thus some trends uncovered, the National Association of Real Estate Boards reports, in its survey on "City Futures and the Atom Bomb." The trends were elicited, NAREB announces, by real estate boards of 135 American cities. Here are other potentialities:

So far as industrial districts are concerned, 75 percent of the cities said the bomb will cause such areas to spread out.

INDUSTRYWISE, the atom bomb's threat will be added to other forces already drawing new plants to the smaller towns, interior locations, and industrial locations, away from the giant urban centers. Such a movement, however, was predicted to be gradual.

As to business and apartment structures, there is to be less tendency to build for height.

Home Show Ready

NEARLY 200 exhibitors—among them the Haitian government—are readying their colorful displays for the fourth annual Home Show starting Friday at the National Guard Armory.

According to James W. Pearson, executive director of the extravaganza, 95 percent of the armory's available space has been leased by exhibitors. The show will be bigger and better than ever, he said.

It will be the first time, for instance, that a foreign government has shown its wares at the show. The Haitians plan a display of fine mahogany dishes and furniture, as well as photographs of native life.

Another "first" is the hour of the ribbon cutting, which opens the show. It is set for 7 p. m. Friday, instead of the traditional afternoon opening.

One of the biggest attractions at the exposition will be daily demonstrations of RCA color television, with special color TV programs being broadcast.

Plenty of give-aways are slated, including four automobiles, $2000 worth of furniture, $1800 in kitchen equipment, as well as home appliances, savings bonds and other prizes.

Visitors can watch a daily cake-baking contest conducted by the Potomac Electric Power Co., in which participants from various women's clubs will compete for cash prizes. Men may learn the art of meat carving, as demonstrated by Washington chefs.

There will be a chance for young architects to submit their plans for a one-story home in the form of a scale model. Spectators will be able to vote for "The Home I Would Like to Live In" at the model home and home design contest.

Other features include a fashion show to be held every afternoon, and on May 14, a show of men's styles modeled by Washington radio and newspapermen.

The show, sponsored by the Home Builders Association of Washington, will run through May 21.

Agency Advises

Take Care In Planning Space Needs

TO BUILD a home of minimum cost that will meet the needs of the family requires careful planning, according to the Housing and Finance Agency. The house must provide for the minimum needs of the family without overcrowding, HHFA asserts. Most houses should be planned, accordingly, for possible future expansion, and adequate storage space should be provided.

Eliminating the basement and erecting the house on a concrete slab saves in construction cost. The slab serves as a subfloor and obviates the expense of excavation and deep foundation walls.

In the basementless home, a well-planned utility room should be provided for storage space and the equipment usually located in a basement.

Walls and roof represent about 20 percent of the cost of a house, the agency says, and to achieve possible savings care should be used in selection of materials for their construction.

Bathroom and kitchen in back-to-back positions in a one-story house should produce a saving. In a two-story house, the bath should be placed directly above the kitchen to take advantage of a single plumbing stack.

Lustron Assets To Be Sold

An order for sale of the assets of the Lustron Corp., prefabricated house manufacturer, will be filed soon in Federal District Court, Columbus, Ohio, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has announced.

This was decided upon after efforts by RFC and the court to work out a new financing scheme for the company failed. RFC foreclosed its $37.5 million loan to the corporation several weeks ago.

Arlington Builder Plans 85 Homes

Thomas J. Broyhill Co., Inc., will take sub-bids soon on an 85-dwelling project to be built in the vicinity of Little Falls rd. and North Powhatan st., Arlington.

The project is the first section of a proposed 150-dwelling development. Company offices are at 2049 15th st. North, Arlington.

13 Homes Planned

Permit is being sought to erect 13 dwellings on Osage st. and 11th ave., New Hampshire Estates, Md. Builder-owner is Stewart Bainum Co., 6980 Maple st. nw.

The one-story homes will be 39 by 23 feet, and constructed of brick and cinderblock. They were designed by Floyd Collins, 7805 Takoma ave., Takoma Park.

Well-Digging in New York

New York (AP).—A boom in artesian well digging was sparked by New York's water shortage. Most of the wells were drilled for garages and auto laundries when the city outlawed the use of scarce fresh water for luxury purposes. One of the most unusal wells will insure an acre of private gardens against future droughts. Drilled in the heart of Manhattan's fashionable East Side, the well will be used entirely to sprinkle the lawns and landscaping of the Sutton Terrace apartments.

FOR catching fish, the U. S. Fiber & Plastics Corp., Sterling, N. J., is making vinylike plastic waist-high waders for fishermen. The waders are lightweight, flexible, won't deteriorate in sun or salt water, and have seamless feet of double-weight molded plastic. Inside pockets keep articles dry.

A NEW lightweight hearing aid with automatic tone control is being introduced by Otarion, Inc., of Chicago. The unit weighs 3½ ounces and slips into a vest pocket. Its single control knob changes volume while tonal control is adjusted automatically. It compares in size to a packet of matches.

AN ORANGE juicer that hangs on the wall now is being made by Dazey Corp. of St. Louis with a clear tenite plastic bowl holding a pint of juice. You can look through the bowl to see when it is full.

A COFFEE measure that hangs on the wall is the product of Bowman Specialty Co. of Cleveland. It holds a pound of coffee in a clear plastic container. A flick of a lever measures out the exact amount for a cup of coffee. It also could be used as a soap dispenser but not, of course, at the same time.

A BAKELITE polyethylene plastic bottle is the new package for sun tan lotion made by Matthew Products, Inc., of New York. Squeeze the bottle and spray on the lotion. If the bottle is dropped, it will bounce but won't break. It also has a non-leak feature.

WESTINGHOUSE Electric Corp. of New York has a new line of fans that will circulate more than twice as much air as previous models of similar size. Plastic blades are more sparsely angled than usual and injector rings are used to smooth out the air flow. The 16-inch fan moves 3200 cubic feet of air per minute and the 20-inch fan moves 7500 cubic feet.

PRECISION ENGINEERING & Manufacturing Co. of Saginaw, Mich., now is in volume production of its butane-propane gas torch which generates 2200 degrees of heat. It weighs four pounds and is 10½ inches high and 2½ inches in diameter. The torch can be filled from bottled gas to give seven hours of continuous operation.

A NEW chemical fire retardant has been announced by Flamort Chemical Co. of San Francisco which the company says is being used by the U. S. Navy to flame-proof hospitals. The chemical is designed for use on farm buildings, grain elevators, schools and other public buildings.

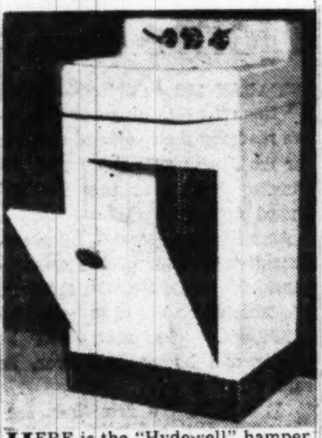
A left-handed cheese grater with a rotary drum has 180 cutting teeth. Place the cheese (or other food) inside the grater, turn the crank and fine or light gratings are produced depending upon the pressure applied by the grater on the food. The mechanism can be converted for right hand or clockwise-turning by reversing the drum. It is made by the Mouli Manufacturing Co. of Union, N. J.



HERE is the "Hydewell" hamper, which fits under any washbowl and can be used as a cabinet if desired, instead of a clothes hamper. Sides and top are adjusted to make it fit any standard fixture. Washington distributor is Malco Wholesalers, 472 L st. nw.

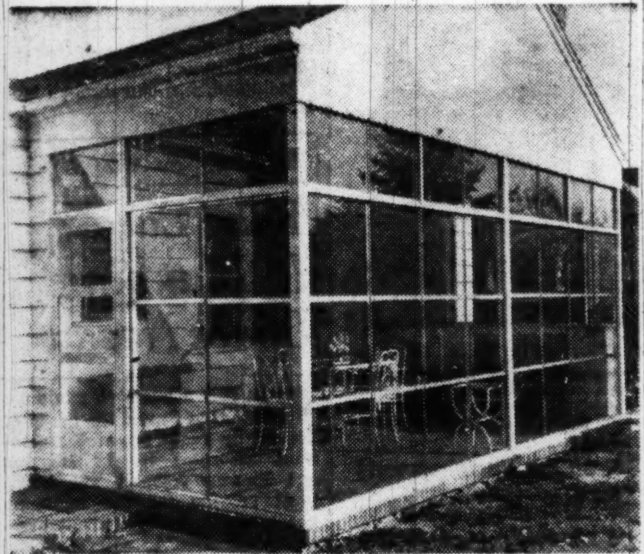
A paint brush with a chisel tip for scraping is the contribution to the amateur painter by the Shaw Insulator Co. of Irvington, N. J. The blue bakelite plastic handle won't roughen with paint to raise blisters on your fingers, and there is a hole in the handle for hanging it up to dry. Sears, Roebuck & Co. is the distributor.



ADDING an attractive and serviceable dining porch to your home is easy enough. A brick or concrete floor is laid and the roof extended from the side of the house. Then the combination storm sashes and screens shown—designed for this purpose by the Warner Manufacturing Co., Jersey City, N. J.—are installed and that's that. Washington supplier is the Weather-Master Co., 310 Sheridan st. nw.

Danes Devise System for Tilt-Up Home

A SYSTEM for construction of a concrete house for which maximum efficiency is claimed has been developed and is being used in Denmark.

The roof and walls of the house are cast in a horizontal position on the floor. After hardening, roof and walls are raised into position. The house has a utility core which is shop-made.

The exterior walls support the roof structure, which extends freely from one outer wall to the other. Partitions may be put up anywhere in the house. The ceilings are made from prefabricated concrete slabs, supported on prefabricated concrete trusses which are left visible.

Hot air is used for heating. The ducts are made of asbestos-cement and insulated against loss of heat with insulating mats. The air is admitted through an adjustable valve, and is sucked out through openings in the doors.

Tests have shown that by using the system it is possible to reduce time of erection to about two thirds that required in conventional methods. The system allows for a considerable reduction of the amount of skilled labor required.

Little Need for It Now

Back Door's Like a Fifth Finger

By David G. Bareuther

WHAT became of the back door? This question is being asked more and more frequently as architects plan rambling one-story houses with kitchens opening from front entrance foyers.

It seems that modern equipment has robbed the back door of much of its old utilitarian role.

Oil-burning and gas-fired heating plants and gas or electric stoves in kitchens make it no longer necessary to carry ashes out the back door.

Garbage disposal machines built into sink drains have eliminated the need to carry garbage out to back yard incinerators or to front curb collection points.

Automatic washing machines and electric driers have replaced the clothes line of the laundry yard in many cases.

Rear garden terraces and patios and the popularity of outdoor living have made it more attractive to have a rear door open from dining room or living room, rather than from the kitchen.

The result is that couples and small families find a back door from a kitchen of little use. By omitting it they gain wall space in the kitchen for more cupboards and more equipment. The space saved may accommodate a large refrigerator, food freezer, dishwasher or washing machine.

Some in $25,000 Class

ALTHOUGH houses being planned along these lines are still exceptions, the number being built without the old-fashioned back door is steadily growing.

An interesting example is offered on the north shore of Long Island, N. Y., where the building firm of Stackler & Frank is erecting houses in the $25,000 class on wooded hillside sites of an acre and larger. Among 44 homes sold from plans, the majority are being built without traditional back doors.

Leonard Frank, member of the firm and head of the Long Island Institute of Home Builders, traces the trend to city apartment dwellers moving to suburban houses.

"These home buyers," Frank said in an interview, "not only prefer one-story houses with all rooms on one floor, apartment style, but they readily accept kitchens without direct outside access. They are used to receiving deliveries at the front—and only—door of their apartments and choose to continue that practice rather than sacrifice kitchen wall space."

This factor of wall space becomes important when kitchens are placed at the front of a house in order to reserve the rear for window walls facing the garden or woodland of deep lots.

In such cases a kitchen may have a door opening from the front vestibule, another leading to the basement, a third swinging into the dining room or dining area—and to add a fourth door means a serious handicap for the average size kitchen.

SMALL ESTATE
NEAR DAMASCUS, MD.

OPEN SUNDAY 1 to 6 P. M.

Seldom is a small estate of this compactness and beauty put upon the market at this exceptionally reasonable sum. Its high elevation commands an unsurpassed expansion of land, even affording sight of the Washington Monument on a clear day. The house in itself is well worth the selling price, with a luxurious roominess preserved only in the older estate homes, combined with modern conveniences and appointments.

On the center hall plan, there are living room, dining room, kitchen with 10 cu. ft. Kelvinator refrigerator, Kelvinator electric stove plus a coal range, double well sink and Murphy cabinets; in addition there is a den and delightfully livable sun porch. Upstairs are 4 bedrooms (with a bath off the master bedroom) and 1½ baths. Full third floor can be finished in two rooms and the basement has Bendix washer, stationary tubs, and hot-water oil heat with winter and summer adjustment. Storm windows and screens included, plus Out Building with 20' deep freeze. Besides its residential perfection, this estate could be converted to the ideal Inn, Convalescent Home in the estate section of Damascus, Md.

DIRECTIONS. Out Wisconsin Ave. (Route 240) 5 miles past Gaithersburg, right on Route 27 to Damascus, through Damascus on Route 108 to Home. Can also be reached by way of Olney.

Put Public Housing to Vote, Building Editor Urges

CHICAGO, May 6.—The building industry believes home owners should insist that local decisions on Federal public housing be made by referendum vote, E. G. Gavin, editor of American Builder magazine, said today.

Public housing already has been defeated by this means in a number of cities, Gavin said. He explained that voters who own their homes do not want to pay additional taxes to finance tax-free housing projects.

"In Seattle, public housing was defeated, 57,732 to 33,529," Gavin said. "In Yakima, Wash., similar action defeated public housing 7 to 1.

"In a host of other cities comparable results have been obtained."

Organized opposition to public housing also has been evident in Illinois, the editor said.

He named Rock Island and Moline as two Illinois cities in which public housing has been voted down and said that in Chicago there has been a "popular uprising because of the injustices of the welfare state law."

Warrenton Beef Farm Is Sold

Green Valley Farm, near Warrenton, Va., has been sold by Julian P. Kelly to Mr. and Mrs. William Schlusemeyer of New York and Warrenton.

The property is considered one of the most productive in the area. It is located on Route 29 four miles from Warrenton. Schlusemeyer, it was reported, plans to continue using the farm for beef cattle.

The Word Is 'Caution' When You Apply Cleaning Fluids

ANYONE setting out to clean a rug, upholstery or draperies with a cleaning fluid is reminded by the Safety Research Institute that those "caution" comments on the label of the container are to be taken seriously.

Home cleaning fluids for dry cleaning, removing spots, grease or paint are sold under a variety of trade names. Types used include naphtha, benzine, denatured alcohol, wood alcohol, turpentine and carbon tetrachloride.

All are good cleaners. But householders using them should remember some are flammable, all give off injurious vapors, are harmful to the skin and are poisonous if taken internally.

When using a few drops of solvent to remove a grease spot from a suit, just remember to stay away from a burning cigarette or the stove. Before using any cleaning solvent, check the label and follow all precautions.

Dry cleaning of garments, rugs or upholstery is best done by professional cleaners, of course. Or one can use a prepared rug shampoo at home. However, if one does want to use a liquid solvent, use it outdoors.

Keep children and pets away from the work area. A still, cloudy day is the best for home dry-cleaning jobs done with a flammable solvent. When using a nonflammable solvent, pick a clear, breezy day when vapors will be blown away.

By all means avoid direct contact with the liquid and don't inhale vapors. When cleaning furniture or rugs with cleaning fluids, the experts suggest a long-handled brush. Hang garments or small rugs outdoors until dry.

Hoist for Invalid

Chicago (AP).—Mrs. Catherine Imhahn, 65, an invalid, was confined to a wheelchair in her second-floor apartment. How to get her up and down was a problem. But her husband, Charles, a retired engineer, solved it. The solution: an open cage, raised and lowered by an electrically-operated hoist. It was rigged at the rear of the building.

Products

Armchairs To Steak Knives

ARMCHAIR with folding legs has been added to the Leg-O-Matic line of tables and chairs that collapse for storage. All four legs work together so that a single motion will open or close the chair. The seat is upholstered in Lorotex coated fabric and the back is of cane. A variety of wood finishes may be had.

GARDEN markers to identify the seeds you plant are being made in plastic to withstand ravages of weather until the green appears. There are over 1000 placards for both flowers and vegetables, each marked with the name and brilliantly colored picture of the buried seed.

BACK-REST for stay-a-beds is constructed of plywood and folds to an inch-wide panel that can be tucked under the mattress when not in use. The back is high enough to support the head and a strap holds a pillow in place on it for reading and eating comfort.

CHILDREN'S records of Vinylite plastic now come with a circular stage that holds paper cut-out figures of the musical characters. The stage fits on the record and figures revolve as the record plays. Included in the series are nursery rhymes, party games, Western songs, each with appropriate cut-outs.

STEAK KNIVES are finally available to go with silver flatware. Made by a manufacturer of cutlery, the blades are of razor sharp steel and handles are silver plated. The design is a simple one which will look equally well with modern or more ornate patterns. They will be available individually or in sets.

MASCULINE travel kit for commuters and vacationists is a slim plastic envelope equipped with comb, tooth powder, cologne, razor blades, shampoo, toothbrush, talcum powder, brushless shave and after-shave lotion. There is also a tin of headache pills and a razor. It's a compact, neat case—the kind of thing a man would keep in his desk or locker at the club.

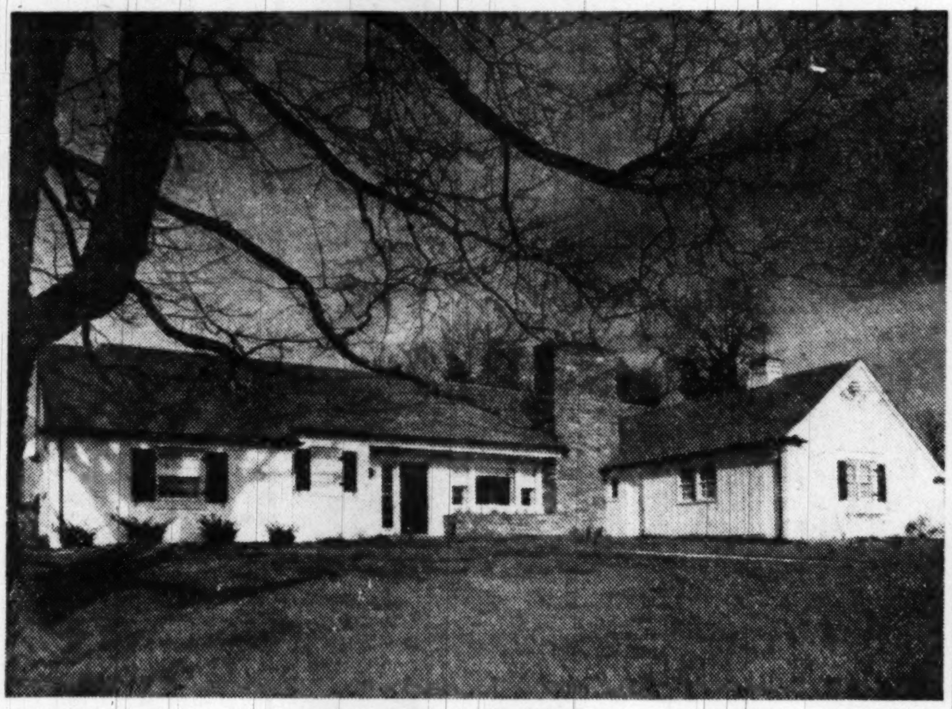
PIN-ON mechanical reels are made with an automatic pencil or a key ring attached at the end of a fine pull-out chain. The key holder should be especially convenient attached inside a handbag or wallet where it can be found quickly.

SPRING flowers arranged in one of the new brass or copper dishes with stationary stem holders stand firm and erect without danger of sliding about or tipping over. The removable pinpoint holder fits securely in a sunken section in the center. The dishes have dappled enameled linings and can be had in 8, 10, 16, and 20-inch diameters.

BONDING metals, plastics, leather, wood, glass, ceramics or rubber to themselves or to each other has been successfully done with an industrial product called Pliobond. The adhesive has recently been packaged for household use. It is strong, resistant to water and is permanently flexible, which makes it an ideal bond for flexible materials. Application can be done by a brush, spray, knife, roller, or by dipping.

Most of the above items are not yet on the market. For names and addresses of manufacturers send this coupon and a 3c stamp to the Home Institute, 230 West 41st st., New York 18, N. Y.

Architectural Design Awards Made



Design of this rambler, located at Saul and Elrod rds., Kensington, Md., brought an award to Johannes & Murray, architects, of 855 Pershing dr., Silver Spring. The home is owned by Edward C. Stevens, and was built by John McIntire, 2701 14th st. nw.

Winners of awards in the annual architectural design competition of Prince Georges and Montgomery County registered architects were announced Wednesday at a meeting of the Silver Spring Board of Trade.

Board President Einar B. Christensen made the awards. Present were more than 200 persons, members and guests of the Maryland division of the Washington Metropolitan Chapter, American Institute of Architects, and the Bethesda, Takoma Park and Prince Georges County Chambers of Commerce.

In five design classes, the following architects won awards and honorable mentions:

I. RESIDENTIAL

Acreage Jumps From $500 to $4,500

New York—(AP).—The new 30-year mortgage for veterans, authorized by the Federal Housing Law of 1950, has started a boom within a boom in home building. By broadening the market through bringing monthly payments down, it has started a rush to buy land for low-cost housing development.

In New York's suburban Long Island area, farmers are getting near-fabulous prices for acreage to be divided into building lots. One real estate broker tells of a potato farm that sold for $500 an acre in 1945 and now has been resold to home builders for $4500 an acre.

'Back-Breaking Work,' Says Chief Engineer

Longest U. S. Tunnel Opens This Month

By Saul Pett

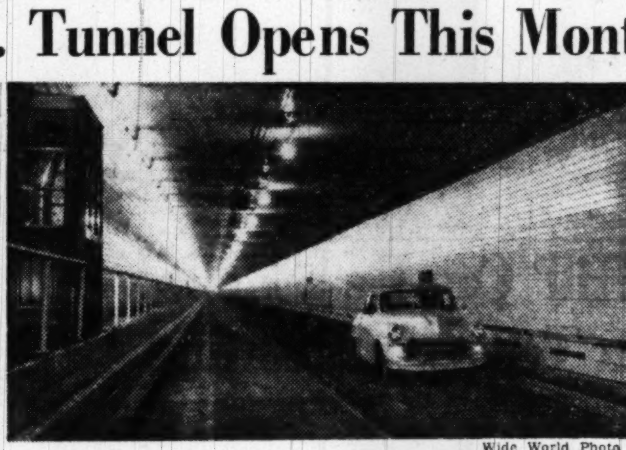
NEW YORK, May 6.—A boy dreams of being an engineer—of building monumental bridges and tunnels.

So the boy becomes an engineer and at mid-life, when his face has grown gaunt, lined and tired, he builds the longest vehicular tunnel in the United States.

"How do I feel?" sighed Ralph Smillie, chief engineer of the Brooklyn-Battery tunnel, which opens to motorists May 25. "I feel tired. When this is done, I want a long, long rest.

"Romance? Hell, there's more back-breaking work, more pesky details, than romance in this job. Poetry? I couldn't be poetic about building a tunnel and get the job done. Take the problem of coordinating contractors . . ."

The new, 9117-foot tunnel required 30 general contractors and several hundred sub-contractors, and all their work had to dovetail. Any delay in one could hold up the rest. A war could hold everything up, and did, from 1942 to 1945. Then there were strikes and material shortages and rising costs.



Wide World Photo

A section of the new, 9117-foot Brooklyn-Battery tunnel, longest vehicular tunnel in the country, which opens May 25. The new link under the East River betwen the tip of Manhattan and Brooklyn cost 80 million dollars

Cost $80,000,000

ORIGINALLY it was expected that the new link under the East River between the tip of Manhattan and Brooklyn would cost 50 million dollars. Instead, it will cost 80 million dollars when finished.

Smillie was explaining this when an aide came in with a problem.

"What do they mean, the paint will be extra?" the chief engineer asked, plainly irritated. "We contract for frames, that should include the paint job, too. Why, I never heard of . . ."

A reporter looking for poetry in creation slipped out of the engineer's office. He went to other offices and to the tunnel itself, and picked up enough impressive statistics to strangle a poet.

The Brooklyn-Battery Tunnel is actually two parallel east and west tunnels 15 feet apart. At their deepest point, they were gouged out of rock 115 feet below the surface of the river. Each tube has two lanes and together they are expected to handle 2800 cars an hour or about 16 million a year.

The tunnel is ventilated by 27 fans, which supply more than four million cubic feet of fresh air every minute, and by 26 exhaust air fans. The fan blades are about 8 feet across. Each fan is powerful enough to blow a man from Manhattan to Brooklyn except they're all shielded.

Man-Made Island

THE ventilation job required the creation of four buildings and one three-quarter-acre island. The island, which houses the center ventilation building just off Governors Island, was made in 30 feet of water by dumping a ring of stone under the river and then filling in the ring with sand.

The tunnel required 13,050,000 man hours to build; 813,000 cubic yards of excavation; 93,600 tons of cast iron to keep the rock and river out; 883,391 bolts; 265,700 cubic yards of concrete; 799,000 square feet of clay tiles on the walls and ceilings, or enough to tile about 6500 home bathrooms; 12,932 tons of structural steel; 6756 tons of reinforcing steel; 1871 miles of electric wire.

And the lives of eight men. The eight men were killed by falling rock and other accidents which are more or less routine in tunnel work.

As an underwater vehicular tunnel, the Brooklyn-Battery job is surpassed in length only by the Queensway Tunnel under the Mersey River between Liverpool and Birkenhead in England. The Queensway has one bore slightly more than 2 miles long.

The next longest tunnel in this country is the Holland, also a twinbore, which stretches 8557 feet under the Hudson River between New Jersey and New York. New York also has the third and fourth longest tunnels in this country—the Lincoln and Queens Tunnels. The Sumner Tunnel in Boston and the one connecting Detroit and Windsor rank fifth and sixth.

In construction and appearance, the new tunnel resembles the Lincoln and Holland Tunnels. About the only physical difference which will be noticeable to the motorist is the fluorescent lighting used in the interior.

Roosevelt Broke Ground

PLANS for the new tunnel were drawn by Ola Singstad, who designed the Holland and Lincoln Tunnels. Ground was broken by President Roosevelt on October 28, 1940 and actual construction began the next year, from both ends.

On September 16, 1948, sand hogs from both ends holed through. The two bores were no more than a "dime's width" off line, engineers report.

With the new link, New York City now has 58 bridges and four tunnels holding its five boroughs together and connecting it to the rest of the United States. Their construction represents a total investment of 622 million dollars.

Gardening And Homemaking

New Beans Really Have Class

By James H. Beattie

GIVE the plant breeder credit for our fine new varieties of beans! The new snap beans are really stringless and the limas are productive and of high quality. Beans should be planted in every garden, because no other vegetable gives a greater return for space occupied.

Our garden calendar calls for the first planting of snap beans during early May and for planting limas in the latter part of the month Today should be a safe time to plant snap beans, but the weather must be considered. Cold, heavy, wet soil is liable to cause the seeds to decay.

On the other hand, light-textured land with only sufficient moisture to cause germination, provides conditions favorable for the early planting of beans.

Other plantings should follow each other at 10-day to 2-week intervals until about the middle of August. It is an excellent plan to make frequent small-sized plantings, thereby insuring a continuous supply of tender, top-quality beans.

Limas More Tender

LIMAS, both pole and bush type, are distinctly hot-weather plants and should not be planted outdoors until the weather is warm. However, too late planting is liable to cause a crop failure The latter half of May is a suitable time to plant limas.

Starting the seeds indoors using quart berry boxes, large-sized plant bands, or 6 inch squares of upturned sod as containers for the soil and seed is usually an excellent plan. The plan is especially advantageous in a cold late spring such as the present season. The seeds should be planted in the containers two weeks before the probable date for moving them to the garden.

Use rich potting soil that will not bake or harden, and a location where a fairly high temperature can be maintained while the seeds are germinating. A sash-covered coldframe, or a sunshiny window or place where conditions can be kept in a reasonably constant balance is desirable. When the plants are moved to the garden, the boxes or plant bands should be slit and carefully removed without disturbing the roots. In the case of the sods these are merely set in the soil and buried.

Simple Needs

MOST varieties of pole beans will produce virtually throughout the season if protected from insect damage and given the ordinary cultural care. One and sometimes two plantings are usually sufficient for the season .

Soil having a balanced nutritional condition is needed for best results with beans. Sometimes, through the use of concentrated fertilizers, or animal manure, such as poultry litter, an unbalanced condition is created in the soil. This may cause blossom drop and failure to set pods. Soils of high fertility are successfully used for beans provided the various elements are present in suitable ratios.

Keep beans picked before seeds have begun to form.

Lime is usually injurious to beans, and soils that have been limed within the past season or two should be avoided. Best results often come from using a very light application of commercial fertilizer, an ounce or two to each foot of row, or hill, plus some additional superphosphate.

Use a fertilizer containing the so-called rare elements. Brands of this kind are available, but the ordinary three element fertilizer may be used after being reinforced by some of the special rare element preparations also available. Magnesium is often deficient in garden soils and it may be easily supplied by dissolving a pound of epsom salts in a sprinkling can of water and applying the solution to the bean rows or hills.

Recently startling results have been obtained in increasing the set of bean pods through the use of minute quantities of borax. Not over 4 ounces to each 1000 square feet of ground space. Caution, too much of this material may be injurious; use it carefully.

Space Savers

SAVE garden space by growing pole beans on garden fences, trellises and poles. The climbing sorts also yield over a longer period, thus avoiding the necessity for so many succession plantings.

Bush snap beans may be grown in rows from 24 to 28 inches apart with the plants from 2 to 3 inches apart in the rows or in rows of the same width, in hills spaced a foot or more apart, each containing two to three plants. Bush lima beans require a little more room in the rows or between the hills.

The hill method of planting simplifies cultivation, dusting and spraying and makes it easier to gather the crop. Pole beans are usually planted in hills about 36 inches apart. When grown on a fence or a trellis where they receive plenty of light, the hills may be as close as 18 inches apart. Always plant more seed than is theoretically required and thin to the desired stand after the plants have become firmly established.

Treat Seeds

BEAN seed, especially lima bean seed, should be treated with Arasan or Spergon, two well known fungicides, for the prevention of soil rots. Do not use fungicides that are not specifically recommended by the manufacturer for beans.

Fine bean varieties are abundant: Bush, green podded snap beans, Stringless green-pod, Tendergreen, Topcrop. Bush, wax-podded, Puregold and Brittle Wax. Bush lima beans, Burpee's Fordhook, and the Fordhook 242. Pole snap beans, white-seeded Rust Resistant Kentucky Wonder. Kentucky Wonder Wax. Pole limas, King of the Garden, Burpee's Best.

Select disease-resistant varieties whenever possible. Topcrop and Rust Resistant Kentucky Wonder are illustrations. Secondly, plant bush beans frequently and remove the plants before they have become badly infested with bean enemies, particularly the Mexican bean beetle. Many gardeners make the mistake of abandoning bean plants and leave them as breeding places for the latter insect. Such plants should be destroyed as soon as the best part of the crop has been harvested. Most important of all, carry on a constant warfare against this pest. Dusting or spraying with rotenone, pyrethrum or cryolite (the latter only before the plants have started to fruit) will control the Mexican bean beetle. DDT is ineffective against this pest.

Maryland Monopoly

Worm weed is almost a Maryland monopoly, the Commerce Department says, The plant produces an oil to stop hook worms and round worms. Its scientific name is chenopodium. Almost the total world supply is grown on a strip of land 5 miles wide and 20 miles long, mostly in Montgomery County.

Corn Isn't Elevated

'Hill' Can Be a Hollow In Terms of Planting

INSTRUCTIONS on the seed packets of cucumbers, bush and vine type squash, pumpkins, melons and some other crops that like plenty of space to spread out, usually say to "sow in hills."

Beginners would naturally suppose that this means in mounds, elevated above the surrounding surface. But in most sections of our country it means a point, as distinguished from a line, and is more likely to be hollow than a mound.

Only where the ground is so low that it does not drain well, or rainfall may be so heavy it runs off slowly, should garden hills be elevated.

Sweet corn is sometimes sown in hills, three plants to a hill, though the practice of growing this crop in drills is spreading.

Hills are lined up in a straight row, and spaced at equal distances apart. The usual practice is to dig a shallow hole with a trowel, mix plant food with the soil in the bottom, fill soil on top of this and then place the seeds, using a few more than the number of plants to be grown. This is to make sure that enough come up; if more grow than are wanted, the surplus ones are thinned out.

In well drained gardens, it may be advisable to leave a slight depression above the seeds, since most of the varieties sown in hills are tender, and are sown late when warm weather dries the soil and rains have become less frequent than in the early spring. A depression will concentrate the moisture from light rains and heavy dews, to speed up germination of the seed.

To facilitate cultivation, each hill should be marked by a stake until the seeds begin to grow. When the hills are accurately lined, cultivation between rows may be carried out with the same ease as between drills; and a hand-hoe can be used to keep down weeds in the row.

Tree Menace

Have a Care With That Lawn Mower

BEFORE you hire the neighbor's boy or the handyman to mow your lawn, you'd better prime him to be careful.

Nothing sounds less complex than pushing a lawn mower. Yet this simple garden tool is a lethal instrument to countless thousands of trees each growing season. Banged against small and thin-barked trees, the mower is apt to cause considerable damage, warns W. R. Williams, Davey tree expert.

Of course, the bad bruises may be caused by the earnest effort to cut grass as closely as possible to the tree. However, bark is likely to be sprung loose or so badly battered it dies and eventually falls away.

Decay enters the exposed wood and ever-growing cavities are formed. Caught in time, these can be properly cleaned out and filled. There are less costly and more practical approaches to the problem.

Be gentle with the lawn mower —or simply remove soil in an 8 to 12 inch area around the base of each tree. Pea-gravel filled in this circle provides a "safety" moat in which grass will not grow. Odds are the tree will then escape mower injury. At the same time, the back-straining job of hand-cutting the grass around the base will be eliminated.

Bulletin Tells When, How To Spray

TO assist home gardeners in producing fruit which is relatively free of diseases and insects, a bulletin containing spray schedules for fruit crops has just been published by the University of Maryland. "Sprays for Home Fruit Plantings" was prepared cooperatively by the departments of plant pathology, entomology and horticulture.

The bulletin contains spray schedules for apples, peaches, cherries, raspberries and grapes. The schedules have been simplified and many spray materials have been omitted so that the home gardener will not have to stock a large number of them.

Pests to be controlled, materials to be used, and recommended dates of application are presented. Amounts used in this bulletin are those required to produce five gallons of spray. Larger or smaller amounts may be prepared by using the materials in proportion.

According to specialists at the University of Maryland, spraying is necessary in order to maintain healthy trees, and good fruit cannot be produced unless insects and diseases are properly controlled. Spraying peach trees, both before and after they bloom, is important. Spraying for apple-scab control should be done during the prebloom and petal-fall periods. Early sprays are more effective than those applied later.

Copies of "Sprays for Home Fruit Plantings" (Bulletin 125) can be obtained from the county agricultural agent or from the Bulletin Room, Agricultural Extension Service, University of Maryland, College Park, Md.

City Decorating's Tough, But Certainly Necessary

By Ann Pringle

NO WONDER city people are interior decorator conscious. The decorator is their protector in a hostile world. In the country nature works to the advantage of the home dweller. In the city homes are carefully guarded from nature's influence, and the decorator has to find substitutes for it.

In the country you don't have to wear yourself down in a search for the right color schemes, furniture arrangements and accessories. If the room isn't perfect you can look out the window—it's prettier out there anyway. If colors look a bit faded or muddy the sunlight is there to soften them.

The well-situated country house has a warmth and protective glow a city home never seems to have. It's easy to think of home as a shelter when there are trees and wind and open spaces around it, but when the surroundings are stone and brick and concrete, home is just another inclosed space—more attractive than the nearby bar or subway station, but not exactly a symbol of protection.

Nothing looks more desolate than electric lights in the morning, but that's what most city people have to get up to. City lights at night have a stimulating effect, but a lit bulb at 8 a. m. is like a squeezed orange. I wonder if the men who built all those brownstone houses ever envisioned the day when they would be split east by west into small apartments that seldom see the light of day.

No wonder city dwellers pore over sample paint chips, wallpaper books and fabric swatches. No wonder they paint their walls yellow and white, hang mirrors opposite windows, plant pots of ivy on mantels and spread chintz flower gardens on sofas. I've got a better solution, though. My campaign slogan is a terrace and a skylight for every apartment, and I know just the little brownstone to start on.

JUMBO ROSEBUSH

Be Certain It Suits the Spot

If It's a Shrub, Buy Carefully

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

"PURCHASE in haste and repent at leisure" might be said in the matter of shrubs. A bargain in them is never a bargain if it is not a healthy plant and does not suit the spot in which it is to be placed.

Shrubs are a long-time garden occupant and when a mistake is made in the selection it is difficult to rectify. New gardeners in their haste to beautify their home grounds make many mistakes in buying and are notably soft-hearted about digging up and disposing of even the most glaring errors in landscaping.

Sometimes the study of botanical names seems a bit unnecessary but it does help one to distinguish different types of the same plant. Some of the botanical names are much less attractive than the common names but it is well to know both and, as we do with our families, call them by their "nicknames" at home and use their full name when dealing with business and the outside world. It would, indeed, be difficult to speak of our beloved little forget-me-nots as myosotis in the bosom of the family, but it is well to remember that myosotis is its botanical name which is used in connection with flowers of like coloring and form. The anchusa myosotis, for instance, when one sees it in the catalogue it is immediately identified with the variety which has the small forget-me-not-like bloom.

Take Forsythia

FORSYTHIA, one of our most popular shrubs, is one in which mistakes are frequently made. There are at least 10 varieties of forsythia. Some of these are more free-blooming than others and more hardy.

We frequently hear home owners complaining about their forsythia, which does not bloom as well as that of their neighbors. On inspection we have found that it is one of the varieties which is a scanty bloomer and has an unattractive habit of growth. It is difficult to tell this to the owner, who has wasted several years hoping that the plant will improve with loving care.

The best variety for this area is the forsythia intermedia spectabilis. This variety has blooms which cover every stem and is very graceful. It blooms early, is attractive all summer, and in the fall the foliage remains on until the heaviest frost, sometimes turning slightly bronze.

Forsythia suspensa is a weeping variety which is very useful as a vine to cover arches or to hang over rocks or walls. There is a very beautiful display in the gardens of Dumbarton Oaks, where it hangs like a golden curtain on the walls near the rose garden.

Spirea is another popular shrub in which mistakes are frequently made by new gardeners who simply order "spirea." They do not realize that besides the familiar white there are many others suitable for different needs and locations, and that it comes in other colors besides white. There is the charming pink—the Spirea billardi—which does not bloom until midsummer and is a very useful plant for that time when few shrubs are in flower. The S. Bulmalda, "Anthony Waterer," is another pink midsummer bloomer which is useful in spots where a small bushy plant is needed.

The two most popular spring blooming white varieties are thunbergi and the old-fashioned "Bridal Wreath" or the S. prunifolia, both of which bloom in early spring. The thunbergi is useful for planting in front of borders, as it seldom reaches a height of more than 4 feet. The foliage turns orange or scarlet in the autumn.

Later blooming is the S. van houttei, whose graceful sprays of white bloom make an effective planting in many places in the garden. There is much of this variety planted in Belle Haven, where it lines one or two of the streets.

"Mock Orange"

THE Philadelphus or "Mock Orange" is another shrub in which frequently much disappointment is caused by lack of fragrance in some of the newer forms. Originally this plant received its common name from its resemblance to the orange blossom and the similarity of fragrance. But some of the later varieties, while having a more spectacular bloom, have lost their fragrance in the improving process. The old-fashioned variety is the Philadelphus coronarius.

A more modern version, a hybrid of this and the P. Mychrophylla is the Lemonai. This small-leaved, small-flowered, has good fragrance and seldom grows to more than 5 feet. It is a useful selection for the smaller garden. A good double fragrant variety is the P. Virginalis.

These three shrubs have graced American gardens for many years and still deserve a place where they will give beauty each year—often while their more temperamental sisters will disappoint. They should be pruned after blooming. Extremely hardy, they often have to be "kept in bounds" in a small garden. A good time to do this is immediately after blooming, when they should be kept back several feet to allow for new growth which will bear next year's flowers.

In Mrs. Ralph Green's garden at 1021 Forest Glen rd., Silver Spring, Md., is a tulip with six blooms on one stem. Mrs. Green, who got her mixed Holland bulbs from Takoma Park Garden Club, is as much puzzled as anybody over this rarity

In Transplanting, Keep Shock at a Minimum

WHEN the amateur gardener sets out his garden plants which were started early in a greenhouse, hotbed or a window of his home, he wants every one to live. The way to insure this is to regard transplanting as an operation, with the plant as patient, and to make sure that it is done with a minimum of shock.

It shocks a plant to move it, and gives it a set-back, but there are advantages in giving it an early start, weeks before seed can be sown in the garden.

The plants that stand the operation best are stocky rather than tall, with strong stems and abundant roots. If grown in pots, plant bands or small flats, so you get them with roots undisturbed, so much the better. But even bare root plants can be transplanted with proper care.

If you grow your own plants, feed them a week before the operation with liquid plant food, and water them well the day before. Prepare a starter solution by hanging a cloth bag containing commercial plant food in a bucket of water and letting it soak overnight. Use four ounces of a 4-11-4 mixture or similar to each gallon of water. Or use a special soluble plant food, according to the manufacturer's directions.

Dig a hole large enough to hold the roots spread out, cover the soil about them. Taking care not to injure the roots, hold the plant in its place, then pour into the hole, over the plant roots, ½ pint of starter solution.

While the solution is in the hole, draw in the loose soil and firm it around the plant. The solution not only supplies nutrients, but puddles the soil about the roots, making it easy for the plant to take up water.

Roots of plants should not be pruned. Replacement of lost roots must take place before the plant can grow very much.

Tops of plants should not be pruned, as shown by research results. Pruning removes part of the "factory" which has to make the new plant material (carbohydrate) upon which growth depends. Pruning is likely to take off more foliage than necessary. Dead or partly dead tissue does no harm, though wholly dead leaves may be picked off.

Shading is good practice when plants are succulent, when soil and air are dry and when sun is hot. But good plants can usually be set successfully without shade.

DDT Sprays Restoring The Gladiolus to Favor

By Alfred Putz

GLADIOLUS are coming back strong now that the thrips, that destructive tiny pest, can be readily controlled with DDT. For years it looked as if home gardeners would have to give up growing them. They grew all right, but when the flowers appeared they were a sorrowful sight, blotched as if they had the measles.

Spraying with tartar emetic and brown sugar gave some control, but the extremely poisonous nature of this spray caused most home gardeners to shy away from it. Even planting thrips-free corms did not insure success because this pest is so widely distributed that the planting became reinfested as soon as the shoots had broken through the ground.

It still takes persistence to keep ahead of them, but what is a weekly spraying where so much beauty and satisfaction are concerned? The point is to start early—as soon as the shoots are three to four inches tall—and keep it up until the lowest buds on the spikes begin to show color.

Small Corms Good

MANY GARDENERS are under the impression that it takes the largest corms to secure first-class results. Nothing could be further from the truth if the smaller ones are planted in time. Even corms of thumbnail size (No. 5) will give good spikes if planted early enough. The spikes may not be quite so tall nor so abundantly set with florets as those from larger corms, yet they are far more attractive than any gladiolus you could have grown a generation ago.

Corms of medium size usually have a high crown and that is what the experts prefer. They have the best chance to develop one extra-fine spike instead of two inferior ones.

Give gladiolus good soil, the kind which would grow a bumper crop of beans or corn. That means perfect drainage. They simply do not tolerate excess moisture around the corms and roots, yet they need plenty of water all through the growing season. During the hot, dry summer season, water them copiously once a week.

Sunny Position

THEY ALSO need a sunny position—not just for an hour or two each day, but from early morning until late afternoon. Never plant in the same soil two years in succession.

Deep preparation of the soil is very important, but it must be done after it has lost its sogginess. Thrust the spade into the soil to the full length of the blade and turn over. Break up all lumps with the back of the spade as you go along. If at all possible let the soil settle for a week before final preparation.

Just before planting, apply a complete 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 fertilizer—4 pounds for each 100 square feet—and with a tooth cultivator work this well into the soil to a depth of about 5 inches. Never use commercial fertilizer in the furrows and not even as bands or ribbons alongside the rows. It will burn the roots. Bonemeal is another matter. This may be stirred into the bottom of the furrow at the rate of 3 pounds to each 100 feet of row.

Sort Varieties

IF YOU saved your own corms from last year it would be well to sort each variety into several sizes and plant them that way. This is done because the size determines the flowering season with the largest blooming first and the smallest last. Yet if you prefer a succession of blooms in one spot planting them unsorted will serve the purpose.

Badly diseased corms are a serious menace and never should be planted. Those with just a few minor disease spots should be soaked for from 6 to 8 hours in a 1:1000 bichloride of mercury solution. That is one tablet to a pint of water. Bichloride of mercury is a deadly stomach poison and must be handled with care.

Some rots respond more readily to a calomel dip (1 ounce to a gallon of water). You can get this from your druggist. The corms are placed in an open-mesh bag and dipped in and out of the solution for at least five minutes. Neither treatment offers complete control, but it helps.

Discard Liquids

DISCARD all poisonous liquids promptly after the treatment has been completed. Rinse the container and wash your hands well. After planting, give the hands another thorough scrubbing.

In soil of average consistency the No. 1 corms (1½-inch diameter) are covered 4 inches deep. Smaller ones need 3 inches; still smaller ones 2 inches. Two to 3 inches between the corms is ample where a mass effect in a single row is wanted. If planted in groups, space them about 5 inches apart in each direction. Grown in the cutting garden allow 2 feet between the rows.

Style Changes

Geometric A New Mode In Carpets

LEADING psychologists say people are constantly looking for change, and fashion, by creating something new, exciting and improved, answers this desire. Every year there are new developments and new styles in home furnishings.

Your wool floor coverings are just as important to your rooms as the right hat or purse is to your new ensemble. This year, carpet stylists are making it easier than ever to select the right carpet for your type of room.

For example, textured and sculptured carpets have been high style floor coverings for several years. Now this type of carpet has moved into the medium price group, and in quantity.

Are fashions in wool carpets and rugs only for modern rooms? No, indeed. If your heart belongs to provincial, either Early American, or French Provincial, there is a whole series of enchanting designs in a Countryside Collection for your selection.

Solid colors are definitely the top fashion note in wool floor coverings.

Texture weaves have gradually superseded the plain velvet broadloom type of carpeting. These ingenious, nubby-surfaced textures in two and three looped or looped and clipped pile compliment both light functional or satiny polished dark woods; and they resist dirt—show no footprints. High colors or even pastels in a texture weave are not a hazard, but a happy choice.

There are new fashions in figured carpeting, too. In addition to the Provincial numbers mentioned above, you will find smart figured carpetings with a modern flavor, including new geometric designs (a real innovation in carpet designing) and abstract designs.

Garden Club Activities

THE National Tulip Society is offering its certificate of merit and a society membership as prizes in the tulip show to be presented Saturday and Sunday by the Silver Spring Garden Club and the Takoma Horticultural Club. The show will be held in the auditorium of the Takoma Park Elementary School, Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw., from 4 p. m. to 10 p. m. on Saturday and from noon to 8 p. m. on Sunday.

Prizes will be offered for the outstanding tulip in the show, for the sweepstakes winner in the specimen classes, for the best arrangement, and to the exhibitor winning a blue ribbon for the first time in any tulip show. A. Kyle Goodman, chairman of the show committee, has invited all amateur gardeners to participate.

SEPTEMBER 9 has been chosen as the date for the second annual Alexandria Flower Show, to be sponsored by nine garden clubs in the area. The show will be held in the Alexandria Recreation Building, Cameron and Harvard sts., in Alexandria. Mrs. Frank E. Mann, president of the Yates Garden Club, will be chairman, assisted by Mrs. R. H. C. Beverley, jr., of the Hunting Creek Garden Club.

THE FLOWER MART of the Avondale Garden Club is to be held Friday, May 12, from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., on the Citizens Bank lawn, Eastern ave. and Queens Chapel rd. Many fine plants, garden supplies, delicious refreshments, baked goods, and fancy work will be on sale. "Grab Bags" and toys for children will be featured, and at 11:30 a. m. a Children's Fashion Show, by The Wayside Shop, will be a special attraction.

Proceeds will be used for the beautification of the community. The main project this year is the planting of a giant evergreen tree in Carson Circle, which is to be decorated and lighted each year as a permanent community Christmas tree.

Mrs. H. E. Darnell is chairman of this year's Flower Mart.

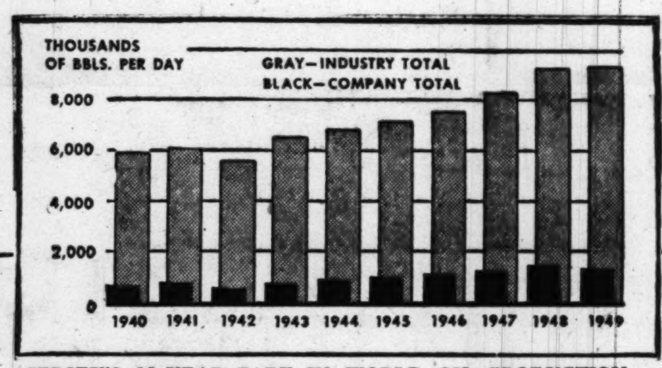
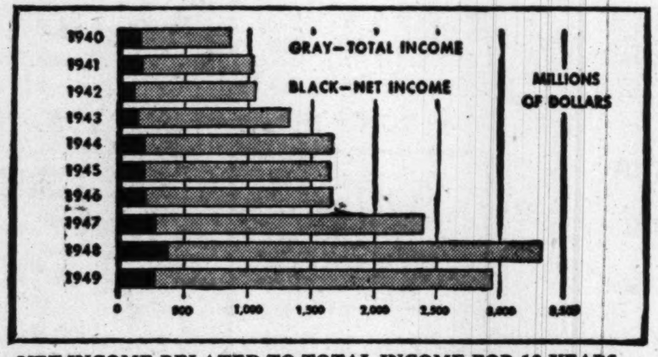
Behind: An eventful decade...

Ahead: Strength to meet the oil needs of free people

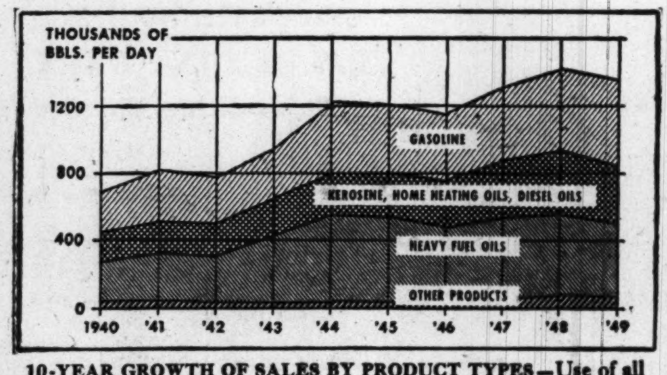
STANDARD OIL COMPANY (NEW JERSEY) REPORTS FOR 1949...



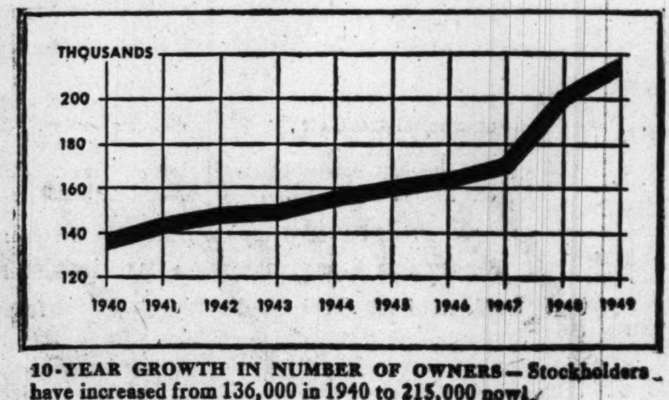
JERSEY'S 10-YEAR PART IN WORLD OIL PRODUCTION— Over the 10-year period Jersey's crude oil production has averaged 13 per cent of world production.



NET INCOME RELATED TO TOTAL INCOME FOR 10 YEARS— Under changing conditions, management and its co-workers have kept the business sound financially.



10-YEAR GROWTH OF SALES BY PRODUCT TYPES— Use of all types of products increased with the expanding economy and rising living standards.



10-YEAR GROWTH IN NUMBER OF OWNERS— Stockholders have increased from 136,000 in 1940 to 215,000 now!

THE 215,000 STOCKHOLDERS of Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) have just been sent the Company's 1949 Annual Report. Some highlights are given here.

The report covers the closing year of an eventful decade—a decade of violent action and change...of war, and war's results, of great shifts in people's living standards, and in their hopes and aims.

It was a decade which put the strength and adaptability of American business to great new tests. And proved that the American kind of business enterprise gets jobs done.

To the oil business, these last ten years brought demands far beyond any past experience.

Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) carried well its full share of this load. More new supplies of oil were found and developed than ever before. With them came more new processes, more new products, more new jobs and job opportunities. We took in more money, and paid out more—for wages, taxes, dividends, supplies—than in any previous decade in history. And in that ten years almost four times the amount paid in dividends was invested in new facilities—strengthening the business to meet war and post-war needs.

Like all sound American business, Jersey Standard got these results through skill, initiative, teamwork and the productive use of capital. Men who work in the business of their choice—free to think and make decisions—took actions which got results and got them in time.

In reporting for 1949, this Company offers its stockholders not just the report of one business year...With it comes the hopeful assurance of strength and ability to meet the growing oil needs of free people in free lands.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY (NEW JERSEY) AND AFFILIATED COMPANIES

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE 1949 REPORT:

(for the consolidated companies)

PRODUCTION—957,000 barrels daily total (11% less than 1948)

REFINING—1,287,000 barrels daily total (7% less than 1948)

SALES—1,363,000 barrels daily (slightly less than 1948)

RESEARCH—$21,400,000 spent on scientific projects (6 per cent more than in 1948)

CONSOLIDATED NET EARNINGS—$268,870,000 or $8.91 a share. This compares with $365,605,000 or $12.44 a share in 1948. Total income $2,934,686,000 (12 per cent less than 1948)

PARENT COMPANY NET EARNINGS—(from which shareholders' dividends are paid) $171,707,000 or $5.69 a share. This compares with $155,923,000 or $5.31 a share in 1948.

DIVIDENDS—$4.00 a share plus one share for each 50 shares held.

EMPLOYEE RELATIONS—Again no work interruption due to labor difficulties.

Glamor, Ltd.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD, circle, comes in the lively flesh this week to star on the Gayety stage in "Private Lives" by Noel Coward. Joan Crawford is the girl behind the blanket, starring on the Warner screen in a melodrama, "The Damned Don't Cry." Atop her famed, admired legs, Betty Grable sings in the Palace's Technicolored musical, "Wabash Avenue"

Slogan Rebuilt

'SOME Movies Are Better Than Ever'

By Richard L. Coe

"DAY BY DAY in Every Way, I Am Getting Better and Better." Anybody remember that earnest little line with which Emil Coue inspired the American individual to self-confidence right after World War I?

"Movies Are Better Than Ever" is today's cry from Hollywood. There's no doubt that whoever cooked up today's cheerful little earful was remembering the Coue cemetery whistle. Both ideas and slogans are the same thing.

While I'm inclined to expand the new slogan to read "Some Movies Are Better Than Ever" (always mentally adding that "some" in slanted script everytime I see the bold boast, the way some advertisements accent a word in handwriting), I'm willing to share Hollywood's bashful new pride in itself.

I do, for instance, think "On the Town" had a fresh, fluid approach that made a decidedly "better than ever" musical and I think there are comic ideas in "Adam's Rib," "When Willie Comes Marching Home" and "The Reformer and the Redhead" one can applaud. (In the latter, in case you're wondering, I refer to the legal assistant and the sharp criticism of politicians who try to appeal to all nationality groups, a neat sequence I'm sorry I forgot to stress in my review.) And one can honestly praise "The Heiress," "Intruder in the Dust," "Twelve O'Clock High" and other recent dramas.

Dictated Areas of Thought

HOWEVER, in both the slogan and too many of the newer films one finds rigidity rather than fluidity.

The effort to channel film into dictated areas of thought and form and, worst yet, to purposely discourage films which do not fit into these required molds is a sign of death in the movies as much as it would be in the human body. Life must flow where it will and nature cannot be constricted.

I am thinking, for instance, of the plot forms required by heaven alone knows who but which strangle pictures. What a sad lack of life there was in the Warner's recent musical, "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady." Here was an assembly line, Technicolored musical with everything working out exactly to formula.

Take Joan Crawford's current "The Damned Don't Cry." This, they shouted, gave Joan "Another 'Mildred Pierce'." Not a live, believable adventure, just a woolly carbon copy of a previous—and come to think of it, unexpected success, for at its time, it was a new step for Joan.

Take the insistence on the Other Woman angle in the new Plaza's "Salt to the Devil." Hollywood workers in an English studio evidently couldn't get out of the rut and so we have quite a different Geremio than Pete di Donato conceived for the picture's inspiration, "Christ in Concrete."

Take the fatal happy, romantic ending for "Champagne for Caesar," which started out by being a swell critique on the airlanes' giveaway shows. Take the inability to end "The Reformer and the Redhead" without the girl-gets-boy half-hour chase. Both those pictures were the victims of plot decay and another debilitating influence—the necessity that pictures, to carry a program, must last a prescribed length of time.

Seal of Approval Withheld

WORSE THAN the rigidity of expression in those pictures however is the violent opposition to fluidity expressed by the powerful Breen Office action which withholds from an exultant film, "The Bicycle Thief," the MPA seal of approval, meaning most theaters across the country cannot show it.

In this internationally praised Italian film occur two scenes the unpredictable Breen demanded be excised before it could be shown in 90 percent of the film houses across the land.

One was a brief shot of the hero's little son making his toilet against a Roman wall. It beautifully conveys the nervous anxiety of the child as his pushes himself beyond his years' endurance powers to help his father find the stolen and vitally important cycle.

The other was an amusing scene in a bordello, whither the thief has fled to escape his victim. It's a Sunday morning and the shock of madame and her girls at having their quarters invaded on a day which to them is as sacred as it is to other people is deliciously amusing. The child, by the way, is tenderly left at the door as, no doubt, he would be by a proper American father if, of course, America had such places, which naturally we don't. But the scene serves to underscore the cowardly nature of the thief. Imagine, the director seems to say, the indignity, the wretchedness, of a man who must seek sanctuary in such a place on a Sunday morning.

Both sequences, then, strike me as adding to the detailed mosaic which is the achievement of "The Bicycle Thief."

Called Best Movie of Year

WHAT MAKES the Breen action against these two scenes the more curious are two other points. That celebrated little statue of a Brussels lad, who'd been lost and whose father vowed he'd erect a statue in the exact position in which he was found, has been shown on all the screens of America in travelogues. In "Cheaper by the Dozen" you watch the Clifton Webb brood head happily for the woods during a long car ride.

And how about Ona Munson's hangout of "Gone With the Wind," Elsa Lanchester's nest in the soon-to-be-seen "Buccaneer's Girl," the upper regions of almost any gambling den in any Western, or Claire Trevor's past in anything from "Stagecoach" to "Key Largo"?

The other point is that the National Board of Review, which called "The Bicycle Thief" the best picture of last year, approved the picture, as did the Roman Catholic Legion of Decency, and official censors of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. With these okays, Breen's turndown hints that honest competition is not welcomed by the Motion Picture Association of America.

Rigidity of Thought

BUT THAT the point of both these scenes, in themselves has been lost on the powerful Breen is simply another indication of the rigidity of thought we've been discussing. If the eye cannot see beyond the merely surface, physical qualities of such scenes, how can we seriously think that those who control the movies the majority of Americans see have in them anything but rigidity of thought and purpose?

And if control demands rigidity in others as well as in our own product, how can one expect the promise of life implied in this year's little slogan?

Some movies, indeed, are better than others. But they got that way by scrambling out of the pattern, off the factory belt. And in their fluid, imaginative use of expression lies the true force which alone can keep any art—or commerce—alive.

Farrell Does Theater Comeback After Dropping Cool 300 G's

YOUR New York Correspondent:

The Broadway Lights: Zillionaire Anthony Farrell, who invaded the main stem from Albany, N. Y. (only a few seasons ago), was rated No. 1 chump. He lost over $300,000 on his first two shows . . . Farrell now is the proprietor of the click "Texas Li'l Darlin';" he has a huge chunk of the walloping hit, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and, at the last moment purchased 50 percent of "Tickets, Please," in which the Hartmans romp at the Coronet . . . The Met Opera touring troupe returned to Atlanta, where one of the cast was murdered last year. With that unsolved crime haunting the wings, they played to standees and rave notices . . . Pittsburgh prefers Mae West. Her "Diamond Lil" broke the year's record there; the mayor made a speech closing night and after Mae left town they started tearing down the theater to build a skyscraper . . . Of the 26 shows on the boards this week only a quintet did capacity biz. "Cocktail Party," "Blondes," "Member of the Wedding," "The Consul" and "South Pacific. The other 21 had a total of $146,587 of empty seats.

STAIRWAY to the Stars: Eileen Barton, the new song queen (her weekly wage wasn't over $300 last January) will earn over $100,000 before 1950 fades. She crashed the Broadway heavens with her version of "I'da Baked a Cake" . . . The only new entry due is "The Liar," which divided the critics in Philly. Some called it a dilly—others a dully . . . The most popular superlative showered on "Peter Pan" at the Imperial was "enchanting" . . . Five critics used it. Runner-up was "charming" . . . Variety's eyebrow-raiser: "The Innocents" (a spooky-duper) has six actors and 15 stagehands . . . The "Oklahoma" angels have received $4000 for every $100 invested . . . Show business is different on the West Coast. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce is putting coin into the musical: "My L. A." . . . Did the same with "Song of Norway" and still draws royalties from it . . . The full monicker of Thailand's songwriting monarch is: Somdet Phra Chao Hau Phumiphon Adulet . . . (Jes' call him Sam.)

THE Cinemagicians: Most fascinating film short is named "Journey Into Space," a trip around the universe. Venus, Mars, the moon and all points skyward . . . Margaret Sullavan's tenderness in "No Sad Songs for Me" opens the tear-ducts . . . Sam Goldwyn has spunk. He informed newsmen in Paris that he'd have no objection to starring Miss Bergman in a film. "I'm only interested," he said, "in the professional ability of stars, not their personal tragedies" . . . The Loretta Young movie called "Fury in the Sky" is an oldie made 10 years ago under the title: "Ladies Courageous" . . . "The Scandals of Clochmerle" (ripped to tatters by most of the film critics) is in its sixth week at the Ambassador . . . All backward glances aren't sad. Silent Flicker Star Beverly Bayne has one of the most attractive ranch-type homes near Pleasantville, N. Y.

Bales Opens Annual Music Fete Tonight

By Paul Hume

ONE of the country's important music festivals opens in Washington tonight.

Under the direction of Richard Bales, the National Gallery of Art opens its seventh annual American Music Festival. One work of unusual promise will receive its world premiere, and five pieces of real note will be heard in Washington debuts.

The world premiere is of Ned Rorem's violin sonata, which he describes as "in four scenes." Rorem is returning to this country after study in Europe. He worked there under the Gershwin Memorial Fellowship. Two years ago a great song of his, The Lordly Hudson, was sung on one of the Gallery Festival programs. That song later won an award as one of two outstanding songs published in 1948.

The five local premieres are of music by Lukas Foss, Spencer Huffman, Walter Piston, David Diamond and Parks Grant.

Concert of Sonatas

IN ADDITION, music played on these programs in preceding festivals will be brought back for repetitions. This is an important item in a day when conductors too often fight to give the first performance of music they then proceed to neglect.

Bales has made an interesting change from former years in planning the sonata recital, a tradition of his festivals. Instead of a piano recital such as we have had for the past several years, there will be a concert of sonatas for violin and piano. That program opens proceedings this evening.

The artists are Maurice Wilk, violinist, with Philip Fradkin, pianist. They will play, in addition to the Rorem sonata, a work by Walter Piston, a Sonatina of Gail Kubik, and a set of Variations with Capriccio by Norman Dello Joio. It promises to be one of the season's most rewarding evenings.

Songs Saturday

ANOTHER innovation of the festival is found in the day of the second concert: SATURDAY. Note the unusual day and time: 3 p. m., next Saturday afternoon, the annual American songs recital will be sung by Harold Ronk, baritone, with Theodore Schaefer, pianist. It will be sung, not in the Garden Court, but in the acoustically preferable Lecture Hall on the lower floor. Space is limited, so arrive early.

Ronk's program includes music

Tallu Finds Road Audience Hardiest of the Species

By Tallulah Bankhead

WILL ALL those in the congregation who know where I was for weeks and weeks since I last appeared in Washington's environs please stand. You don't have to show your box-tops, nor do you have to whip-up a 30 word essay. Like a couple of clews? Well, I wasn't home, and I wasn't in jail. You don't care where I was? Whether you do or not you're going to find out.

At the beginning of the 1949-50 season Jack Wilson prevailed upon po' li'l me to make a tour of my native Southland. I agreed, but I stipulated that on one-nighters he furnish me with a private Pullman. He consented.

So, in October I started out of Richmond, Va., wandered through Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro and Charlotte, N. C., then Spartanburg and Columbia, S. C., Augusta, Savannah and Atlanta, Ga., over to my native Alabama into Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile, where I appeared two days before Christmas. So, I spent Christmas Eve in New Orleans, I was there for New Year's Eve too, woosh! Then Texas—Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Dallas. Back northward again through Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri and Indiana.

In all I added 26 weeks this season to the 94 weeks that I had already appeared in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" since 1947.

Storm in Albany

DURING late January, I played Utica, N. Y., where the temperature was 17 below, and tumbled into a sleeper to get to Albany, N. Y., where a blizzard was raging. But that wasn't too tough, until I learned the next day that my private Pullman could not be parked at Schenectady and I would have to bus it over from Albany during the afternoon and back to Albany again that night after the show.

That wasn't the worst of it, however. I, or none of the others in the company, could get a room in the town because there was a teachers' convention. I thought I was through with school teachers years ago. Fortunately Mr. Pullman managed to get a sleeper on the tracks at Albany at about 2 a. m. and we piled into it after sitting around the station for some time. The next morning we got into Syracuse on our way to Ithaca. This was another case of a bus jump, out of Syracuse down to Ithaca and back again the same night.

The topper came the following week when, after playing Binghamton, N. Y., we had to jump to Allentown, Pa. The coal strike was on, remember? When the Allentown booking was made originally the Jersey Central was running a train between Binghamton and that point. But the train was among those that were canceled. So it was a sleeper to Scranton, Pa., a trolley line from Scranton to Wilkes-Barre, and then another train up to Allentown. I made it, but I was limping!

Since 1947, when I first revived "Private Lives," I, as a paid gypsy, have been traipsing about the country in thunder, lightning and rain, through snow, sleet and sirocco.

After playing 26 weeks in Chicago, finishing early in 1948, I started on a tour to the Pacific Coast and wound up in Los Angeles. In between I played in Joplin, Pueblo, Sacramento, Tulsa and a lot of other towns known only to Rand McNally and the census taker. There were even four weeks in San Francisco and one night in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

This cross-country trek was followed by eight months on Broadway at the Plymouth Theater. This rounded out the first 94 weeks of playing Amanda Prynne.

The Road Dead?

AS A result of my extensive travels—a good 30,000 miles as no crow ever flew—I'm prepared to defy those ghoulish prophets of doom who are forever wailing that "the road," in its theatrical sense, is dead. The road isn't dead. It's merely shamming in an attempt to escape from the assault and battery it

The Whammy

Lady Proves Jonah for Video Show

By Sonia Stein

I MAY as well tear up my little press card which accords me "guest privileges in the New York and Hollywood studios and playhouses of CBS during rehearsal and 'on the air' hours." I'm sure it'll never again get me into the "CBS Television News" bailiwick, anyway.

The night I watched the staff put the show together in New York, they encountered two disasters—one which upset a nine-month run of luck and another which shattered all precedent for the show.

In the first instance, the show was to open with a couple of minutes of film flown from Washington. Said film, shots of the Owen Lattimore hearings on Capitol Hill, were flown up but got lost somewhere along the line, precipitating something of a crisis in preparing the show. This was the first such loss en route in lo those many months.

The other incident happened on the show. Somebody accidentally punched the wrong button on the control panel, so that the commercial patter about rockets and automobiles was momentarily accompanied by a grim-faced character who had been illustrating a news story. Then, in another quick and misguided switch, the commercial was momentarily accompanied by a shot of Newscaster Doug Edwards throwing his hands in the air in imitation of Director Don Hewitt who was throwing his hands in the air in futile indignation over the first "bobble." Quite a night, that.

Edwards, however, is not easily upset by such things. After all, he is the man who was on duty the night CBS was televising an Air Force wing ding from Madison Square Garden when mechanical difficulties threw the show off the air just as Gypsy Rose Lee was beginning her cleaned-up-for-television strip tease.

Nobody would believe that the sequence wasn't being censored out by a queasy network—even Edwards thought they'd thrown him a curve. But he got hold of the offending tube later, found it had burned out and has the tube still—as a souvenir of what he called then "the strangest coincidence in the history of television." And he says he thinks that statement will stand for many years to come.

Uneasy Times

ON THIS news show (WOIC, 7:30 p. m.), which has to be pieced together in haste, Edwards and Hewitt have had some un-

Horton to Play 'On Approval' At Shirlington

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON will return to the stage of the Shirlington Theater for a week's run in "On Approval" a week from tomorrow night.

The Frederick Lonsdale comedy concerns a bachelor who courts a young widow. Others in the cast will include Matthew Smith, Paula Houston and Margaret Maginnis.

Horton's success several weeks ago on the stage of the Virginia film house in "Springtime for Henry" prompted the return engagement in the new vehicle, which he already has played some 500 times up and down the Atlantic seaboard.

There will be no performance Thursday night, Horton's TV show taking him to New York that evening. There will be matinees Saturday and Sunday, the 20th and 21st. The price scale will be $1.20 and $2.40 for evenings, $1 and $1.50 for matinees. Seats are now on sale at the theater box office. For further information call OVerlook 2500.

'Brigadoon' Heading Here

NOW playing a return New York engagement at the City Center, Cheryl Crawford's "Brigadoon" will open a three-week run at the Gayety Theater two weeks from tomorrow, May 22.

This musical story of a small Scottish village which wakes from its sleep only one day each century is the Nation's longest-run play now on the boards. After 580 performances in New York, it took to a national tour and continued through two summers on the road.

"Oklahoma!", though still on the road, took a two-month breather last summer and so, strictly speaking, lost its hold of the unbroken-run record of current attractions.

Heading the cast after playing the part in London for a season is Phil Hanna. Virginia Oswald, Susan Johnson, James Jamieseon, Virginia Richardson, Peter Turgeon and Jeff Warren are others in the large cast.

Alexandria Little Theater Offering 'Tangled Web'

Alexandria's Little Theater will present an original three-act mystery-comedy, "The Tangled Web," tomorrow and Tuesday nights at the city's recreation center, Harvard and Cameron sts.

Alden H. Ryan is the author of the play, which includes a seance, a murder, an Oriental medium and a purloined masterpiece.

Paul Carmi, Doris Buck and Helen Doniphan head the cast, which further includes Mildred Ryan, Gene Barnwell, Joe Ball, Mae Leisinger, Sigsbee Gilham and John Watson.

FROM REAL LIFE: Bonita Granville, as a Hungarian girl tortured by the Reds, in "Guilty of Treason," the film about Cardinal Mindszenty which arrives Wednesday at Keith's

Olney Opening Set for June 16 With Paulette in Shaw Play

THE Olney Theater will open its annual summer season of stage plays on Friday night, June 16, with Paulette Goddard starred in Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

Mail orders for single or subscription performances are now being received care of Olney Theater Box Office, Jordan's music shop, 13th and G sts. nw. Such orders should be accompanied by stamped return envelopes and check or money order.

Price scale for evenings will be $1.80, $2.40 and $3. The matinee scale will be $1.20 and $1.80. The subscription plan provides that the same seats may be reserved for the same evening each week, payable a week in advance.

Miss Goddard's engagement will run through Saturday, June 24, with matinees on Sunday, June 18; Wednesday, June 21 and Saturday, June 24.

A tentative list of other attractions for the summer will be announced shortly.

Westmoreland Players Offering 'Dear Brutus'

James M. Barrie's "Dear Brutus" will be presented by the Westmoreland Players for a four-night run opening a week from Wednesday.

Directing the fantasy is Bettina Schmalbach, well known in theatrical and radio circles. Robert Pomeroy, newly elected president of the club; Beth Walton, Mort Franklin, Janet Burleigh, Marjorie Watson, Frances Balian, Dolores Harrison, Connabell Shaw, jr., and Peter Davis are among those in the cast.

Straw Hat Impresario Looking for Plays

Tommy Brent, who is presenting his Straw Hat players in a 10-week series of summer stock in McLean, Va., beginning in June, is seeking local playwrights with manuscripts ready for production.

Brent makes no promises, but he's looking for two new plays of merit and invites writers to submit scripts to him care of the Straw Hat Players, McLean, Va.

He also adds he'll welcome correspondence with anyone interested in establishing his company in the suburb.

Lowe Looking For New Songs

WWDC's Jackson Lowe is looking for original songs written by amateur song writers in the Washington area.

The contest is open to anyone except professional song writers. It's a part of the national disk jockey contest for new songs.

Arrangements have been made for the winner of the Washington contest to have his song published by the Acme Music Corp., an affiliate of Broadcast Music, Inc., of New York. The Star Record Co. will record the winning song with a name band and the song will be premiered over WWDC and on a nationally sponsored radio program.

The winner will receive a regular song writer's contract with the usual royalties.

Group to Offer New Play at Jewish Center

A NEW Washington drama group presents its first offering tomorrow night when the Twentieth Century Players produce a new play by S. Lee Pogostin, "Period, Period, Period."

The group will make its bow on the stage of Cafritz auditorium in the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw. Plans are afoot, should success greet the venture, for a theater of the group's own. It's hoped to present a play each month with Washington actors.

Officers of the group are Robert B. Miller, jr., president; Christopher Kafralos, vice president, and David L. Gindes, secretary-treasurer.

Pogostin, Washington-born, is a former George Washington University student, now studying at the Institute of Contemporary Arts. While in the armed forces during the war he wrote radio scripts.

The cast of four in "Period, Period, Period" includes Henry Oliver, Wes Jones, Deene Barcell and Marion Dickens.

Seats are on sale downtown at the Stabler Agency in Brentano's and at the Willard Hotel Agency.

Conrad Again to Run For California House

Hollywood (AP).—Hollywood's actor-legislator of the moment, Charles J. Conrad, says he will be a candidate for reelection as State assemblyman from the Fifty-seventh (Hollywood) District.

Conrad has just completed a role in "Peggy" at Universal-International studios.

NEARING FINALE: Valli and Joseph Cotten in Carol Reed's chiller about the Vienna black-market, "The Third Man," in its final showings at the Playhouse, zither and all

Marc Daniels, director of CBS-TVs "Ford Theater," relaxes by swinging on a trapeze rigged in his New York apartment.

'Lucky Day,' C. U. Musical Entering Final Week

"Lucky Day," Catholic University's annual musical, will continue into its final week in the campus theater tomorrow evening, ending its run Saturday night. Edward Cashman wrote the music to Leo Brady's book and lyrics. In the cast are Meredith Schoonover, Rickie Rudel, Virginia Bradley and Louis Camuti.

ON RECORDS

I WANNA BE LOVED—Andrews Sisters-Gordon Jenkins, Decca: Back in the 1930's, theater nightclubs were all the rage on Broadway. They gave the night life lovers a chance to sit at a table and spend a lot of money; and at the same time, see an elaborate revue produced on a stage, the same as if they'd been sensible and gone to a theater instead. Billy Rose operated one of the most elaborate of these establishments, the Casino de Paree. This song was written for one of the Casino shows back in 1932.

Its composers were previously responsible for a heated ballad whose passions have proved perennial, "Body and Soul." The lyrics of "I Wanna Be Loved" show, to put the matter delicately, the same sense of dedication as those of its celebrated predecessor. "I Wanna Be Kissed," sings a happily inspired young lady, "until I tingle, . . . embrace until our heartbeats intermingle, wrong or right"; and again, "I wanna be thrilled to desperation, . . . with every kind of wonderful sensation." The Casino de Paree must have been a lively place.

Someone with a long memory recently hunted up "I Wanna Be Loved" in the archives and turned it over to the Andrews Sisters as a successor to "I Can Dream, Can't I." The record proves once again that Patti Andrews can communicate the vocal equivalent of a lifted eyebrow; the Gordon Jenkins choral background is superlative; and the song should shortly become almost as popular as its subject.

FROM A DISK JOCKEY'S MEMO PAD: Mitchell Parish, aged 49, who wrote the words to "Stardust," "Deep Purple," and more than 1000 other songs, has gone back to school, and is studying for a bachelor of arts degree at New York University. He has just been elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year, and everyone is predicting a brilliant future for him . . . On the other hand, two song writers from collegiate circles, Phil Springer and Dick Adler, the writers of the current Columbia Varsity Show, are also responsible for "Teasin'," the cute new song which Connie Haines sings so well (Coral) . . . Most of us may have thought they were new songs, but "Are You Lonesome Tonight"?, recently recorded by Blue Barron (MGM), was a big hit in 1926; and "Stars Are the Windows of Heaven," which the Andrews Sisters sing with Guy Lombardo (Decca) was written in 1925. Yet "The Old Piano Roll Blues," which sounds as though it dates back several decades, was actually written last year . . . Like "La Vie En Rose," which later became "You're Too Dangerous, Cherie," "Count Every Star," the beautiful record by Hugo Winterhalter (RCA Victor) was originally a French popular song . . . It's impolite to talk about a lady's age, but Mabel Wayne has been writing hits for a long time. She composed "Ramona" nearly 30 years ago, "A Dreamer's Holiday" just last season, and now is finding growing favor for her newest work, "On the Outgoing Tide." Jo Stafford's Capitol record is among the best.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Record Player

Tourel Does Great Disk Of Ravel, Moussorgsky

RAVEL: Sheherezade. Also: Moussorgsky: Songs and Dances of Death. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, with orchestra under Bernstein, and with Bernstein playing the piano. Columbia ML 4289. $4.95.

Look out! Here come the superlatives:

What shall I say of such a record? Go and buy it—go and buy it quick!

It is flawless in every respect; great music, great performance, great recording. It is the first modern recording of the tremendous Moussorgsky cycle, and one of two recent versions of Ravel's scintillant score.

We have not yet heard Suzanne Danco's Ravel songs, and therefore cannot compare them. But they could not surpass Tourel's—at best they might match them.

Take the Ravel: Three songs—L'Asie, La flute enchantee, and L'Indifferent. Poems are by Tristan Klingsor, full of Oriental languor and exotic color. The orchestra is full of the gorgeous sounds of Daphnis and Chloe.

As for Tourel—we have never heard her voice emerge from any records with the startling clarity and subtle beauty it finds for this music. Her curving of every line and word is magnificent. Whether she speaks of "wanting to see men die of love and of hate" or seduces the "dark-haired one who sings under my window," she is anew the mistress of song for whom we know no equal today.

And in the Moussorgsky songs which she sang here in February there is a dark power and sweep to match the greatness of the songs. If a man might be preferred in the outer songs, "Trepak" and "Field Marshal Death," then a woman has the advantage in both the Serenade and Lullaby. And no man but Kipnis could hope to match this performance.

Hearing the set in Russian, with the supreme rhythmic command which is but one of Tourel's wizardries, illuminates its fundamental scope.

Nor can we find anything but highest praise for Leonard Bernstein in his masterful conducting of Ravel, with its lights and shadows. Then upon reversing the record we hear him play the accompaniment for the songs with striking vigor and style.

If any record surpasses this one as our candidate for the greatest record of 1950, we shall have a mighty year indeed. I cannot think what it would be. And all for $4.95.

POULENC: Bal Masque. Chamber Orchestra, with Warren Galjour, baritone, under Edvard Fendler. Esoteric ES 2000. $4.85.

Bassoon, violin, cello, piano, oboe, clarinet, trumpet and percussion join the baritone for this fascinating piece.

It derives from Poulenc's best and slightest veins. There are fine passages of descriptive color and sound, as in the lines about Minerva. Then, without warning, it plunges into some night club routine of the lowest kind. It is a wonderful sounding recording, with Galjour doing a superb job in the music he gave its American premiere.

Not up to the level of Le Bestiaire, Tel jour, telle nuit, or some of the individual songs, this is still a good sample of the unique art of Francis Poulenc.

—HUME.

Students Selected In Bank Contest

The following students were chosen for the semifinals in the Hamilton Bank High School Musical Talent Contest.

Vocalists: Joan Allen, Holy Trinity; Constance Plain, Western; Arthur Pilkerton, Gonzaga; Marjorie Scudder and Claire Stanton, Eastern; Alan Milofsky, Roosevelt; Williams Graham, Coolidge.

Instrumentalists: Walter Boss, trumpet, McKinley; Alfred Sylvester, trumpet, St. Johns; Marion Greene, organ, McKinley; Clive Worsley, accordion, McKinley, Blythe Thompson, flute, Wilson; Raymond Garcia, Eastern; pianists: Dorothy Kemp and Fan Nell Daniels, Dunbar; Maria Ros, Holy Cross Academy; Louis Johnson, Armstrong; Jimmy Geralis, Roosevelt.

The finals will be held next Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall, and will be open to the public.

Inexpensive Book Does Fine Job

CHAGALL, with notes by the artist and introduction by Michael Ayrton. (Pitman; $1.95.)

ONE of four new additions to the "Pitman Gallery," this book on the Russian-born Chagall seems to me to illustrate very well the sort of service an inexpensive art book can supply . . . giving an idea of the orginal color in the reproductions and an interpretation of the painter's meaning in our time. Ayrton is particularly felicitous in his introduction.

The other books, each with 10 or 11 color photos, are "Van Gogh," by Philip James; "Cezanne," by Adrian Stokes, and "Royal Portraits," by R. H. Wilenski, who, though editor of the series, is least helpful in his introduction, which is too anecdotal.

City Prepared To Observe Music Week

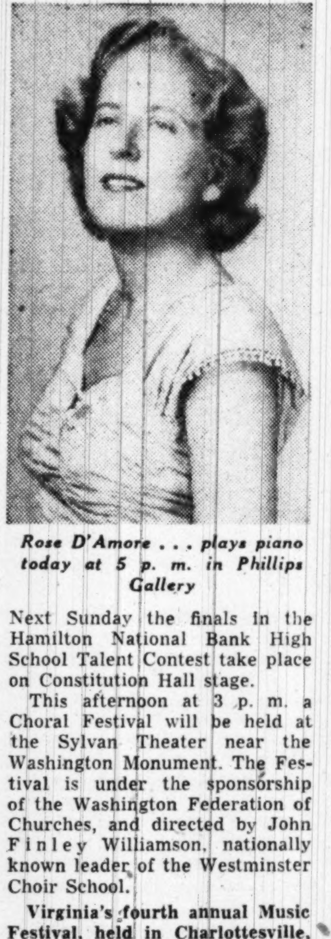
MUSIC WEEK opens today.

By presidential proclamation, the twenty-seventh National Music Week swings into action, to continue through next Sunday.

In his letter to T. E. Rivers, secretary of the National M. W. Committee, President Truman said:

"It seems particularly appropriate during the twenty-seventh annual observance of National Music Week that this year we should become better acquainted with our own music as we have in past years acknowledged our indebtedness to music of other lands."

WASHINGTON will mark Music Week by opening its fifth annual American Music Festival tonight at the National Gallery.



Rose D'Amore . . . plays piano today at 5 p. m. in Phillips Gallery

Next Sunday the finals in the Hamilton National Bank High School Talent Contest take place on Constitution Hall stage.

This afternoon at 3 p. m. a Choral Festival will be held at the Sylvan Theater near the Washington Monument. The Festival is under the sponsorship of the Washington Federation of Churches, and directed by John Finley Williamson, nationally known leader of the Westminster Choir School.

Virginia's fourth annual Music Festival, held in Charlottesville, opens Thursday in Scott Stadium, with the Norfolk Symphony orchestra, chorus, and soloists.

The second elementary music night in Arlington's Music Festival comes on Friday night, at 8 p. m., in Washington-Lee High School Auditorium. Participants come from North Arlington.

THEODORE SCHAEFER, who is playing next Saturday afternoon for Harold Ronk, baritone, in the National Gallery, has returned to the National Presbyterian Church, where he has held the post of organist-choirmaster for 10 years. He has been on seven months leave of absence.

Reuniting Art and the Church

By Jane Watson Crane

OUR museums are full of the fruits of the union between the Church and the Fine Arts, which resulted in some of the greatest works of art which have come down to us from the past. But what of the present? The contemporary alliance is between the Church and the Commercial Arts. The churches of the land are full of the fruits of this union, and the museums are devoid of them.

How to bring about a closed association between the creative artists of today and the churches? There have been many people pondering this question and some constructive action with this end in mind is already under way. The most organized is perhaps the Liturgical Arts Movement originating in New York. The exhibits of religious art held last season at Catholic University and the Barnett Aden Gallery under Catholic auspices were a part of it.

Now at the Arts Club Dr. H. L. McGill Wilson, who is himself working on an index of religous art in America, has assembled a small show of works relating to or intended for the church. These had their first display in the Church of the Ascension and St. Agnes here in the District. He hopes that the exhibit will go from the club to other churches and that this initial effort is only the start to bring the church and the artists closer together in this country.

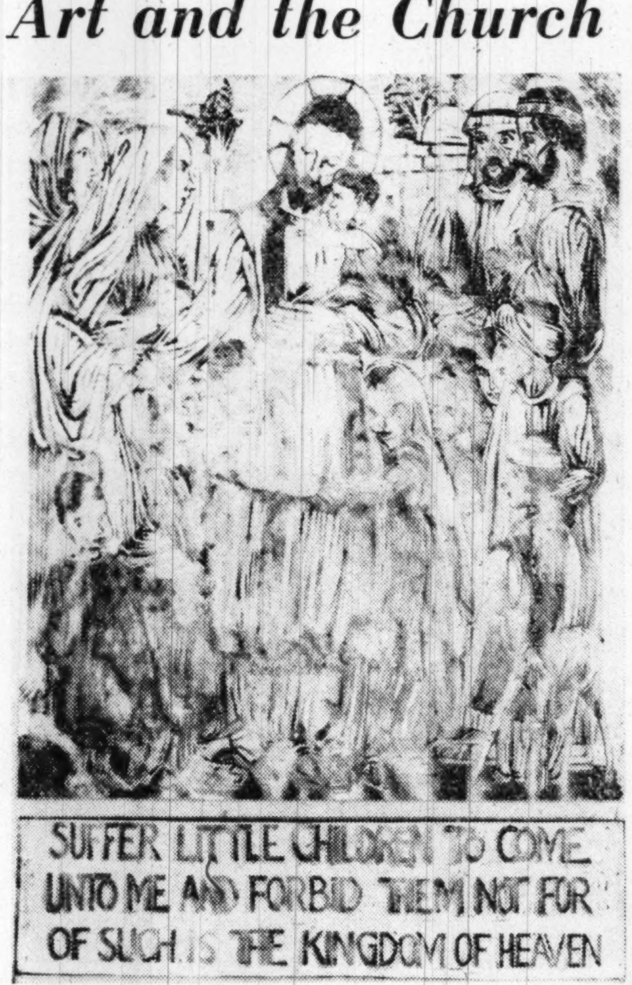
Favors New Talent

ASSISTING him in his enterprise were Mrs. Maximillian Elser, jr., president of the Village Art Center of New York who sent down a number of paintings and sculptures; also several local artists, clergy and laymen. The center, which aims particularly to give new talent a chance for recognition, has been exhibiting permanently in two churches in New York City as well as in banks, hotels, cinemas and restaurants. It does not specialize in religious art, but certain works applied and are a great addition to the exhibit here. Alfred Van Loan is an outstanding sculptor associated with the group, notable are small heads by Sommerburg, a serenely simple carving of "Ruth" by Nora Hertz, "Patriarch," a strong head in oil painted by Eleanor Lockspeiser, and "Madonna of the Empty Arms" by Allen Townsend Terrell.

Allan Rohan Crite, a Negro artist, worked for years for a religious commercial art firm, and has only recently won recognition on his own. Here in Washington his work has been shown at Howard University and at the Barnett Aden Gallery.

The Arts Club exhibits a number of sketches in color for some of his big works and there is a working draft of the fine mural "The City of God" just completed for St. Augustine's Church in Brooklyn. His "Stations of the Cross" will not please those whose eyes have become attuned to the superficial, the sentimental, or the artificial in religious art, for they do not dodge the agony. The Crite contribution is the outstanding single entry in the display.

From Cleveland have come examples of the cloisonne enamel work done by Charles Jeffrey and Kenneth Bates. There are paintings of churches and cathedrals by Washington artists Martha Bache, Katherine Hobbs and Florence Morgan; a series of miniatures by Betty Baker, and some small sculpture, Clare Fontanini's "St. Francis" being a notable addition in this section.



SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN TO COME UNTO ME AND FORBID THEM NOT FOR OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

Center panel of triptych by Allan Rohan Crite, on display at the Arts Club

THE show is small and modest. It is a beginning. The aim is twofold: to make the hanging of works of art a general activity in many churches and to encourage churches to commission the work of local, living artists.

Dr. Wilson, the son of a clergyman, is also a champion of the artists. "The artists of America," he says, "need places to show their work sometimes even more than they need patrons. The bare walls of thousands of parish halls and vestibules cry for the creations of these artists."

And a logical step, he feels, from art for the church is art for the home.

Paintings by Artists Of Israel on Display

An exhibition of paintings by 50 of the leading artists of Israel will be opened at the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 822 8th st. nw. this evening at 8:15 p. m. The paintings have recently arrived in this country; they will remain on view in the Temple of the Congregation until June 4.

Paintings and drawings by Peter Blanc will be shown at the Public Library, 9th and K sts. nw., through May 31.

Montgomery Artists Offer A Fine Show

MONTGOMERY COUNTY artists are developing an annual show at Ginn's in Silver Spring which gets better every year. Jury for this year's exhibit, which will be shown through May 13, was composed of Theodora Kane, Omar Carrington and Robert Gates. Among the oils, they chose Gustav Trois' "Still-Life" for first place and Elizabeth Goddwin's "The Parent" for second. First place in water color went to "Table Miscellany" by Don Robertson, who recently had a one-man show at the Public Library in Washington, and second to "Gettieman Brewery" by Virginia Patterson. Honorable mentions were given Judith Weinbaum, Warren Feldman and Frances Daly, the last being first choice in pastel.

Benjamin Abramowitz, whose paintings were recently shown at the Corcoran, won an award in the Baltimore Museum's Maryland Artists' show, which runs in the neighbor city to May 21. The jury for the Baltimore event this year was composed of Carl Zigrosser of the Philadelphia Museum, Lee Gatch, painter, and Mary Callery, sculptor.

Music Man Brown Is a Busy Fiddler

easy times. One night a guest simply failed to show up at air time. He was scheduled to talk for four minutes—a long, long time to fill with substitute material on a TV show where sound and sight have to match. Edwards didn't dare stretch the early part of the show in case the man showed up by the time he was to go on (which he did, as it happens) and he remembers that show as very grueling.

Once a piece of film broke in the middle, and once a piece got put in backwards. Edward covered those mishaps with no trouble, just ad libbing with the practiced art of a man who started broadcasting on a 100-watt station at the age of 15 and who has been doing it more or less steadily ever since, including some reporting from Europe and the Near East during the war.

Although Douglas still does radio news work (a newscast daily on "Wendy Warren and the News" at noon on WTOP-CBS), he thinks TV need take no guff about its news techniques. The old routine about there being no successful format for news on television annoys him.

"Television does the same job radio does plus the pictures. The pictures are all gravy."

If a late story comes in, Edwards just talks it without pictures. If it's a story that has no picture possibilities, it may take kindly to illustration by charts or graphs. Films are available from Washington and New York. Still pictures to illustrate other stories come all made up for the Balop machine and are ready to use anytime.

Sometimes stock film from the library can be used to give the flavor of a foreign story. For example, a shot of a government building in Paris can illustrate a conference going on in that building, if fresh film is not available. Two-way trans-Atlantic conversations illustrated with split screen pictures with the New York reporter in one half and a still shot of the foreign correspondent in the other, is a good method, Edwards says.

In cutting stories to film and vice versa, Edwards tries to establish the situation and characters, and then deviate a little in his narration from the action in the film so that the audience doesn't get a blow-by-blow description of what it sees. In the end that crams more information into the limited time available.

And the time is limited on this show—a scant 15 minutes for news and features—yet, with TV as complicated as it is it takes an estimated 150 hours, spread among 30 people, to put on one show.

Tailoring his script to fit together with the film clips, working out the infinite details on the show takes four or five hours of Edwards' day. He considers himself enormously lucky to have Hewitt to work with, since Hewitt was a war correspondent, worked for the Associated Press and Acme News Photos before becoming a TV director. So they seldom argue over what's news and what isn't, which is one less load to bear.

WCFM, not much over a year old, and certainly not the biggest of stations, walked off with second prize in the cultural program classification at the Ohio State University Institute for Education by Radio.

It was sheer accident that the program ever got called to the institute's attention. Two days before the deadline for entries, Louis Brown, music director at WCFM, came across the notice about the awards when he was burrowing through some accumulated mail looking for something else. Rounding up an engineer, Brown mended a torn tape recording of a show on Brazilian music, transcribed it to a platter, slipped it in the mail in the nick of deadline.

The show, part of last summer's "Music of the Nations" series, included an interview with Eleazor Carvalho, conductor of the Brazilian National Symphony Orchestra. Recorded music for the show was obtained from the Brazilian Embassy, the Library of Congress and private collectors of rare records. Some recordings of the music of savages in Brazil were included, and coincidentally, a group of unpublished recordings made by the Eastman School Symphony under the direction of Brazilian composers, during the period when Brown was a violinist in that orchestra.

He Keeps Busy

BROWN, formerly a violinist with the National Symphony, was among the musicians who played under Carvalho's direction at the Brazilian Embassy when President Dutra entertained President Truman there.

When Brown isn't playing with some orchestra or handling musical shows at WCFM, or directing musical broadcasts from the National Gallery of Art, or acting as band director at Eastern High School, he is working on his doctorate at the University of Maryland. He already has five college diplomas from the Universities of Cornell and Akron and Rochester in science and arts. He has worked as a chemist, metallurgist and radiographic researcher, whatever that is.

Brown, by the way, pulled rather a coup in the WCFM memorial broadcast for Hans Kindler. He had on hand a 15-minute recorded interview with the founder of the National Symphony, and was able to use that with recordings of Kindler's musical work.

Latest coup by Brown is the current series of American Music Festival concerts which WCFM is carrying Sunday nights this month (starting tonight) at 8 and next Saturday night at 8:30. It's the seventh annual festival, but it's the first time it has been broadcast.

Dance Show Starts Today Over WNBW

Starting today, the Arthur Murray Dance Studios of Washington and Baltimore will begin a 13-week program over WNBW, 10:30-11 p. m., of their weekly party-time dances. The opening show will originate from Washington, Wardman Park Hotel. Next week the show will be broadcast from Baltimore. The two studios will alternate for the entire period.

Mrs. Ethel Fistere, director of the studios, will em-cee the shows with Ray Michael of WNBW.

The floor show each week will be given by studio talent. For opening night the teenage classes will take over and present a waltz routine, samba and the Charleston. Audiences will also have a demonstration on how to do the popular party dance called Riga-Jib, a boomps-a-daisy routine.

"THE HALLS OF IVY" MOVING TO WEDNESDAY

has suffered at the hands of the New York producers.

The theater outside New York has well nigh perished through abuse and neglect. It's been taunted with frowsy carbon copies of New York successes, with mildewed operettas whose scenery dates back to the days of Warren G. Harding, with acting companies which would embarrass an Elks' Club revival of "Shore Acres." Rarely is it visited by a New York hit with its original cast.

Asked to tour, New York actors of competence generally break out in a rash of excuses. They get dizzy riding on trains. They heard that the Comanches were off the reservation, on the warpath and scalp-bent. They can't be parted for so long from their psychiatrist. They don't want to flee their apartments and their gin-rummy game. Besides, they would have to give up three radio programs and miss a chance to get in on the TV kill. They'd like to change their occupational vow from "the show must go on" to "the show must go on in New York."

Hardy Species

THE truth is that out-of-town theater-goers are the hardiest of the species and the most loyal. For all the humiliations they have suffered, for all the swindles they have sat through, let a good play with a top-drawer cast come along and they'll crawl over broken bottles to see it. In the interest of a balanced diet they could do with a few of the stage's round actors instead of the screen's flat ones. They'll portage their canoes around rapids, get the last cough out of their '41 sedan, miss the last suburban train and sleep on a bench in the depot to spend an evening under the same roof with real live actors.

Another thing about road audiences. They get to the theater on time and behave with civilized consideration for their brothers once they get inside it. Unlike a considerable fraction of their Manhattan opposites they don't think it fashionable to arrive in the middle of the first act, awash with daiquiris and brandy, babbling audible inanities, lurching around the aisles like locoed buffalo. The whiter the tie, the longer the tails, the noisier, the drunker the customer. That's a safe rule of thumb in New York.

Your Des Moines, your Detroit, your Washington theater-goers are there to see a play, not to provide a counter-attraction. Nor is his attention challenged by the pretense of Hollywood witches, columnar show-offs and other eccentrics fugitive from their keepers. And he doesn't start to fumble for his hat ten minutes before the final curtain. He stays put until it falls. He's going home as soon as he finds his ignition keys, so he doesn't need to worry about losing his favorite pew in some plush-roped peasant trap.

Well, tomorrow night starts the 120th week for Amanda in "Private Lives" and the gal has been good to both Noel Coward and me.

Screen Scout

TV Turns Up Talent For Hollywood Jobs

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK (AP).—Predictions that television would be a good talent scout for the movies are being borne out.

The ABC television show, "Hollywood Screen Test," produced by the husband-wife team of Lester and Juliette Lewis, is a good example.

In the two years the program has been on the air, 12 of the performers who have appeared in its video screen tests have landed in the movies. Many others have gone on to stage roles, nightclub engagements or other entertainment jobs.

Rita Colton is an alumna of the show. She was signed by Hal Wallis, later did "Project X" for Film Classics, and is just back from Italy, where she played the feminine lead in a film.

Joel Marston, signed directly from the show, now is on the West Coast with Allied Artists and has done five pictures—the latest being "There's a Girl in My Heart."

Michael Strong, appearing in "Confidential Squad" for Universal, was signed after doing the same scene on "Hollywood Screen Test" that had won a contract for Marston seven months earlier.

Lewis is extremely enthusiastic over a child actor discovered by his show, 8-year-old Tommy Rettig. Tommy appeared in "Panic in the Streets" for Twentieth Century-Fox and now is at MGM making a film with Jane Powell.

Others receiving tests on the show who have gone on to Hollywood are: Patricia Wymore, Warner Brothers; Susan Cabot, Columbia; Ralph Clanton, J. Arthur Rank; Kay Buckley, Columbia; Bob Sherwood, MGM; Aileen Stanley, jr., Paramount; Jean McBride, Eagle Lion, and Craig Kelly, with independent producer Hal Wallis.

Lewis doesn't claim all were signed as a direct result of their appearances on his show, although most were, but the others received a chance to display their talents and move a step up the ladder.

Neil Hamilton, veteran film star, conducts the video screen tests in traditional Hollywood fashion.

CALLED AMERICA'S longest-running radio story, "One Man's Family" started its nineteenth year on the air with its latest broadcast on NBC. The separate television version with Bert Lytell is establishing itself as one of the better video shows . . . Faye Emerson's switch from CBS to NBC with her television show didn't last long. She will return to CBS May 21 after six weeks on NBC . . . Mutual's "The Shadow" program on Sundays will stay on right through the coming summer, the first time in its 15 years it hasn't taken a summer "vacation." The program, formerly offered to stations for local sponsorship, will be taken over by a sponsor on a Nation-wide basis June 11.

Still on the lookout for something to fill Jack Benny's old spot on Sunday nights, NBC has decided to see what the "Adventures of the Falcon," a crime mystery, can do in continuing as competitor to Jack. Benny retained 7 p. m. in moving to CBS.

The Falcon starts today after a transfer from MBS. There it gained a fairly high rating as a broadcast opponent to Benny.

Robert Q. Lewis of CBS, who last year established himself as the "permanent" summer replacement for Arthur Godfrey, is to do likewise for Bing Crosby this season. Beginning May 31 he will take over the Crosby show with a program using disk jockeys from over the country as guests.

At the same time Lewis expects to continue his own program, The Show Goes On, on both radio and television and fill in for Godfrey again whenever the occasion arises.

WGAY Ready To Air 'Voice Of America'

WGAY is doing what it can to take care of the lamentable fact that the State Department's "Voice of America" broadcasts are not heard in this country. Because regulations prohibit the Government from competing with private radio stations, the programs could not be aired in the United States by the Government even if it had the facilities. Since a State Department regulation forbids a commercial station from broadcasting these programs regularly, WGAY will air them on an irregular basis and not very often.

Today at 2:30 p. m the station will carry a documentary that tells the story of the State Department's broadcasts for overseas information, but future broadcasts will be rebroadcasts of material actually aired by the department.

It'll be a small sampling of the department's broadcasts—and all in English of course although the "Voice" speaks many languages—but it'll give us some idea of what we're telling the rest of the world about ourselves

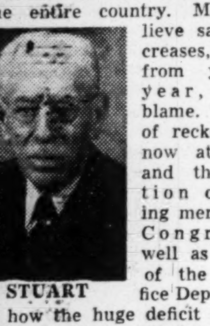
How to Handle Postoffice Deficit Poses a Question

By William M. Stuart



STUART

A SERIOUS financial crisis exists in the Postoffice Department at this time, affecting the entire country. Many believe salary increases, made from year to year, are to blame. The day of reckoning is now at hand and the question confronting members of Congress, as well as officials of the Postoffice Department, is how the huge deficit is to be handled. Various classes of mail matter should undoubtedly pay increased rates, but powerful lobbies are often strong enough to postpone postal increases. During all salary advances postal rates have been only slightly increased. A number of suggestions for an increase have been made. If an increase is adopted, new stamp issues might be brought out.

However, there has been some criticism over the 1950 stamp program, several members of Congress considering it a needless expense to bring out new stamps at this time. The public is not taking very kindly to the newly-announced curtailed postal service and it remains to be seen just what steps Postmaster General Donaldson will adopt to balance the postal budget.

OSBORNE A. PEARSON, Assistant Postmaster General in charge of stamps and philately, has this to say: "You may say for me to the ten million stamp collectors throughout the country that they can be assured I will cooperate with them in every way possible to take care of their interests now that I have been selected to supervise the Bureau of Finance in charge of stamps. I realize that stamp collecting is one of the most widespread hobbies and it is not only a pastime but an education as well for those who indulge in it. You may be assured of my sincere interest in this great hobby."

AT the regular meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S.P.A., Tuesday evening an auction was held, with Ernest Woodhouse as auctioneer. Next meeting will be held on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

As of April 30 the 3-cent Francis Scott Key, 3-cent American Turners and 3-cent Friendship with Canada commemoratives have been removed from the sales list at the Philatelic Agency.

The Report Card

What the Child Can Do Is More Important Than What He Can't

By Elsie Carper

IN THE hedge-lined garden adjoining the school the children played ball and tag, rode tricycles or just lounged on the grass. It was recess time at the Health School.

Every child playing in the garden had some physical handicap of an orthopedic nature. He had been crippled by an accident, by polio or by cerebral palsy.

While bouncing a ball or pushing the pedals of a tricycle, the child was learning both to overcome and live with his handicap.

The youngsters played, shouted and laughed like children at any other school during recess. Those unable to participate kept score.

If a child fell, he didn't cry. He picked himself up and went on with the game.

SYMPATHETIC teachers supervising the play let the children help themselves.

Mrs. Fern Bowes, principal of the Health School, 13th and Allison sts. nw., explained that "spoiling can cripple, too."

Parents anxious about their handicapped children frequently over-protect them and over-restrict their activities. Children that come to the Health School sometimes are excessively timid or overly demanding.

The Health School turns these youngsters into happy and well-adjusted human beings.

The school considers what a child can do far more important than what he cannot do.

OBJECT OF THIS public school is to train children and build their strength so they may enter a regular school.

The children arrive at the Health School by a bus that travels over the city picking them up at their homes. The bus returns them at the end of the day.

The four-classroom school is especially equipped for the children. Ramps replace stairs. Special furniture serves the needs of each child whether he is in a cast, rides in a wheelchair or walks with crutches.

Each child takes a 30-minute nap during the day in a darkened rest room filled with spotless cots. He eats family style, four children to a table, a lunch planned by the school nutritionist and cooked in the school kitchen.

IN THE physical therapy room under the direction of two graduate physical therapists, he is taught to use flaccid muscles. The exercises are those prescribed by his own physician.

The room is equipped with a metal hydrotherapy tank, parallel bars, pulley weights, rowing machines and many other devices designed to teach youngsters to coordinate arms and legs.

The exercise may be as simple as lying on a couch, raising and lowering an arm in a rhythmic pattern or it may be shuffling along the floor on "skis."

Some of the children must be taught to use their fingers to tie shoes and work buttons.

By Henry Rohland, The Washington Post

Guided by Mrs. Helen Kimble, physical therapist at the Health School, Suzy Allen, 6, practices foot placement. Larry Andrews, 8, on "skis," strengthens knee muscles

WHATEVER they do they gain confidence and assurance as well as strength.

The educational program is an enriched version of what is offered in the ordinary classroom.

Teachers at the Health School must supply these youngsters with normal experiences they have missed—simple things such as a trip to the grocery store, the zoo or a walk in the country. As a result more than the usual number of visual aids are employed.

Frequently the children have special hearing, speech and reading problems that must be overcome.

THE SMALL classes make it possible for teachers to give individual attention to the children who are allowed to learn at their own speed.

Sixty-eight students now are enrolled in the school. Instead of grades they are divided into four groups, junior primary, primary, intermediate and senior.

One of the most popular classes of all for both boys and girls is homemaking. As a part of this class, youngsters help the nutritionist plan their own meals, frequently get in the kitchen themselves to learn to cook.

The art faculty of Catholic University put on a display of recent work in their headquarters on the campus. Painting, sculpture, drawings and ceramics were included.

D. C. Girl Winner Of Scholarship

SHIRLEY

Rockford, Ill.—Shirley R. Megeath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Megeath, 2213 39th st. nw., Washington, D. C., has been awarded a two-year scholarship in French at Rockford College here and will enter Rockford next fall. The award is based on her fine scholastic record at Western High School in Washington and for her achievement in competitive examinations. Her father is an administrative assistant with the Capital Transit Co.

Shirley is a member of her school's Scholastic Honor Society, and of French, Latin, and Mathematics clubs. Prior to this year she was a member of Dramatic Club and active in athletics. She has been working part time this year in the sales division of a large department store, and she has taught a Sunday school class for primary children.

Students in painting and drawing of Laura Douglas, Jozef Pielage, Elizabeth Garnett and Bruno Beran at the YWCA recently had an exhibit of their work. Photography, ceramics, crafts and metalwork were included. Pupils of Andrea Zerega had a show in his studio in Georgetown, with works judged by local artists.

Classes in Writing Slated for Summer

The Washington School of Professional Writing announces that it will conduct summer classes in short story, juvenile and article writing at the studio, 1714 Connecticut ave. nw.

Tuesday evening a meeting will be held at the school studio for the formation of an alumni association to be known as the "Yarnspinners."

Art Notes

A. U. Buys A Nicholson

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY bought Ben Nicholson's painting "Trevega, 1946" from the spring annual for the permanent collection of the Watkins Gallery. The canvas by the English artist is an ingenious combination of the elements of abstraction and reality. The show as a whole, which includes both representational and nonrepresentational, is distinguished for the good examples chosen from the works of the various artists. The purchase honors the clever, for there are more profound paintings in the group.

Opening this evening at 8:15 p. m. in the Temple at the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 822 8th st. n. w., is an exhibition of paintings by 50 artists of Israel whose work has just recently arrived in this country.

A number of artists associated with the District are represented in the eighteenth annual exhibition by Maryland painters at the Baltimore Museum of Art. Marguerite Burgess received two awards, Benjamin Abramowitz, the anonymous award for "good sound work in a modern direction." The former's drawing "Pigeons" will be added to the museum's collection; her oil "Bird Rock" won an award in competition with works in all media.

New one-man shows in Washington include paintings and drawings by Peter Blanc at the Public Library, 9th and K sts., nw., and paintings by Mary Orwen at the Dupont Theater Gallery.

Annual Music Festival Opens Tonight at National Gallery

by Chanler, Bales, LaMontaine, Bacon, Howe, and many more.

The customary string quartet program will be played by the American University String Quartet, a new and valuable aggregation founded this heason. With George Steiner and Elliott Siegel, violinists, George Wargo, violist, and John Martin, cellist, they will play quartets by Foss, Donata and Huffman.

Piston Concertino

TWO final programs of the festival are orchestral. The second of these is made possible through the generosity of the Performance Trust Fund of Local 161, American Federation of Musicians.

Two soloists will play on the first of these concerts: Paul Moor, pianist, and Rex Hinshaw, clarinetist. Moor will give the first local account of Walter Piston's Concertino for piano and orchestra, while Hinshaw is down for La Salle Spier's Journey with a Clarinet.

The rest of that program includes the touching third symphony of Charles Ives, and Diamond's Music for Romeo and Juliet.

The finale comes on the 28th, with a repetition of the Ives, a new adagio by Grant, and shorter works of Mary Howe, McKay, Copland, Sousa, and Vietor.

Impressive Total

BALES fulfills an essential function in arranging these concerts. While one could always ask for this or that change in program, the total of American music produced at the Gallery during the year, culminating in the spring festivals, is impressive.

RONK WILK

Is it to be believed that American music succeeds so stoutly in the National Gallery because it is free, and that more of it would not succeed equally well in Constitution Hall? We trust not, but the opportunity of finding out is limited.

Ballet Going Abroad For 12-Week Stand

The New York City Ballet Company, of which George Balanchine is director, has accepted the invitation of the British Arts Council to dance six weeks, beginning July 4, in Covent Garden, and six more weeks outside London. About 50 dancers will make the trip. The company opens its four-week winter season at City Center here on Tuesday.

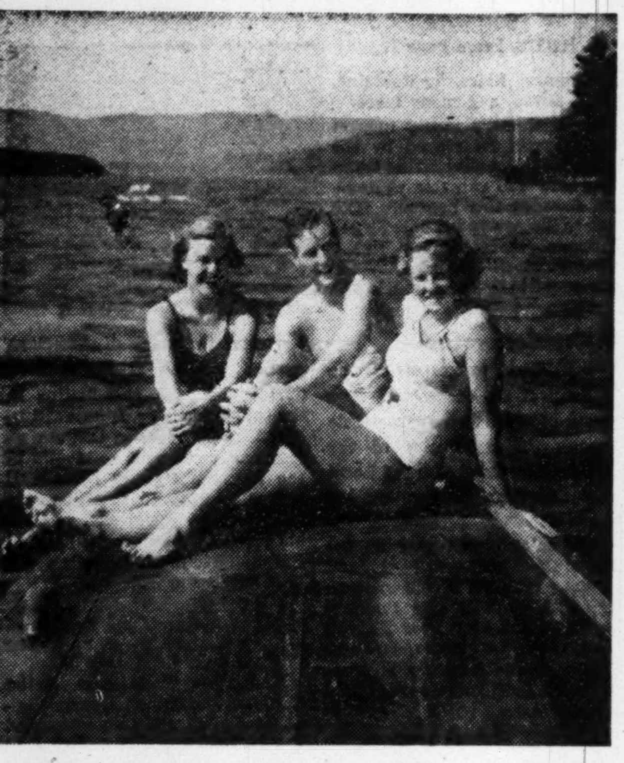
Whistle Stopping

Old New England Beckons Tourists



It'll be a few weeks yet, but there will be scenes like this on Maine's innumerable lakes this summer. Inviting?

By Orval Hopkins

NEW ENGLAND, which has taken a huge ad for today's paper and is therefore salt of the earth, grasps the lectern and says firmly: "Whatever you're looking for in a summer vacation—seacoast or mountains, wilderness, solitude or a gay resort colony—you are certain to find it somewhere in New England . . . The six States are only a quarter of the size of Texas (you got to admit that's a happy thought) . . . and embrace four mountain ranges (embracing a mountain range ain't easy), 5000 lakes, 1000 fresh and salt water beaches and 2500 miles of coastline . . . white-spired churches . . . cloud-girt peaks . . . tender broiled lobster . . . mellow amber maple sirup . . . Paul Revere . . . Little Women . . . etc."

A NOTE HERE from a James Albert Wales of New York starts out, "'Liquer Chequers.' The name of a new form of the game of checkers, which is believed to have originated at Tower Isle Hotel in Jamaica, British West Indies, is written, after the British manner, 'Liqueur Chequers.' (And watch that second 'u' in 'liqueur' when you write home about it from Jamaica)"

Watch it yourself, Wales. Do I have to do everything?

THE TRAPP Family Singers will conduct two "sing weeks" at Stowe, Vt., this summer. One starts July 10, the second July 18.

A FIVE-DAY tour of Paris has been won by Morten Beyer of 20 West Maple st., Alexandria, in a contest among Capital Airlines employes in 75 cities. Beyer is assistant to James B. Franklin, a vice president. He sold $6500 worth of international reservations to win the prize, which his wife shares. Beyer is a native of the District and went to Sidwell Friends School.

TULIP TIME in Holland, Mich., will be held this season from May 17 to May 20.

THE ATLANTIC Coast Line Railroad is conducting a safety crossing program in an effort "to combat the rising tide of crossing accidents." Motorists "caught" not observing warning sings or otherwise failing to effect what is considered a safe crossing will receive a personal letter from the Coast Line property protection department, in which the motorist will be informed that he has failed to take the proper precautions necessary for complete safety.

'Common Glory' Again

"The Common Glory," symphonic drama by Pulitzer prize winner Paul Green, is presented in historic Williamsburg, Va., nightly except Mondays, from July through Labor Day.

Vacation Calendar In Three Issues

CONCORD, N. H. — New Hampshire is issuing its spring-summer recreational calendar of vacation events in three editions this year to keep abreast of the news as it comes in to the Concord office. Following a first six-page 1950 edition in March, a second edition of eight pages was issued last week. A third edition in May is planned.

The second edition of the New Hampshire calendar contains information about historic shrines and Americana, opening dates of tourist attractions, dog and horse shows, summer theater news, square dancing, water events, boat cruises, arts and crafts exhibitions and instruction, blossom seasons, agricultural fair dates, summer ski jumping, plus a number of miscellaneous events.

Crater Lake Calls Visitors to Oregon

Salem, Oreg.—Sightseeing, boating and angling within the ancient crater of a volcano are vacation pastimes awaiting visitors at Crater Lake National Park in southern Oregon during the 1950 season.

The Oregon Highway Commission travel information department sets forth that visitors may hike down a national park service maintained trail one and one-half miles along crater walls for a descent of 1000 feet to the blue waters of the mysterious lake.

The trail zigs and zags its way past innumerable formations and offers changing panoramas at different levels. At the foot of the trail large boats are available for excursions and smaller boats may be rented for angling. Excursion boats take visitors around the 26-mile shoreline at the bases of spectacular cliffs rising almost perpendicularly out of the lake.

Cliff-Scaling Book Redone

AUGUSTA, Maine.—Increased interest in mountain climbing as a vacation activity caused the Maine Development Commission to reissue a booklet on the subject, "Mountain Climbing in Maine," today.

Everett F. Greaton, commission executive director, said that "an unusually large number" of inquiries about the State's mountain climbing possibilities are being received from potential summer visitors.

The pocket-sized publication lists specific information on 33 Maine mountains and general information on 930 other mountains and hills attractive to climbers. It is illustrated with black and white pitcures.

Twelve pages are devoted to Mount Katahdin, Maine's highest and most famous peak, the start of the Appalachian Trail and said to be the first place in the United States to greet the morning sun.

British Raise Gas Ration for Yanks

Great Britain has increased the gasoline ration allowance for American motorists with their own cars, the American Automobile Association reports.

The new fuel allowance will enable Americans to drive "the length and breadth of the British Isles without fear of ending up with a dry tank."

The new ration grants Americans and Canadians visiting Britain with their own cars enough fuel to travel 3000 miles during the first month of their visit, 2000 miles the second month and 1000 miles the third month.

The AAA reported also that motorists who borrow cars or purchased second hand vehicles will be allowed enough fuel to drive 500 miles, double the former allowance. The gasoline tax in Britain has recently been increased, the AAA said, bringing the price up to 42 cents a gallon.

For Vacation Variety.. come to NEW ENGLAND

Here you will find the spice of life—variety in abundance . . . over 2500 miles of seashore, green countryside, beautiful blue lake, forested glens and noble mountains . . . sunny beaches embraced by rocky headlands or sprawling sand dunes . . . neat little white villages . . . covered bridges . . . famous yachting centers . . . primitive woodlands. This is the stage on which much of our nation's early history was enacted. All these attractions are within a few hours travel of one another and are reached over a vast network of broad, modern highways, a complete system of rail, air and bus lines.

Here once fired "the shot heard 'round the world"

Here men go "down to the sea in ships"

You'll want to try some of the taste-tempting dishes that have given New England top ranking among epicures in the nation—to enjoy the endless variety of sports.

For spring freshness, summer coolness, fall brilliance or winter sports—for vacation variety, come to NEW ENGLAND.

D. C. Area Students Charting Economy Junkets to Europe

By Connie Zatkovich

ECONOMY-SIZED junkets to Europe will make names like Paris, Brussels, and Rome something besides bright lights to students this summer.

More than 100 collegians from the Washington area are making plans and pinching dimes for overseas "pilgrimages" June 23 to August 2 or August 6 to September 10.

All-inclusive rates range as low as $521 for a month's tour to France, Germany and Italy.

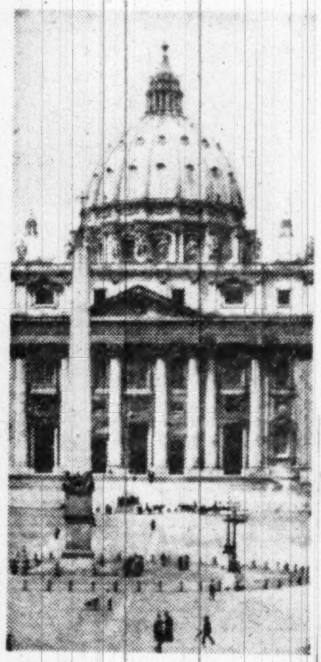
The International Catholic Travel Committee, a non-profit organization arranging inexpensive tours in cooperation with the Newman Club and National Federation of Catholic College Students all over the country, was already measuring stacks of unfilled applications last December. With reservations gone on the Roma, a sister ship, the Liguria, was finally contracted for to accommodate the overflow. Now, there is still space open on the Liguria or plane reservations for an additional $50, on the round trip.

Some From Trinity

ORIGINALLY, the number of student pilgrims included 22 from Trinity College, according to Polly Godfriedson, senior and regional chairman of NFCCS Overseas Service Program. Dunbarton College expected seven and Immaculata Junior College six. With the new accommodations on the Liguria offered, the number will probably double, as applications from the other colleges are accepted.

Richard Murphy, International Vice President of NFCCS, and William Pinkel, Executive Secretary of the Newman Club Federation, have just returned from "looking the situation over," checking hotels and arrangements along the tour routes.

Prices of the trips vary but little: Tour A $552, B $521, C $539, D $524, E $554. Reservations for the SS Liguria run $20 more.



St. Peter's in Rome . . . pilgrims hear its call

Same Itineraries

JUNE and August itineraries will be duplicated in reverse traveling order. Both ships will put in at LeHavre. August tourists, however, see Rome first and then work back to Paris through (1) Florence, Nice, Lourdes, (2) Turin, Italian Alps, Brussels; (3) Venice, Munich, depending on their selected tour.

Summer school sessions at the University of Fribourg are offered for two-weeks as a part of Tour E. This leaves by plane from New York and arrives in Zurich, Switzerland, on July 16.

Focal point of the pilgrimages will be Rome, where an average of about five days of the tour will be spent. Special audiences with Pope Pius XII have been arranged, and there will be general participation in the Holy Year celebrations there.

Accommodations in Europe include "third class railroad travel and economical hotels." Students are aware that it means "roughing it" to some extent.

Continental breakfasts consist only of tea or coffee and bread. But there's culture to be had—who cares about food.

Virginia Launches Record Advertising Drive

RICHMOND.—Virginians this spring have launched the greatest advertising campaign in the history of the State, the Virginia Travel Council announces. The council estimated that approximately one million dollars will be expended by various interests to advertise the Old Dominion in 1950. Hotels will expend about $375,000 of this sum, transportation agencies are credited with approximately $50,000, an increase of 100 percent in the State advertising fund, made conditionally, may increase the State appropriation from $147,000 to $297,000 and promotional agencies will swell this sum by $150,000. Natural wonders, restaurants and miscellaneous interests will boost expenditures well over the million mark.

"The Virginia Travel Council has had as one of its principal objectives awakening Virginians to the value of paid advertising," Comdr. Raymond B. Bottom, of Newport News, president of the council, said. "It is the agency that headed the campaign for more State advertising funds to convince Virginians that a greater advertising of their attractions will boost our travel income from 220 million to half a billion dollars a year.

"Through the council a campaign to get private interests to spend more money to make money has been constantly in progress. Many of our larger interests have added from 20 to 70 percent to their advertising budgets as a result. Delegations of Virginians were taken from Canada to Florida to see what the other fellow is doing. The result is an awakened Virginia that the council believes is on the way to becoming one of the major travel objectives in the Nation. It believes that the time will come when Virginia will be among the first five States in the Union in economic wealth from travel and that the travel industry will be the second instead of third source of wealth to the State, if not the first. Industry and agriculture now are leading.

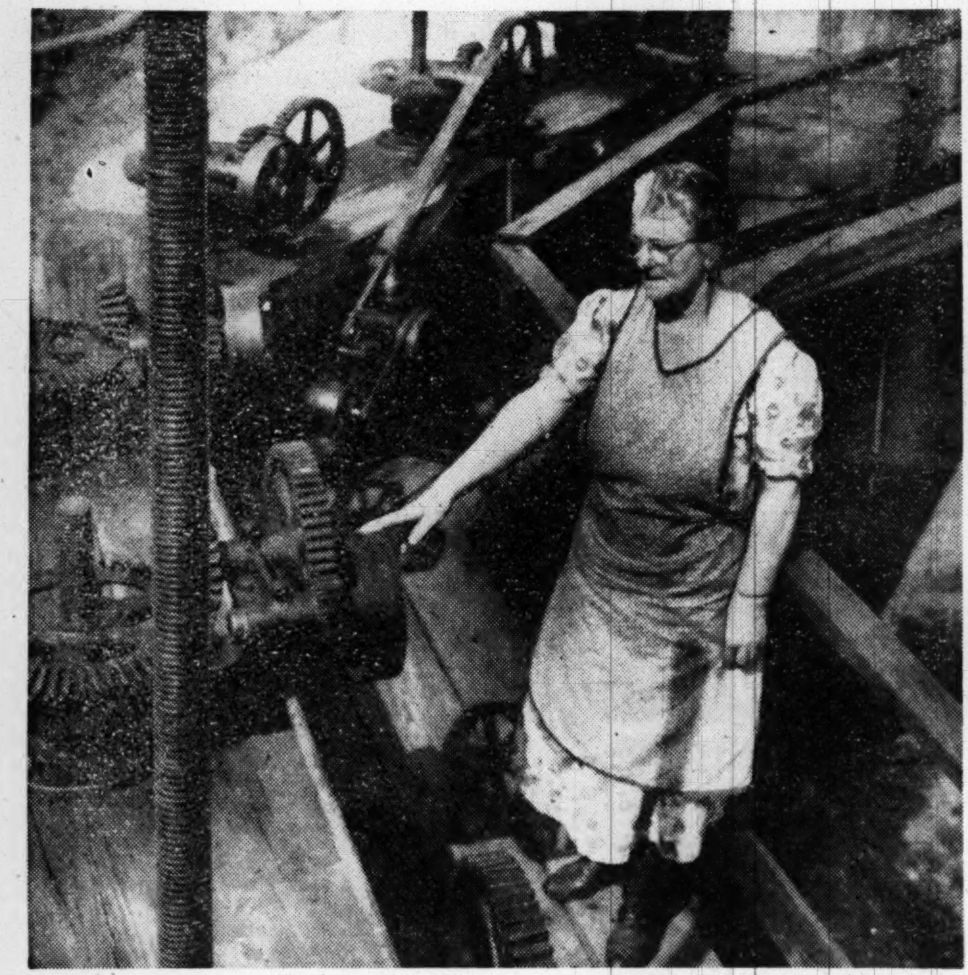
Julia King—41 Years on the Lock



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

LADY LOCK TENDER—Mrs. Julia King, for 41 years the tender of Lock No. 5 on the old C&O Canal, is shown here as she inspects aged but perfectly working machinery which she uses daily to regulate the flow of water in the canal

By Gershon Fishbein

WHEN the horse-drawn barge starts its annual run today on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, old memories and fond recollection will stir and whisper.

For none, however, will the memories be as clear as for Mrs. Julia King, who has been a lockkeeper on the canal for 41 years. She has been at Lock 5, Brookmont, Md., for 21 years and for 20 years previously she was tender at Lock 6. Lock 5 is the terminus of the barge excursion.

As a member of a dying occupation (dams are driving lock tenders out of business), Mrs. King is believed to be the only woman lock keeper in the country. For sure, she's the only lockkeeper in the National Parks Service.

Beginning at 5:30 a. m., Mrs. King can be found on her lock every hour, checking the water level so the mills in Georgetown can be supplied with sufficient power. Her first chore each morning is to open the gates permitting the backwaters sidetracked overnight in the Potomac to flow into the canal.

Longs for '20s

IT'S BECOME a rather prosaic occupation, laments Mrs. King, who longs for the excitement of the early twenties, when the canal was filled with commercial barges heading to and from markets. The railroads have since provided a faster and more economical mode of travel.

Mrs. King, who is feminine about her age, looks like the grandmother she is. She has raised three children, all of them born in the little house by Lock 5, but none of them have evidenced any great interest in lock keeping as their life's work.

"I guess they do what they like," said Mrs. King. "Personally, I hope to stay right here at Lock 5 as long as I live. I only hope I can stay here."

War of Nerves

MRS. KING'S uncertainty about her future whereabouts stems from the war of nerves imposed on her nearly every spring by the flood waters of the Potomac. Last spring she stayed up until 3 one morning, furniture stowed and family alerted for quick evacuation. Fortunately, a concrete causeway built by the Government in 1943 turned back the flood.

Mrs. King hasn't always been so lucky. In March, 1936, she and her family were forced to make a hasty exit when the canal overflowed its banks and deposited 17 inches of water in her living room. In the same month eight bungalows were washed out between Locks 5 and 6.

Mrs. King's unusual occupation requires her to worry about the weather in Cumberland, Md., some 185 miles distant on the canal. "When it rains in Cumberland," she says, "I've got to watch out. Sure as anything the waters will rise down here in a day or two."

Rents Old Home

SHE has been working for the Interior Department since 1938, when the Interior Department took over the property from the bankrupt Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co. for two million dollars. She rents the 116-year-old home from the Government.

Mrs. King's first years as a lock keeper were filled with the romance of the early 1900s as the country began to expand.

"We were really kept busy then," reminisced Mrs. King. "Some days we would have between 15 and 18 boats to lock through going in both directions."

VIP Visitors

TRAFFIC along the canal has slowed down considerably in the last few years, however, but old friends still come down to her lock for visits. House Speaker Sam Rayburn stops for a chat every time he canoes down the canal.

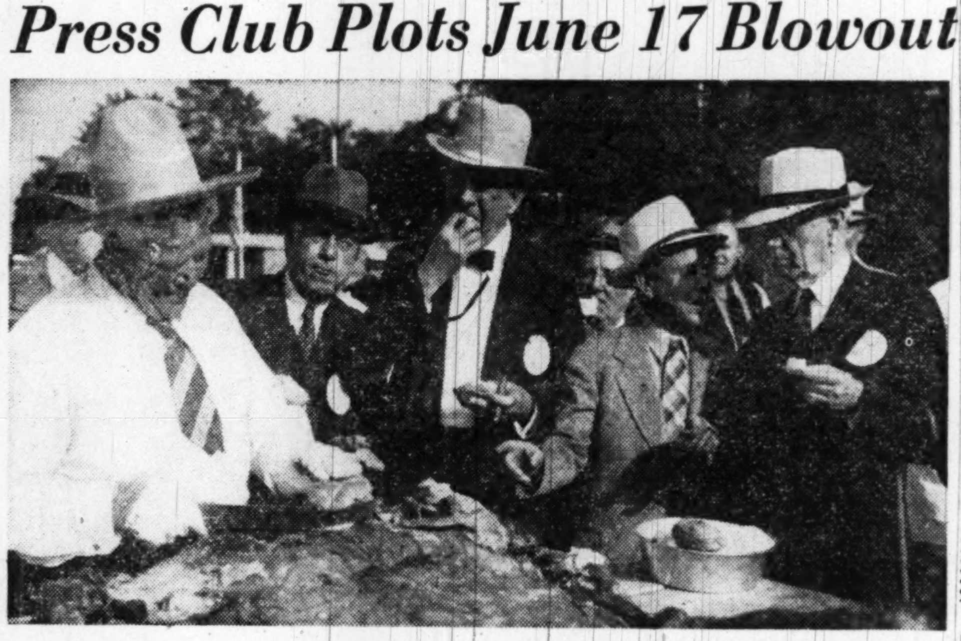
Williamsburg Hub Of Historic Area

Close by Williamsburg, Va., are two other places famous in early American history.

Jamestown, six miles south of the restored city, is the site of the first permanent English settlement in America. Many of the old foundations of the 17th century capital of Virginia have been preserved along with the original church tower of 1639. The National Park Service and the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities maintain museums on the island.

On the other side of Williamsburg, 12 miles distant along the Colonial Parkway, is Yorktown, where Lord Cornwallis surrendered to General Washington, bringing to a victorious end the struggle for American independence. The old battlefields and many houses have been restored.

Press Club Plots June 17 Blowout



Scenes like this, taken in 1938, will be repeated on June 17 at Old Fort Hunt, Va., when the National Press Club stages a "Big Roundup and Barbecue." Above you see (left to right) "Texas Jack Snider" of Amarillo, "king of the Barbecue," who will return to roast selected beeves for this year's outing; speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Senator Tom Connally; Senator Alberto Carranza of Coahuila, Mexico, and Daniel A. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce

THE National Press Club plans a "big roundup and barbecue" to be held Saturday, June 17, at Old Fort Hunt, Va. A steamed-up outing committee already is talking in terms of more than 2000 guests.

The barbecue phase of the program will duplicate a similar outing held in 1938 at the same place, a historic military post on the Virginia side of the Potomac, mid-way between Alexandria and Mount Vernon. There the similarity ends, since the 1950 gathering is being blueprinted on a scale matching the growth of the Press Club and Washington's importance as a news center during the 12 intervening years.

Newsmen, political figures, and dignitaries from all 48 States and most of the world's nations are expected to be present. But the prevailing influence, according to Press Club President Radford Mobley, will be "Texan." The wearing of a kerchief, sombrero, Western boots, or some kindred piece of cowhand attire is a "must" for the occasion.

Coming from the Lone Star State to prepare the massive meal will be "Texas Jack" Snider of Amarillo, called the "Barbecue King." Snider, monarch of the '38 steer roast, and an earlier Press Club beef broil in 1932, will bring with him a fleet of trucks loaded with the main course, and eight helpers to preside at the barbecue pits.

Vying with the substantial menu will be a program of entertainment. Outing Committee Chairman Fred Perkins, who also directed the 1938 barbecue, says the program will range from an old-time "forensic encounter," as they once called political debates, to a demonstration of congressional skill at horseback riding.

The debate will be between Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who will "point with pride," and Congressman Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), who will "view with alarm." Moderator of this duel of words will be Vice President Alben Barkley.

Other attractions will include a network broadcast of the Navy Band's "Navy Hour" concert, direct from the outing area, the traditional baseball game between Washington correspondents and members of Congress, a fireworks display, and what promises to be one of the most unusual marching drills ever staged.

Competing in the latter event will be members of the Navy of the Great State of Texas, the Nebraska Admirals, a group of Kentucky Colonels, and a new entry, the Foreign Legion, made up of press attaches from Washington embassies. All will be in the uniforms of their "office."

Information regarding tickets, which are now on sale at $3 a person, may be had by calling the Press Club office.

60-Bell Carillon in Albany

Albany, N. Y.—Listening to the famous 60-bell carillon in the City Hall tower and the nearby 11-bell chimes in St. Peters Protestant Episcopal Church is a charming experience for sightseers in this capital city.

Information on these and other capital district attractions are described in the 1950 edition of "New York State Vacationlands," a 196-page illustrated guide, obtainable without charge from the Division of State Publicity, 112 State Street, Albany 7, N. Y.

31 New York Campsites to Open May 26

ALBANY, N. Y. (U.P.)—New York State's 31 public campsites in the Adirondacks and Catskills will be opened May 26, Conservation Commissioner Perry B. Duryea has announced.

Duryea said he expected at least 20 percent more use of the campsites this year than last. He said work now in progress will provide 65 percent more facilities by fall than were available last July.

The commissioner said a new campsite covering 152 acres was completed on Long and South Islands in Lake George. He said it is equal to more than 100 other State-owned islands in the lake combined.

Three other new Adirondack camps were under construction at Little Sand Point on Piseco Lake, Rollins Pond and Forked Lake. All are slated for completion in August.

Famous Resorts Reopening This Summer in Maine

The greatest expansion of hotel and tourist accommodations in Maine in many seasons will greet visitors to the Pine Tree State this year, according to Guy P. Butler, executive manager of the Maine Publicity Bureau.

Construction of a new hotel at Bar Harbor, reopening of two famous resorts closed for a number of years, opening of more than a dozen new motels and motor courts and building of hundreds of new units at established tourist colonies are among major developments of what the publicity bureau sees as a "trend to Maine" in 1950.

The new Hotel Bar Harbor is a 50-double room structure on the ocean front near the center of town, complete to the last detail. Reopening after extensive modernization will be Grindstone Inn, at Winter Harbor. Another famous hotel reopening after modernization will be the Mount Kineo, world-famous Moosehead Lake resort.

Five years ago: sullen German soldiers photographed in Kiel the day after surrender.

New German Army?

Five years after V-E Day, the possibility is very real

WILL A NEW Wehrmacht march? On the eve of the fifth anniversary of V-E Day, the world wonders.

Only five years after PARADE photographer Ben Ross snapped a memorable picture of German defeat (above), rumblings that indicate a new generation of German soldiers are growing ominously louder.

Behind their curtain of silence, the Russians have already organized an east zone police force which, to Western observers, looks more like the nucleus of a new army. And in Bonn, seat of the West German government, it is no secret that pressure for a "token" army is growing. Even the nucleus for tomorrow's "general staff" can be found in the Bruederschaft, a "welfare" society of former German officers which displays an active interest in German politics.

Has defeat in two World Wars failed to chill German enthusiasm for militarism? Or are the Germans simply caught in the vortex of the "cold war?" In the next column, five West zone Germans give their views.

Caution, worry about "cold war," are reflected in these German views

CLERK

"I spent five years in a prisoner of war camp," says 30-year-old Harold Kraft. "I oppose military training because I see the beginning of a road we have already traveled..."

HOUSEWIFE

"I was in a concentration camp," says Frau Frieda Fahrenwald, "and I don't want to hear about military training. But we should defend ourselves if the Russians march in. They're as bad as Nazis."

MECHANIC

"The Western European Union will be powerful only when Western Germany is rearmed," says 57-year-old Franz Haft, a Social Democrat. "The Russians cannot be stopped with ideologies."

FACTORY WORKER

"I don't want any more of that business," says Hans Kleinschmidt. "If the Russians and Americans can't stomach each other, they should fight it out. I hope my son won't have the experience I had."

DOCTOR

"I am a pacifist," says Dr. Peter Bischoff who served in the Navy during the war. "If we want to see peace, we should oppose military training and the establishment of a new Wehrmacht."

BURT LANCASTER: the operator called, "Going up!"

The Turning Point

It was a very frustrated young "stick actor"—the carnival term for an acrobat who performs at the top of a pole—who shook the dust of Manhattan from his heels some ten years ago and started West to find his fortune.

With no employers eagerly reaching out for an athlete whose best recommendation was the fact he had once been featured by Ringling Brothers, he wandered into Marshall Field's department store in Chicago. There he filled out an application for a job.

The personnel manager looked at the name, Burt Lancaster, and at the man. He was quite a hunk of sinew. He looked like he could handle the shipping department alone. But there was also something that suggested he might look good "up front."

Into an Elevator

There was an opening in the ladies' lingerie department for a floorwalker, and Lancaster got it. Masking an occasional yen to swing from the chandeliers, he was an immediate success.

But his restless soul kept him moving. Fireman, engineer, laborer—and finally Army Special Services in Italy.

On the last of his Army stint, pretty hopeless about the future, he found himself one day in an elevator in his New York hotel. The operator who slammed the gate and said, "Going up," was rather prophetic, because from that moment, Lancaster was.

Another passenger, a Broadway producer he had met, remembered and recognized him, and offered him a reading for a play. That's how Burt Lancaster's first civilian job after the Army became a role in "A Sound of Hunting," and Hollywood took it from there.

Fear of water. . . .

WATER TRAINING should begin at early age. Youngsters who "grow up" on beach become good swimmers.

Modern swimming experts blame childhood scares for our shocking drowning toll

YOU, OR SOMEONE near to you, may drown this summer—through fears received years ago! About 7,000 Americans lose their lives in the water annually, half of them during the days of summer vacation just ahead. About half are persons too "afraid of the water" to go into it until an accident happens. The rest are among our 80,000,000 self-styled "good swimmers" who become "afraid" in a crisis.

Modern-thinking swimming coaches of the Red Cross, Boy Scouts and "Y" organizations know there is no such thing as inherited fear of water. And so they have been turning to psychology to explain the mental hazard that can leave even experienced swimmers hysterically helpless in a matter of seconds.

The growing verdict: a large share of all drownings are caused by half-forgotten fears, sometimes acquired in early infancy.

One outstanding authority is John Markay, headmaster of the YMCA McBurney Lower School in New York City and a YMCA national aquatic director of 15 years experience. He has traced "scares" as far back as two months of age.

"In 95% of all cases of water-phobia," he says, "parents are directly or indirectly to blame. Victims are literally scared to death."

- A parent bathing a baby and carelessly letting its head slip even momentarily under water, can give it a dread of water that will last all its life, Markay says.
- Bath water that is too cold, or an injury on a sharp toy while in the water may have the same effect, showing up years later.
- Parents "ducking" children in an attempt to make them like the water, are being very foolish.
- Friends playfully pushing even adult non-swimmers into the water may be contributing to their eventual drowning.
- On the other hand, over-cautious mothers who try to keep their children from the water by dire warnings of death, leave them unprepared for real danger. In one western state, 80% of all drownings were found, in one survey, to have been among people "afraid of water."

FEAR prevention requires care, but it is easier than cure. The New York Police Academy found that water phobia was the No. 1 fear among cops. During World War II, 20% of the Army inductees and 12% of the Navy had never learned to swim.

The Markay system of prevention, built up after treating hundreds of cases of water-frightened children, can be boiled down to a few simple rules. (1) Never allow a small child to associate water with pain or fear. (2) Never force a child to learn to swim. (Except under skilled coaching, don't try to teach him until the seventh year.) (3) Never show nervousness in the water yourself. (4) Never tell a child horror stories about drowning. These will help, rather than hinder, his drowning. Talk to him sensibly.

can cost your life!

Markay once spent a whole summer "curing" a 13-year-old girl who had been deliberately "scared" by an aunt whose parents had drowned. He waded with her at knee level for days, choosing spots with no sharp stones or grass. Gradually, he led her in deeper, built up her confidence by "bubbling" and floating, enlisted the aid of other girls to help her paddle. She won her Junior Life Saving Medal at summer's end. Her own life became safe.

Curing "water fear" among adults is harder, but it can be done. Stressing that 75% of all drownings occur within 50 feet of shallow water or other help, another top expert, Red Cross Water Safety Instructor Bill Armstrong of Washington, D. C., has cured simple cases of fear of drowning in one hour. Armstrong has taught thousands of government workers.

Measuring off the necessary 50 feet in the pool at the Ambassador Hotel, and using a simplified course of instruction, he is giving non-swimmers at least a chance of survival. Typical of the new type of swimming coach, he devotes the first full quarter of his time talking about water phobias. Then he teaches proper breathing—which helps eliminate fear. In the last batch of 800 Government employees, 85% of whom had water phobias, 85% went away with the ability to swim the 50 feet.

But the fears themselves, often forgotten until swimmers get into trouble, are usually lurking in the subconscious ready to strike. The only method of combatting them once they are buried deep in the emotions is by psychiatric care or by making certain the swimmer never reaches the stage of distress or exhaustion where fears begin to appear.

There may be a long way to go. According to a Gallup Poll taken in 1948, 77% of our 80,000,000 swimmers said "yes" to the question "Can you swim well?" Yet records of the Chicago Safety Council show only 1 swimmer in 10 is really a good swimmer under all conditions. The long forgotten, childhood "water-fears," never corrected and lurking in the subconscious, may be very largely to blame!

This father sees to it that his child is not afraid of surf. You can do the same.

GT GENERAL TIME MADE BY THE MAKERS OF BIG BEN
Products of GENERAL TIME Corporation

London bus towers over new British 300-pound scooter-size car. R. E. Arthur, designer and builder, is driving.

Vest-pocket car

It's one Briton's answer to car problem —and he gets 90 miles to the gallon!

"REA" has simple dash, rear motor, space for luggage in front.

THE BRITON who decides to buy a car today has three major problems: (1) delay in delivery (two to three years), (2) purchase tax up to two-thirds of the car's price, (3) several restrictions on gasoline.

When R. E. Arthur, a London engineer, thought the situation over, he came up with his own answer: the midget car shown in these photos.

He calls the car the REA (his initials). It is eight feet long, 3½ feet wide, weighs about 300 pounds. It has a 2½ horsepower engine, a cruising speed of 35 mph. and will go ninety miles on a gallon of gas. It handles easily on crowded streets.

Midget Price, Too

Arthur plans to market this car for about $500, and thus may add another model to Britain's car exports.

In 1950, Britain hopes to top her last year's export–258,000 cars.

Aware that Americans alone had bought 13,000 of these in 1949, British car makers recently displayed 100 cars of latest design at the British Automobile and Motor Cycle Show in New York.

The Cowboys Take Over!

Comfort may be one good reason for multi-million-dollar boom in western clothes for the small fry

By JOHN COOPER

HOLSTERS are elaborate.

SOMETHING TERRIFIC is happening to American kids – and their clothes.

Suddenly, kids from San Diego to Portland, Me., have gone "western." You see it, too, in Akron and St. Paul and Greenville, S. C. On any Saturday morning you can count the cowboys helping round up rustlers in the sea breezes that sweep the prairies on eastern Long Island.

For some reason, right smack in the middle of the atomic age, the kids have plunged right back to the days of the Golden West when all a man had to worry about was rattlesnakes, Indians and spooky horses.

All the kids – girls, too – want today, it seems, is a good horse, a cowboy costume and a pair of six-guns.

Failing this, the average youngster between five and 11 years old will settle for the suit and a pair of cap pistols.

And he is getting them at the rate of millions of dollars a year – so many millions that the clothing manufacturers won't even estimate a figure.

The craze for cowboy suits began about two years ago. It spread with the speed of a sheriff's posse cutting off the rustlers at the pass. The clothing industry is used to fads, and knew it wouldn't last.

But this one kept on growing! It's still growing. A lot of experts think it's here to stay.

Three men are chiefly responsible: Hopalong Cassidy, Roy Rogers and Gene Autry. They are the current heroes of American youth, and each (for a comfortable sum) has licensed clothing manufacturers to use his name.

Industry Found a Gold Mine

But Hopalong Cassidy (William Boyd) seems to get most of the credit. Today 85 delighted (and surprised) companies manufacture 140 Hopalong Cassidy items – hats, chaps, spurs, guns, bandannas, ad infinitum. Not all of these items are wearing apparel – even fountain pens and bed lamps for kids have gone western. Boyd figures the volume of Hopalong business this year will amount to $20,000,000! It's even spread to Great Britain.

Says Boyd: "I'm amazed, too!"

According to clothing industry experts, Boyd, Autry and Rogers get at least 5¢ on every dollar of gross sales. Besides the big three, there are other personalities who also cash in: the Lone Ranger, the Cisco Kid, a child star named Bobby Benson, and even a television puppet named Howdy Doody.

Five years ago there were about 10 makers of holsters and pistol belts. Today there are 150 (grossing something like $30 million a year). Many of their designs are elaborate copies of real western designs. Some are pleasantly (for the industry) expensive: one little red and white leather number, nicely studded with shiny brass nailheads, will run you something like $20.

A Good Outfit Gets Results

Even with such fixin's, an average-good "complete" cowboy outfit costs you the better part of $25. It may be worth the money. A "complete" outfit is practically guaranteed to help you bring in more outlaws – with less trouble – during an average afternoon's work for the U.S. Marshal.

If nobody seems willing to estimate the total amount of cowboy suit business, one thing is certain: it pushed the sales of boys' clothing to a new all-time record last Christmas. What will happen next Christmas nobody knows.

One observer believes the newspaper comic strips were chiefly responsible for starting the fad, with radio second and movies a poor third. But he adds that television is coming up fast.

Early this year, one big city newspaper brought William Boyd to town. Thousands of kids were on hand to greet him. They stretched out for 24 blocks. Boyd was equal to the job. He shook hands with every one of them.

Of course, it wasn't any surprise to the kids. They expected that anybody who spends all his time in the saddle and leads a clean life should be able to take care of a little thing like that.

The experts say there's just one more reason for the popularity of the cowboy outfit, and this is the reason they think it's here to stay.

Awake or asleep–FILM is gluing acid to your teeth!

FILM dulls your smile
FILM spoils your breath
FILM speeds tooth decay!

Pepsodent removes FILM–helps stop tooth decay!

Tooth decay is caused by acid that film holds against your teeth–acid formed by the action of mouth bacteria on many foods you eat. When you use Pepsodent Tooth Paste right after eating, it helps keep acid from forming. What's more, Pepsodent removes dulling stains and "bad breath" germs that collect in film.

FILM NEVER LETS UP! It's forming night and day on everyone's teeth. Don't neglect it. Always brush with film-removing Pepsodent right after eating and before retiring. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula. No other tooth paste contains Irium* or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent.

Don't let decay start in your mouth! Use Pepsodent every day–see your dentist twice a year!

YOU'LL HAVE BRIGHTER TEETH AND CLEANER BREATH when you fight tooth decay with film-removing Pepsodent!

EQUIPMENT for two on trout stream: two spinning rods, 150 artificial lures, creel, net, hip boots, fisherman's vest.

TO JASON CLARK, editor of the Anglers Almanac, fishing is more than a sport. It is an art and a science and ranks right up there with meditation and prayer.

For those who are strangers to the delights of this art, Clark has some patient advice. After learning to cast, he cautions the novice in his 1950 Almanac, the next step is to chart the locations of the neighborhood lakes and streams that produce the most fish. For, in most cases, the spots that yield fish once es into pool below.

Clark woos trout with spinning tackle

From lure box, Clark carefully selects his favorite brown trout lure.

will yield you fish again.

In streams, says Clark, the best fishing is found near overhanging banks, log jams, submerged trees and roots. In lakes and ponds, the angler must look for weed beds, inlets, rock ledges and sand bars. Salt water fishermen are advised to seek stretches of dark water which indicate pockets where fish feed.

No Fixed Rules

There are no rules governing the best weather for fishermen. But in general fish like the same weather men like—bright. clear days with a rippling breeze. (Some experts may dispute this.)

In casting, Clark has one hard and fast rule: "Watch your casting on a windy day. A stiff breeze can whip your cast off course and hook you instead of the fish."

"A good cast," says Clark, "will always pay off. Last year a friend of mine, expertly casting for bass in South Africa, hooked a hippo. Fortunately it got away."

Lamb Mechada is a glorified, glamorous, south-of-the-border version of roast leg of lamb.

Let's have LAMB

MASH together mixture of garlic, marjoram and salt; add fresh lime juice and tabasco; mix thoroughly.

MAKE 10 or 12 deep holes in leg of lamb, using the handle of sturdy wooden spoon, as shown at right.

PUSH small stuffed olive in each cavity; add piece of bacon, ½ tsp. garlic mixture, then another olive.

LATINS HAVE A WAY with flavor! South of the border, the Spanish word "mechada" means "larded." Now, to us, "larded" means having strips of salt pork or bacon inserted. To our good neighbors, however, it means much more! They add the salty savor of olives, the tang of lime and tabasco, a whisper of garlic and the fragrance of marjoram. All of which make Lamb Mechada quite a dish! To round out the menu, serve new potatoes, carrots, mint jelly with orange peel, green salad and hot rolls.

LAMB MECHADA

1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon marjoram
½ teaspoon salt
2 tbs. lime juice
¼ teaspoon tabasco
2 strips bacon
20 small stuffed olives
Leg of lamb

Mash and mix garlic, marjoram and salt together, or chop garlic very fine, then mix with marjoram and salt. Add lime juice and tabasco. Cut bacon into ½-inch pieces. Wipe meat with a clean, damp cloth. Make holes with handle of wooden spoon about 1½-inches deep in about 10 places in lamb. Push small stuffed olive in hole, then piece of bacon, ½ teaspoon of garlic, tabasco, lime mixture, then another stuffed olive. Place roast fat side up, on rack in open roasting pan. Roast in moderate oven, 325°F., allowing 30-35 minutes per pound for medium or 35-40 minutes per pound for well done. Or use meat thermometer and roast until temperature is 175°F. or 182°F.

THE CHAMP: 17-year-old Jeanette Sweeney shows TV audience how she lifted 110 pounds—her own weight—high into air to win Amateur Athletic Union title of mid-west's best lady lifter.

THE WEAKER SEX?

By Arthur Shay

JERRY MARTIN struggles with 100 pounds. Men stand by to catch weight if dropped.

WINNER Sweeney gets trophy from AAU official Lucille Kelk — who is a lifter herself.

Look to your muscles, men.

The barbell and biceps cult has come up with a ladies auxiliary. That's right, the gals are going in for weight lifting.

The Amateur Athletic Union (AAU), which for years has frowned at lady weight lifters, broke down a few weeks ago and sponsored a contest in Chicago to determine the midwest's champion lady lifter.

Just to prove it was no joke, the girls were judged by Olympic rules. Each contestant was allowed three tries at each of three standard lifts. These are:

(1) Press—Weight is lifted to shoulder level. With feet flat, knees straight and no body motion, arms and shoulders press weight overhead until elbows lock.

(2) Snatch—A quick lift as the name implies. Weight is snatched from floor and, without any step, thrust overhead.

(3) Clean and Jerk—Weight is

1. Runner-up Doria Van Herik practices with 65-pound exercise weight.

3. Doria, a professional body builder, displays form that almost won.

2. It looks effortless. Weight on the floor is a 150-pound men's set.

Their muscles may not bulge, but ladies, Sir, are weight lifters lifted "clean to shoulders," jerked overhead as legs scissor.

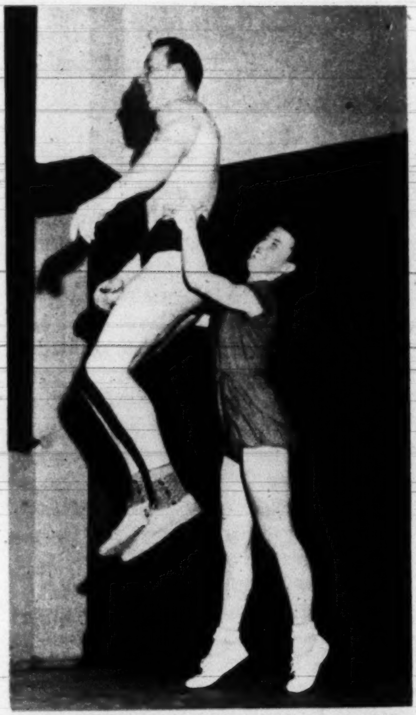
After many a lift, it was 17-year-old Jeanette Sweeney who (see photograph at top of opposite page) "cleaned and jerked" 110-pounds high overhead to walk away with the title.

What Does It Do to Beauty?

Runner-up Doria Van Herik missed out on the trophy but had no regrets. "Weight lifting has changed my life," she says. "I weighed 165 pounds and felt lazy and sluggish. My husband got me interested in weights and I lifted my weight down to 130."

But it remained for a man, Norbert Grueber, editor of Body Builder magazine, to answer the question that worried men.

"No, weight lifting will not make a woman muscle-bound or give her bulging biceps," he declared. "It merely serves to put her body in the fine shape nature meant it to retain!"



BE CAREFUL, men! Champ Sweeney lifts men's champ, 203-pound Ed Heckinger.

REGIONAL AMERICA | What makes one American different from another? Geography plays an important role. Meet another 'regional American'. . .

"They are too stubborn to be governed by anybody but themselves."

What is a Yankee?

WHICH ARE YOU? Yankee, Easterner, Southerner, Texan, Midwesterner? This is one of a series of PARADE reports on people who make up America's great regional groups. The author has lived for many years in New England.

BY DONALD WAYNE

CORNISH, N. H.

A YANKEE, according to legend, is somebody who lives in the New England states, spits, votes Republican and hates strangers.

Whether from Boston or Salem, a Vermont farm or the Maine woods, he has a "Yankee" wit, whatever that is, and a passion for fish chowder and boiled dinners. He is an unfriendly, tight-fisted, tight-lipped, independent stay-at-home, who won't give you the right time unless he knew your grandfather.

'You Lose,' said Cal

Travelers sometimes come to New England expecting to find this caricature, but they're wasting their time. Let's get at the age-old charge that Yankees are unfriendly. This is rubbish. Yankees are practical people who take a man at face value. But they are dead set against waste in any form, and that includes talk. If "Nope" answers a question, why say more–even to friends?

There's more truth than fable in some of the classic stories on this subject. When Coolidge was in the White House his Yankee reserve made headlines. You remember the story about the lady who sat beside him at dinner:

"I have made a bet," she cooed, "that I'd be able to get more than two words out of you."

"You lose," said Silent Cal.

The Yankee sense of thrift is supposed to stem from Puritan ideals. But where the Puritan got it is ostensibly the same place Yankees get it today–from the earth and sky of New England. This is a tight, rugged country that breeds individualists. It is stern and beautiful, with all the moods of Nature, distilling a sense of duty and rigid self-discipline. Mark Twain said that New England does not have a climate, only weather. And if you don't like the weather, he added–just wait a minute. If you can't get a Yankee to talk, just mention the weather.

Yankees Won't Pry

Yankees will talk to anybody, and freely. Most of the reserve is nothing but plain shyness.

They might be curious, but they'll die before they'll pry. Strangers not accustomed to such a fanatic minding one's own business go away thinking Yankees are frozen and unsociable.

mont and New Hampshire, we do plenty of talking. It's a poor day when there isn't a small bull session going on in Tracy Spalding's general store. Comes Spring, and a good Yankee packs off usually with his family to the annual town meeting to have his say. Yankees are too freedom-loving and stubborn to be governed by anybody but themselves.

The source of "Yankee" is uncertain, but its likeliest origin was with the Dutch in New York who referred contemptuously to the English in Connecticut as Jankes, meaning "those guys." There are all types and conditions of Yankees, from Mayflower descendants to French-speaking loggers in Maine.

Reverence for His Forebears

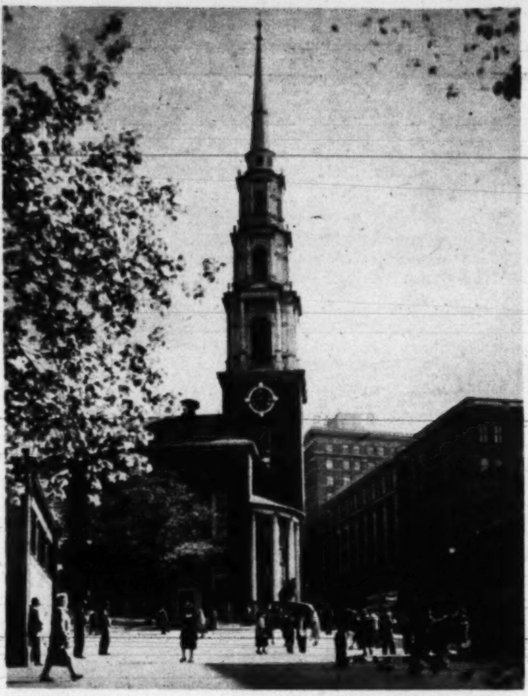
One of the elements that make a Yankee so conservative is a reverence for the way his forefathers lived. This conservative attitude lies at the base of Yankee politics and is the main reason New England has long been featured as a Republican stronghold. Which happens to have a revealing sidelight. The memory of the Civil War–virtually forgotten in New York, Buffalo and many points west–is almost as strong in New England as it is in the South.

New England gave most of its man power to the Union armies and suffered losses from which it–like the South–has perhaps never entirely recovered.

Shellback in Politics

The Republican habit is not, however, what it used to be, as election results of recent times seem to indicate. But in local politics the Yankee is a real shellback. Sometimes his values are ironic. New Hampshire, a tiny state of half a million, has the biggest state legislature in the U.S., probably in the world–over 400 seated members. This is because every town and hamlet is entitled to send its own representative to Concord, the state capital. New Hampshire politics as a result often shows the effect of too many cooks, but the system has its comic virtue. As one of my neighbors wryly put it, "It means everybody can get a chance at least once."

Every Yankee born is gifted with a peculiar brand of humor called Yankee wit. That's the theory. You might find it today, under another name, in South Carolina or California. The native wit of New England, sad to say, is one of the vanishing American glories. It's dying out. Adulterations that have thinned the New England character–like the rise of the factory class and the influence of radio, cars and movies–have made alterations in the Yankee product of humor, which thrived only in the special atmosphere of provincialism. Yet in its pure form it may still be heard in the back country.



THE PAST is hard to forget in New England. To the Yankee, Boston's Park St. Church stands as symbol.

Better Than Rube Comedy

Yankee wit isn't rube comedy, it's better than that. Two farmers met. One said, "Whut you give your hoss fer glanders?" "Croton oil," said the other. A few days later they met again. Said the first, "Whut you say you give your hoss?" "Croton oil," said the second. "Kilt mine," said the first. "Kilt mine," said the second.

A Vermont farmer had cultivated a particularly rocky bit of ground. "You and God have done a very nice piece of work here," the local minister told him. "Yep," said the farmer. "You oughta seen it when God had it all alone."

Yankees are independent cusses, and, as you would expect, have a great respect for schooling. This is a dominant trait and it fetches back to the old days when the first three things New England settlers did were set up a church, a town hall and a school.

Over the New England countryside parade the Yankee ghosts–Pilgrim fathers, tin peddlers, horse traders and swap-artists, minute men, tavern keepers, pirates, sea captains, lawyers, poets, philosophers–Yankees all. A special breed that drew its quality from thunder and frost, from rocks and salt spray.

What is a Yankee? He is all of these and more. In a changing world he is a pillar of security–a reassurance that what we were we still are, and everything is all right after all.

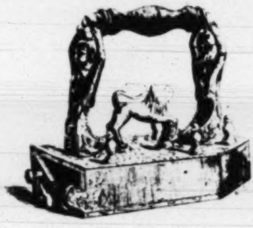
Non-lift iron, three other aids to easier ironing are shown in photograph. See text.



A "sad" iron of the seventeenth century.

Ironing made easier!

With equipment designed for comfort and speed

By DEMETRIA TAYLOR

THE SAD IRON of the past, heavy, clumsy, always too hot or too cold, has become the mid-century glad iron, heat-controlled, lightweight, streamlined for speed and efficiency. Today we know that neither weight nor pressure, but controlled heat is the secret of successful ironing. An iron may weigh less than three pounds, but if it has enough power (1,000 watts), it should do a good job.

Some New Ideas

One manufacturer, who seeks to perfect equipment and techniques for fatigue-less, sit-down ironing, has created aids to comfort and efficiency shown in the picture at the top: (1) an iron that need never be lifted from the board; (2) a four-ounce plastic steam-ironing attachment; (3) a device that holds the cord out of the way, and (4) an ironing board that adjusts to nine heights.

Two modern irons are illustrated. Among others not shown, is one with a large, easy-to-read "pancake" dial that protects fingers and deflects heat.

Still another can be used dry, or as a steam iron, by twisting a knob on the handle. The heat control operates either way. It's important, incidentally, to take full advantage of the thermostat on your iron. Know your fabrics, set the dial accordingly and go ahead, without fear of damaging the fiber.

Along with your new lighter hand iron, you'll want to investigate the new posture chairs on the market. They're not expensive, and they do spare your back.

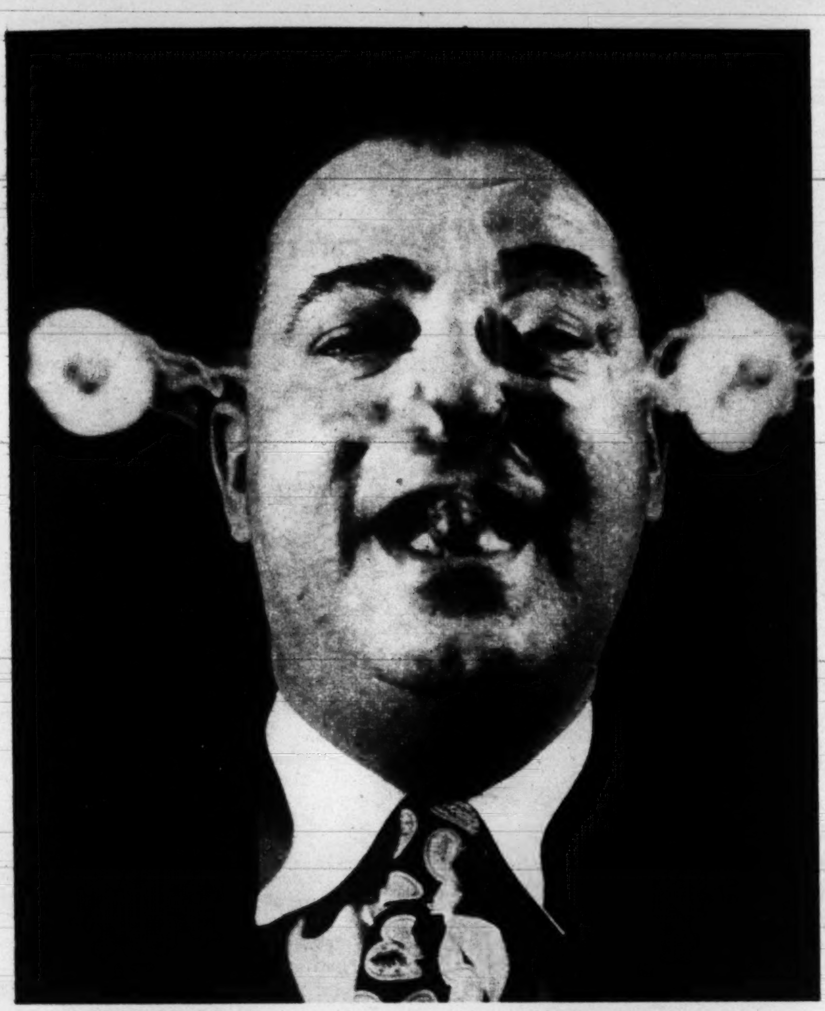
When all family ironing is done at home, an electric ironer makes it a pleasure. Everything from flatwork to men's shirts can be ironed beautifully, while you sit down. The choice of a rotary or flatplate type iron is up to you.

If you're just getting your first ironer, however, there's one thing to remember: don't expect to do your husband's shirts the very first week! Start with simple flatwork, and then as you gain skill you'll be able to tackle the really intricate ironing jobs fast and well.

"Mary Proctor's Ironing Book," newly off the press, is profusely illustrated and shows over a thousand ways to make washing and ironing easier. It sells in book shops and department stores for $2.95.

A THOUGHTFUL manufacturer designed a special model for neglected "lefties."

WITH a rotary ironer like this, or a flat plate, ironing is speedy, sit-down work.



TWIN RINGS, blown simultaneously, blossom as Bert Pichel, smoke ring champ of Cincinnati, shows how he has made an art of puffing.

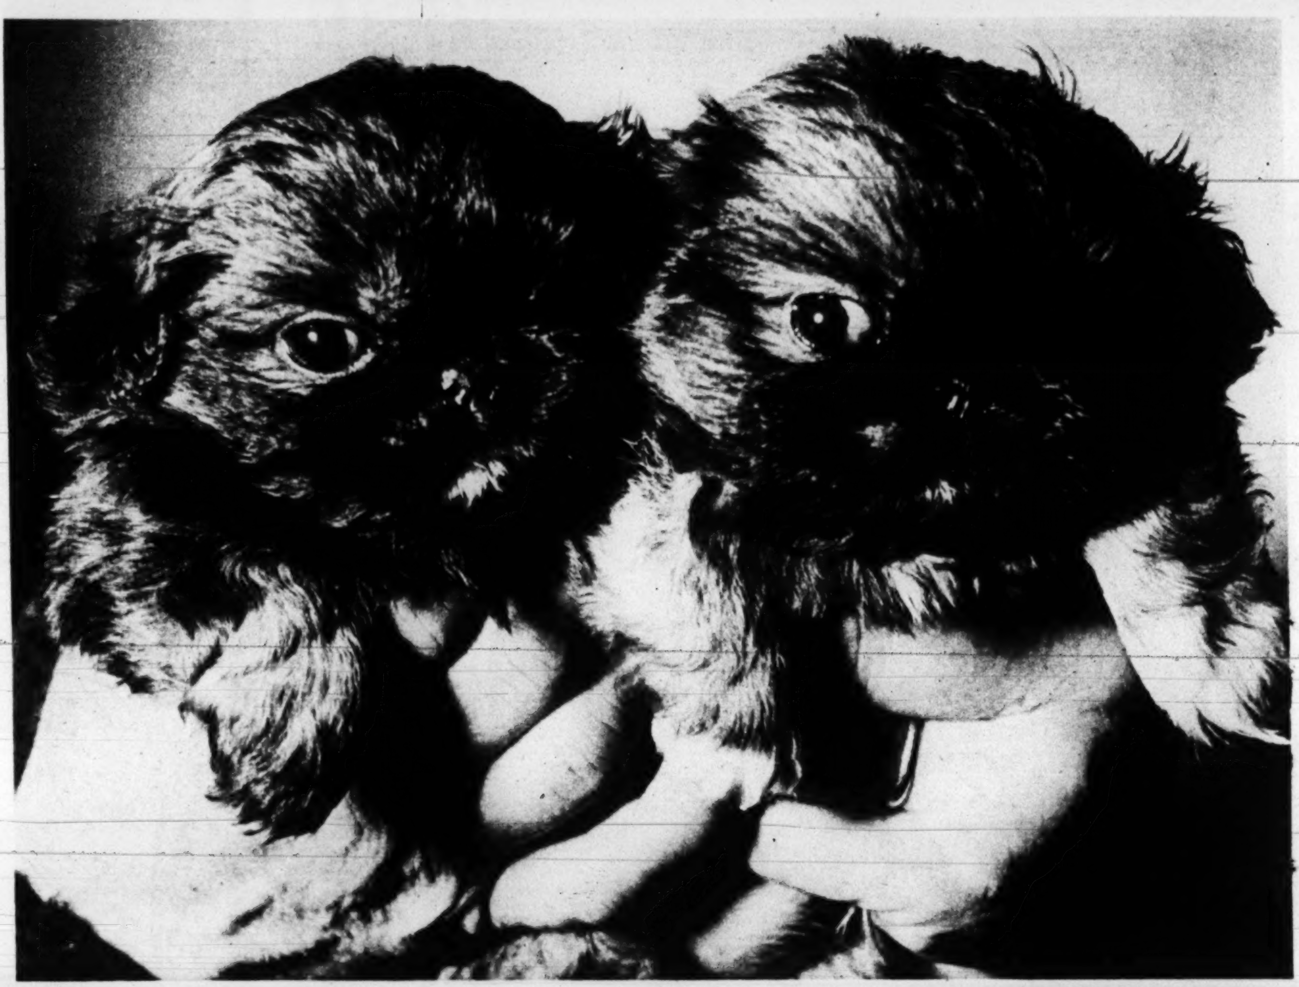
Seeing Double?

Two eyes in a dog photo usually denote only one dog. In the case of this recently-arrived picture from London, the two eyes were on two different Pekinese pups, caught in the act of winking their left eyes together.

Priscilla (left) and Patience were the tiniest (1 lb.) and youngest (6 weeks) entrants in a dog show; they ran away with all popularity prizes.

Their only trouble: They are automatically losing their claim to fame. They're growing.



THEY'RE NEW,
THEY'RE MILD... Extremely Mild

● You hear about it more and more every day . . . this new and extremely mild king-size cigarette—Cavalier. And you'll cheer about it, too, when you sample the subtle flavor of Cavalier's light Colonial type tobaccos. Try Cavaliers today. They're priced no higher than other popular brands.

. . . and your taste will cheer their natural flavor!

A Hy Gardner Featurette

Lucille Ball: from a soda fountain . . . to modeling . . . to Hollywood.

Meet a beauty from Butte—

Lucille Ball

IF YOU ANSWER your doorbell and discover a young cosmetics dealer who looks like PARADE's cover girl, don't be surprised. It undoubtedly will be Miss Lucille Ball in person.

Press agents will stop at nothing, so Hollywood has the carrot-tressed glamor girl re-enacting in real life the role she plays in Columbia's "The Fuller Brush Girl." Particularly for the benefit of news photographers and feature writers, Lucille will go from door to door selling cosmetics.

Close contact with the public is not a new twist for the girl from Butte, Montana. For months, while waiting for a break on Broadway, Lucille was a soda jockey in a Times Square drugstore. She still dots her conversation with expressions like: "Straight Kelly" (orange juice), "City Juice" (water) and "Sweet Alice" (milk).

Lucille left her soda fountain job to work as clothes pony. Eventually she became one of the nation's most famous models.

Then Hollywood beckoned and Lucille embarked on a new career that was frequently heartbreaking. She did bit parts for Columbia and Paramount, finally got a solid role in "Roberta." Then she jumped to Broadway to score in a musical called "Hey Diddle Diddle." Back again to Hollywood, she continued her screen career, co-starring in "Too Many Girls" with Desi Arnaz. They have been co-starring ever since 1940 when they tied the knot at Greenwich, Conn., in what loomed as one of Hollywood's lovey-doviest marriages.

Her Laughs Are Broadcast

For the past three years, Miss Ball has proved herself a topflight radio comedienne in the coast to coast CBS program "My Favorite Husband," heard Sundays at six p.m., EDT.

Casting Lucille Ball to play a role similar to that of Red Skelton in "The Fuller Brush Man" wasn't exactly a coincidence. The Ball of Fire's sense of humor is a lot like Skelton's. Both act out a joke or situation rather than rely on a quip. They get laughs visually as well as orally.

Even away from the camera, Lucille delights her friends with her mimicry and wit. No spendthrift, she says of one mink-and-diamond-bedecked star: "There's a girl who spends money like it's going out of style."

Really, it's like another world with Tampax!

How wonderful to discard pins, belts, external pads—and still have sanitary protection!

Just imagine turning back the clock to the time when you were a young girl—without cares on "those days" of the month! Well, you can almost do it by wearing Tampax instead of the external kind of sanitary protection.... Invented by a doctor for internal absorption, Tampax is made of pure surgical cotton firmly stitched for safety and compressed in slender, white applicators for easy insertion. No chafing, no odor, no bulges or ridges. You cannot even feel the Tampax when in place. Wear it in tub or shower or in swimming. Quick to change; easily disposable. An average month's supply will fit in your purse.... Buy Tampax at your drug or notion counter. Choice of 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

STILL HIDING BEHIND HIS DYED HAIR AND BEARD, STEVE MEETS FEETA-FEETA, HIS FORMER SECRETARY...
FEETA-FEETA DIDN'T BAT AN EYELASH WHEN I CAME IN! I THOUGHT THAT SHARP DOLL WOULD SEE THROUGH ALL THIS FACE MATTRESS!
YOU NEED NOT BOTHER TO ENTERTAIN ME, MISS!
BUT, MADAME —IT IS NO TROUBLE!
MR. GANGLIA AND YOUR HUSBAND WILL BE IN CONFERENCE!.... AS MR. GANGLIA'S SECRETARY, I AM EXPECTED TO MAKE HIS GUESTS COMFORTABLE!.. CREAM OR LEMON?
SHE POURS TEA —WHILE THAT YANKEE RAT EXAMINES THE SECRET MACHINE! I MUST SEE IT!
YOUR GOVERNMENT IS CERTAINLY CAREFUL... IT IS CHARACTERISTIC THAT YOU, AN EXPERT MATHEMATICIAN, SHOULD DEMAND THAT THE MECHANICAL BRAIN SHOULD BE EXPLAINED IN THE SIMPLEST LANGUAGE
OW!—ME AN EXPERT? I EVEN HAD TROUBLE WITH LONG DIVISION!
IT DOES ADDITION OR SUBTRACTION AT THE RATE OF NEARLY 4000 PER SECOND... IT DOES MULTIPLICATION OR DIVISION AT THE RATE OF NEARLY 1250 PER SECOND! AND 'REMEMBERS' WHAT IT HAS DONE...
AT PRESENT IT TAKES LONGEST TO TRAIN THE SOLDIER OR SAILOR WHO CALCULATES RANGE, NAVIGATION AND THE OTHER MATHEMATICAL DATA NEEDED IN WAR...
MACHINES SUCH AS THIS, BASED FAR TO THE REAR, COULD DO ALL THE WORK OF THESE MEN AND TRANSMIT IT BY RADIO TO THE FIGHTING UNITS IN SPLIT SECONDS, WITH NO DANGER TO THE MACHINE!
THEN, IF A SHIP OR AIR CRAFT IS LOST, ONLY THE LEAST TRAINED PERSONNEL WILL BE EXPENDED
I STILL DO NOT UNDERSTAND HOW YOU COULD HAVE BROUGHT THE MACHINE TO THIS CHINESE PORT WITHOUT CAUSING SUSPICION!
THE MACHINE WAS CONSIGNED TO AUSTRALIA, BUT I SAW TO IT THAT OUR SHIP DEVELOPED 'ENGINE TROUBLE' AND HAD TO PUT IN HERE!
THIS IS ABOUT ALL THE DOPE I CAN GET ON THIS TRAITOR BEFORE HE SEES THROUGH MY DISGUISE BY MY IGNORANCE OF MATHEMATICS
FEETA-FEETA SURELY CAN'T KNOW ALL THIS IS A SELL-OUT TO THE IRON CURTAIN BOYS — I'LL GRAB HER AND HIGHBALL OUT OF HERE SOME WAY...
AND NOW, SMRNSK...
...IF YOU WILL GIVE ME THE CODE YOUR SUBMARINE WILL USE AND THE RADIO CHANNELS ON WHICH WE ARE TO CONTACT THEM, WE WILL RUN THE TEST FOR WHICH THIS MEETING WAS ARRANGED...

A PUGNACIOUS CHAMELEON, READY TO DEFEND HIS BASKING PLACE AGAINST INTRUDERS, STALKS ALONG THE TOP RAIL OF A PASTURE FENCE!
NEAR A CORNER HE COMES FACE TO FACE WITH ANOTHER MEMBER OF HIS TRIBE!
REARING ON TIPTOE, HE EXPANDS HIS SCARLET THROAT AND CHALLENGES THE STRANGER...
WHO RUSHES HIM SO SUDDENLY THAT HE IS CAUGHT OFF BALANCE!
TWISTING AND SNAPPING LIKE MINIATURE DRAGONS, THEY WAGE A BLOODLESS BATTLE...
UNTIL THE STRANGER GRABS THE DEFENDER'S TAIL AND GIVES A YANK!
ALTHOUGH UNHURT, THE HUMILIATED CHAMELEON LEAVES THE VICTOR IN POSSESSION OF THE FENCE RAIL, WHILE HE GOES OFF TO SPROUT A NEW TAIL!

IT ALMOST LOOKS LIKE THEY ACTED ACCORDING TO AN ORGANIZED PLAN.
HEY! COME TO THINK OF IT — HOW DID BIG STOOP KNOW WE HAD BEEN COLLARED? ALSO HOW TO REACH OUR CELL AND HOW TO GUIDE US OUT? ...UNLESS...!
UH, HUH! THE TOTALITARIANS ARE IN SURFACE CONTROL OF THIS TIBETAN BORDER TOWN, BUT IT BEGINS TO FIGURE THEY HAVE AN UNDERGROUND TO BUCK.

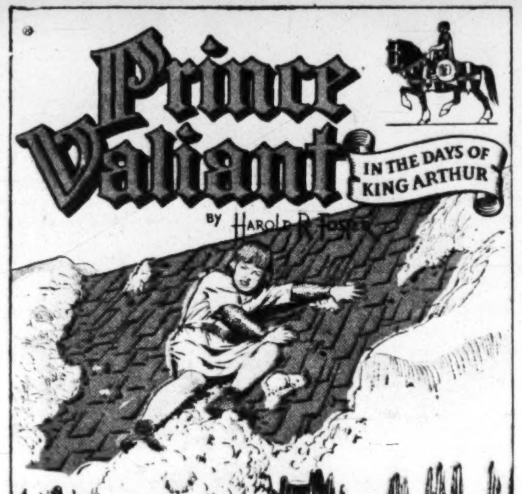
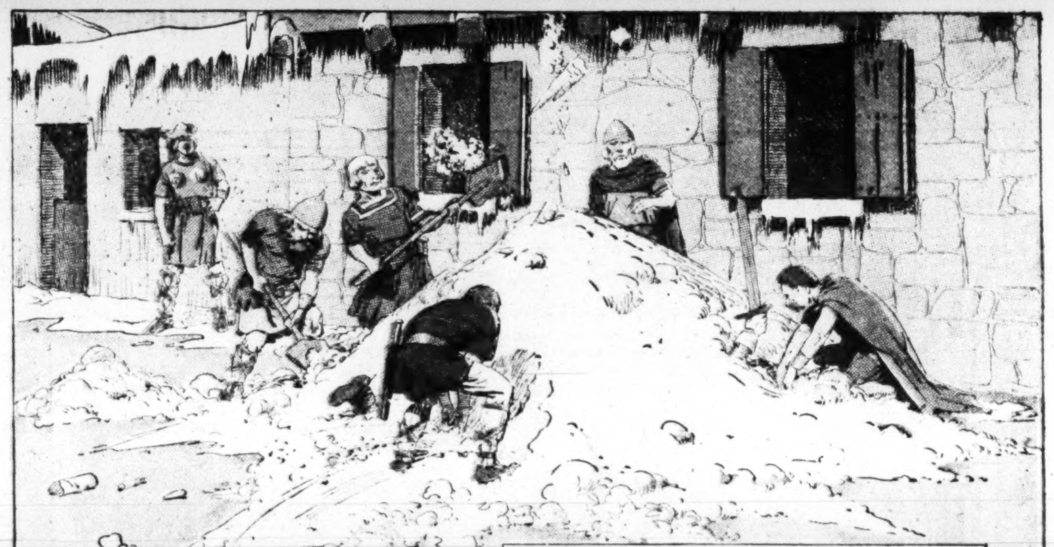
Prince Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

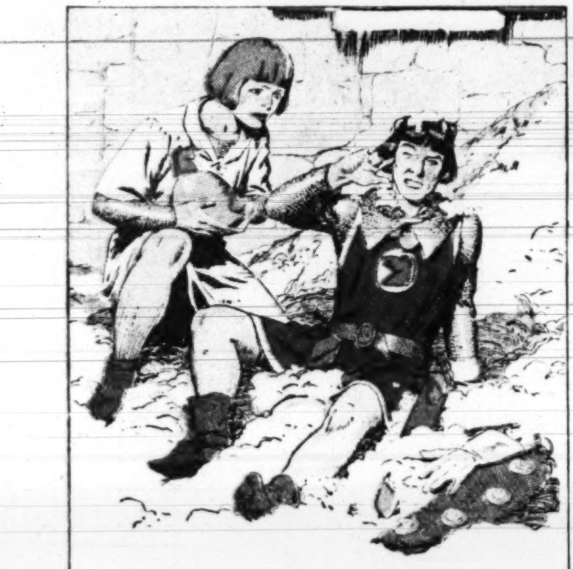
BY HAROLD R FOSTER



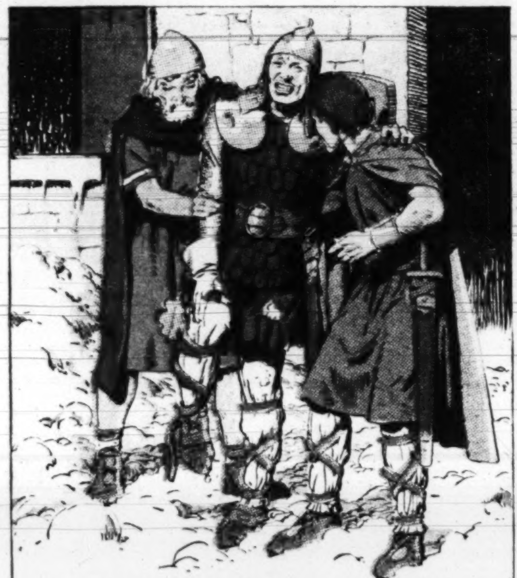
Synopsis : PRINCE VALIANT IS ON THE VERGE OF DEFEAT IN HIS DUEL WITH EGIL AND ARF PRAYS FOR A MIRACLE TO SAVE HIM. NO MIRACLE ARRIVES-- SO, CLIMBING TO THE SNOW-LADEN ROOF, HE CREATES ONE OF HIS OWN.



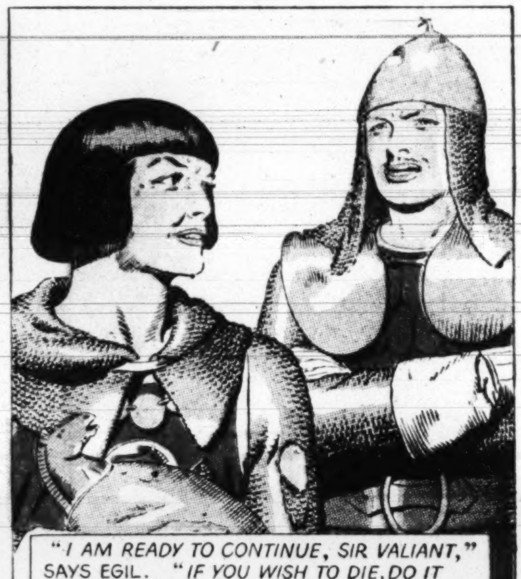
THE SNOW, WET AND HEAVY FROM THE SPRING SUNSHINE, HAS BEEN FIRMLY PACKED BY THE FALL, AND IT IS QUITE SOME TIME BEFORE THE DUELISTS ARE UNCOVERED.



VAL HAD BEEN DROOPING WITH WEARINESS, SO HE HAS FALLEN LIMPLY AND IS UNHURT.



BUT EGIL, MAD WITH RAGE, HAD STIFFENED UNDER THE IMPACT AND SUFFERED A PULLED TENDON.



"I AM READY TO CONTINUE, SIR VALIANT," SAYS EGIL. "IF YOU WISH TO DIE, DO IT NOBLY FIGHTING FOR KING AND COUNTRY, NOT IN A SENSELESS QUARREL," ANSWERS VAL.

VAL SMILES, THEN LAUGHS ALOUD. "IT IS FITTING THAT SUCH A SILLY DUEL HAVE A SILLY ENDING!"

AT THIS MOMENT THE KING IS NOT SMILING. HE HAS BEFORE HIM AN AGE-OLD PROBLEM, SOMETIMES GOOD, SOMETIMES TRAGIC, BUT ALWAYS DANGEROUS. ONE OF HIS JARLS IS TALKING: "THESE STRANGERS HAVE COME AMONG US TO OVERTHROW THE GODS OF OLD AND SET UP ALTARS TO A NEW GOD. MANY HAVE ABANDONED THE FAITH OF THEIR FATHERS TO FOLLOW THEM, AND THERE IS CONFUSION IN THE LAND."

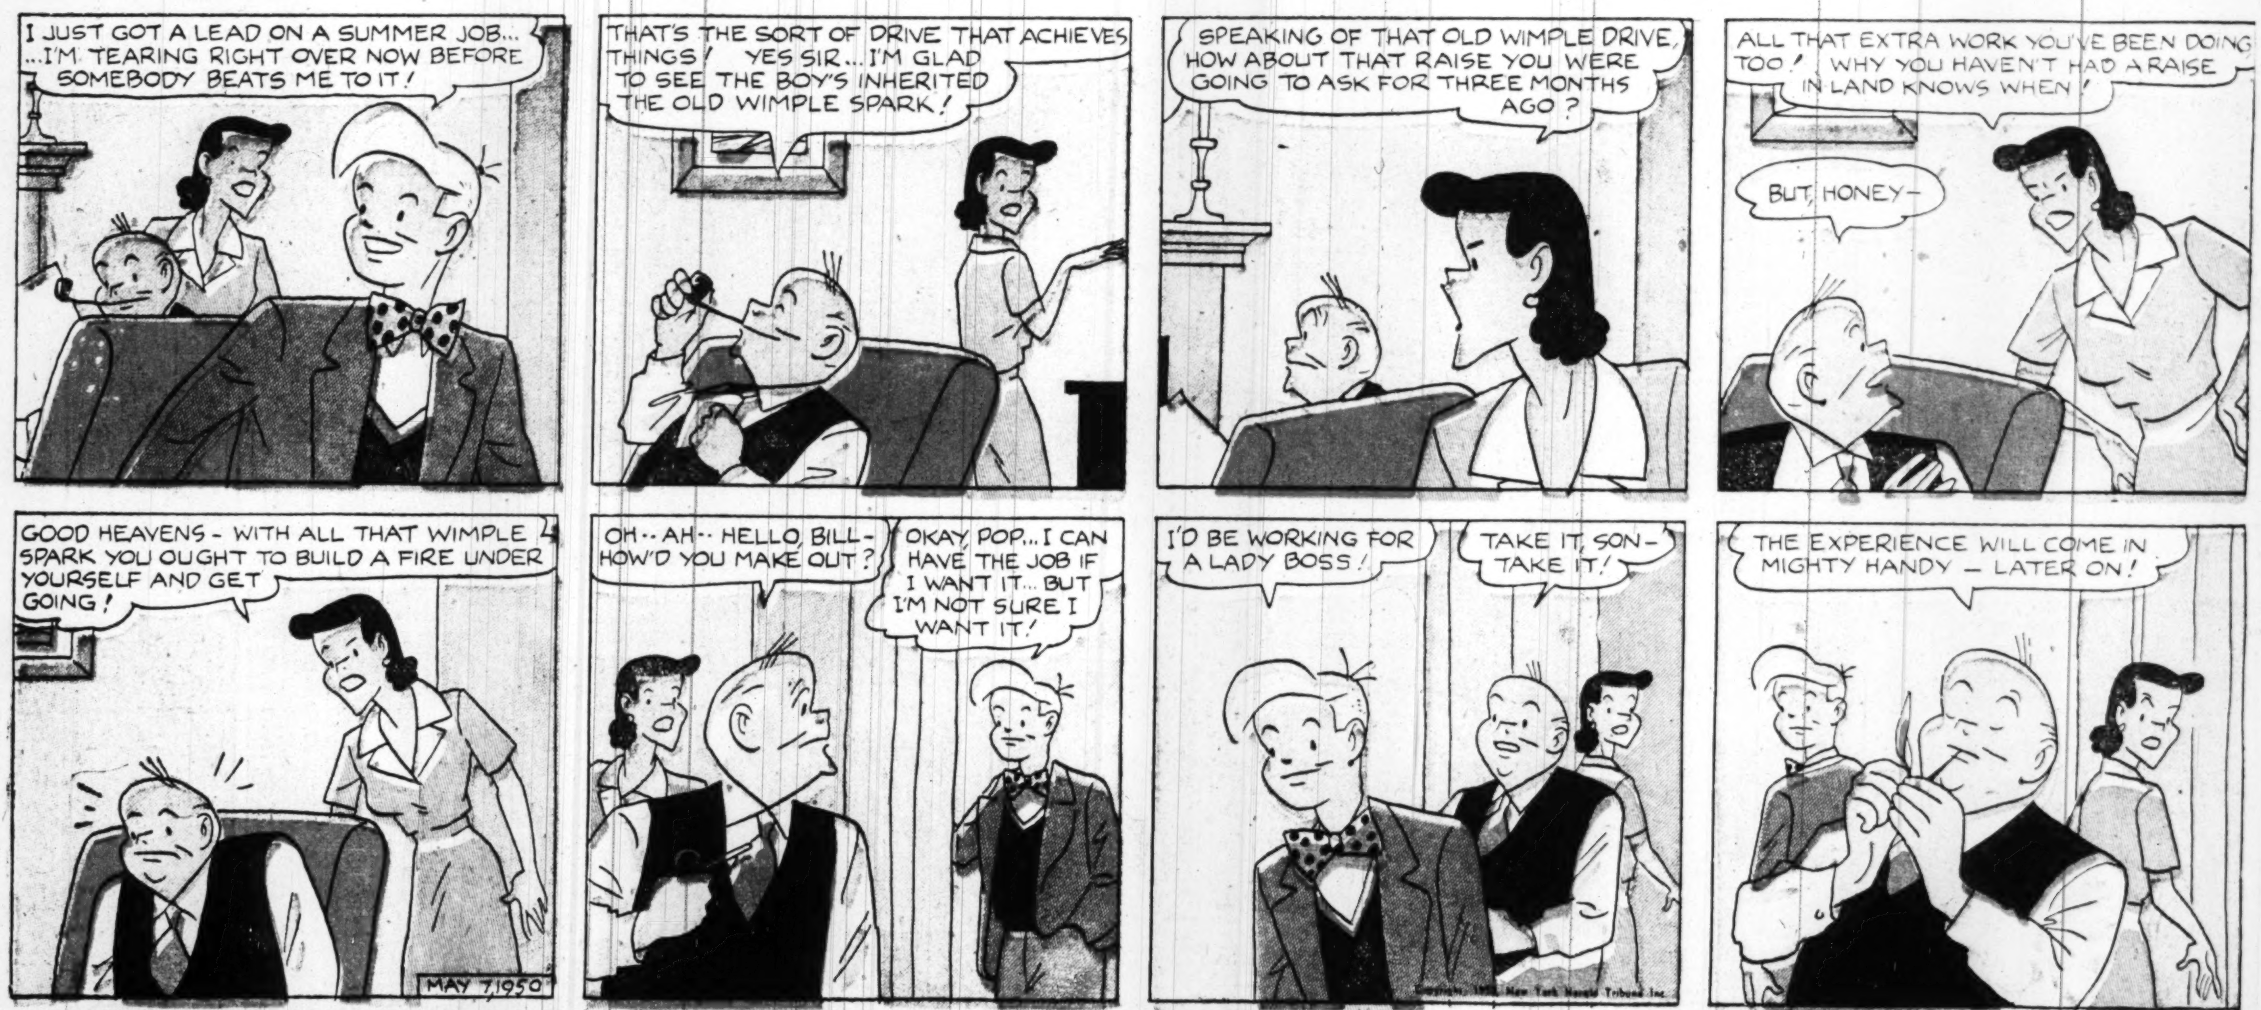
OUR BILL

By Harry Haenigsen



I JUST GOT A LEAD ON A SUMMER JOB... ...I'M TEARING RIGHT OVER NOW BEFORE SOMEBODY BEATS ME TO IT!
THAT'S THE SORT OF DRIVE THAT ACHIEVES THINGS! YES SIR... I'M GLAD TO SEE THE BOY'S INHERITED THE OLD WIMPLE SPARK!
SPEAKING OF THAT OLD WIMPLE DRIVE, HOW ABOUT THAT RAISE YOU WERE GOING TO ASK FOR THREE MONTHS AGO?
ALL THAT EXTRA WORK YOU'VE BEEN DOING TOO! WHY YOU HAVEN'T HAD A RAISE IN LAND KNOWS WHEN!
BUT, HONEY—
GOOD HEAVENS - WITH ALL THAT WIMPLE SPARK YOU OUGHT TO BUILD A FIRE UNDER YOURSELF AND GET GOING!
MAY 7, 1950
OH -- AH -- HELLO, BILL - HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT?
OKAY, POP... I CAN HAVE THE JOB IF I WANT IT... BUT I'M NOT SURE I WANT IT!
I'D BE WORKING FOR A LADY BOSS!
TAKE IT, SON - TAKE IT!

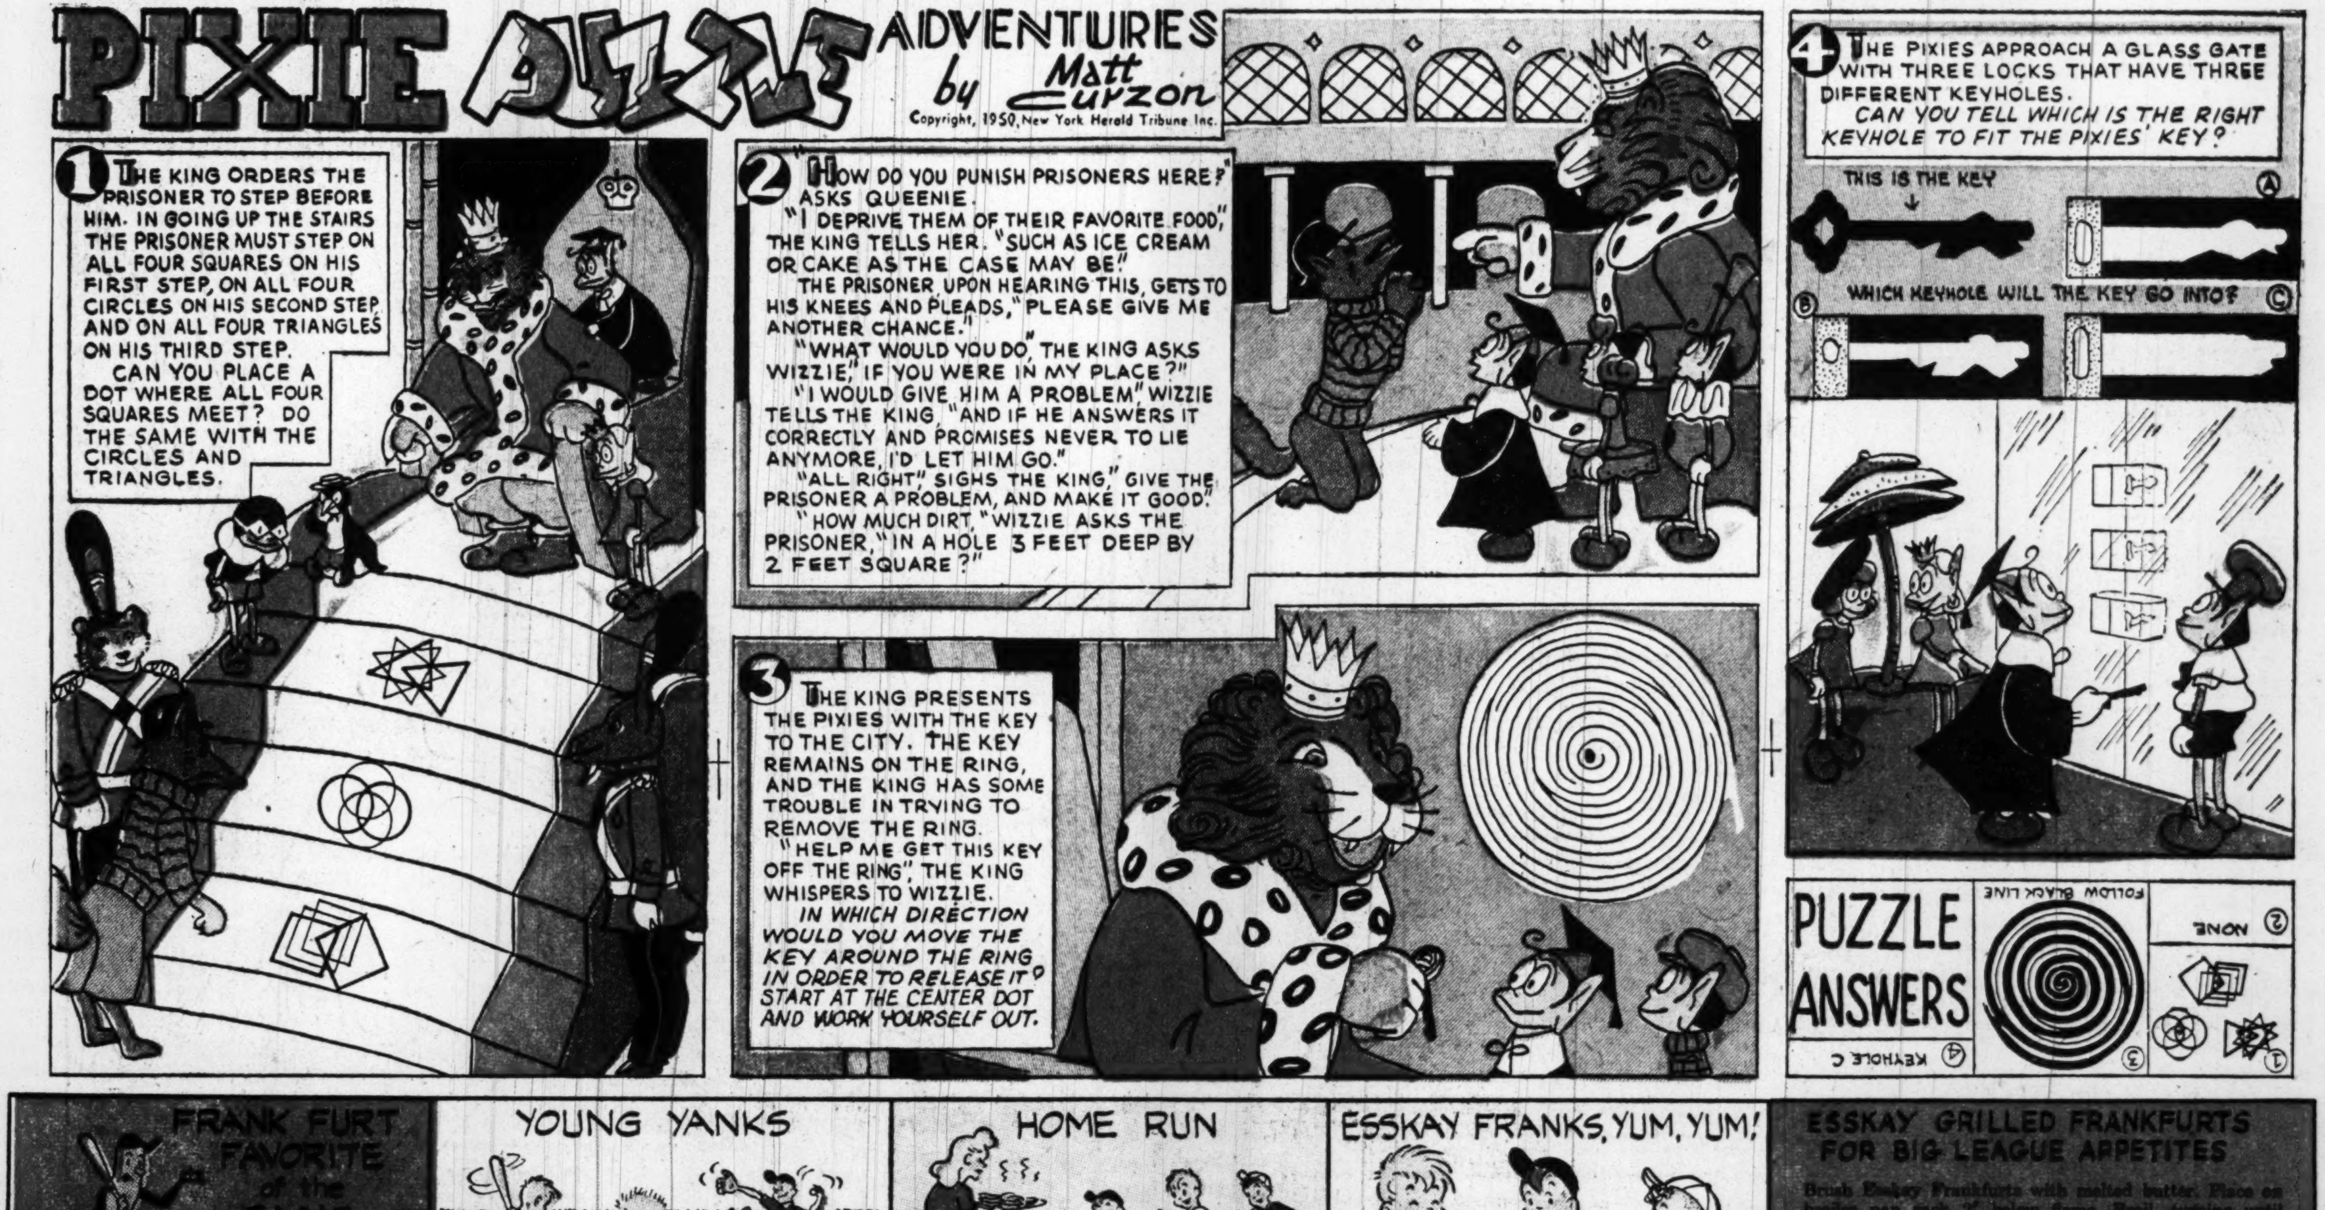
PIXIE PUZZLE ADVENTURES

by Matt Curzon

Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune Inc.



① THE KING ORDERS THE PRISONER TO STEP BEFORE HIM. IN GOING UP THE STAIRS THE PRISONER MUST STEP ON ALL FOUR SQUARES ON HIS FIRST STEP, ON ALL FOUR CIRCLES ON HIS SECOND STEP, AND ON ALL FOUR TRIANGLES ON HIS THIRD STEP.

CAN YOU PLACE A DOT WHERE ALL FOUR SQUARES MEET? DO THE SAME WITH THE CIRCLES AND TRIANGLES.

② "HOW DO YOU PUNISH PRISONERS HERE?" ASKS QUEENIE.

"I DEPRIVE THEM OF THEIR FAVORITE FOOD," THE KING TELLS HER. "SUCH AS ICE CREAM OR CAKE AS THE CASE MAY BE."

THE PRISONER, UPON HEARING THIS, GETS TO HIS KNEES AND PLEADS, "PLEASE GIVE ME ANOTHER CHANCE."

"WHAT WOULD YOU DO," THE KING ASKS WIZZIE, "IF YOU WERE IN MY PLACE?"

"I WOULD GIVE HIM A PROBLEM," WIZZIE TELLS THE KING, "AND IF HE ANSWERS IT CORRECTLY AND PROMISES NEVER TO LIE ANYMORE, I'D LET HIM GO."

"ALL RIGHT," SIGHS THE KING, "GIVE THE PRISONER A PROBLEM, AND MAKE IT GOOD."

"HOW MUCH DIRT," WIZZIE ASKS THE PRISONER, "IN A HOLE 3 FEET DEEP BY 2 FEET SQUARE?"

③ THE KING PRESENTS THE PIXIES WITH THE KEY TO THE CITY. THE KEY REMAINS ON THE RING, AND THE KING HAS SOME TROUBLE IN TRYING TO REMOVE THE RING.

"HELP ME GET THIS KEY OFF THE RING," THE KING WHISPERS TO WIZZIE.

IN WHICH DIRECTION WOULD YOU MOVE THE KEY AROUND THE RING IN ORDER TO RELEASE IT? START AT THE CENTER DOT AND WORK YOURSELF OUT.

④ THE PIXIES APPROACH A GLASS GATE WITH THREE LOCKS THAT HAVE THREE DIFFERENT KEYHOLES.

CAN YOU TELL WHICH IS THE RIGHT KEYHOLE TO FIT THE PIXIES' KEY?

THIS IS THE KEY

WALT DISNEY'S
Cinderella
HER DREAMS OF GOING TO THE ROYAL BALL ARE SHATTERED AND CINDERELLA SOBS DESPAIRINGLY IN THE GARDEN... UNAWARE OF THE MAGIC SPARKLES TAKING SHAPE ABOUT HER...
NOTHING, MY DEAR?
COME NOW, DRY THOSE TEARS ...YOU CAN'T GO TO THE BALL LOOKING LIKE THAT!
WHY... WHY, YOU MUST BE...
YOUR FAIRY GODMOTHER? OF COURSE!
NOW, LET ME SEE... THE MAGIC WORDS..? AH, YES!
AND, AS THE FAIRY GODMOTHER SINGS THE MAGIC WORDS, A PUMPKIN IS TRANSFORMED INTO A GLITTERING COACH!
...BIBBIDI, BOBBIDI, BOO...
LOOKIT!
H-HOW'S SHE DO IT?
OOOH!
AAAH!
IN THE NEXT MAGIC MOMENT OLD MAJOR IS CHANGED INTO A PROUD COACHMAN... FAITHFUL BRUNO INTO A SMART FOOTMAN!...AND THE FOUR MICE INTO PRANCING STEEDS!
AGAIN, THE FAIRY GODMOTHER'S MAGIC WORDS SING OUT... AND DIAMOND DUST SWIRLS ABOUT CINDERELLA'S TATTERS...
...BIBBIDI, BOBBIDI, BOO!
